MYSTERY IN A MURDER

New Jersery Man Is Slain While Celebrating New Year.

Fires Three Shots and Drops Dead—May Have Been Taken for Robber by Pedestrian.

Hackensack, N. J., Jan. 2. — Carlo Paneblanco, a contracting teamster of Fairview, was shot and instantly killed at the moment the new year was being welcomed in as he stood on his back porch after having fired three shots from a revolver as his part in the general demonstration. Paneblanco had just fired off his revolver when he lurched back into the house, whirled around and fell dead.

When Coroner Tracey and Justice Phillips reached the house they proceeded to search the dead man's clothes for valuables. Lifting up the shirt they found a spot of blood and then a bullet hole was found directly over the heart. "This man may have been murdered," said the coroner, and he at once notified Prosecutor Wright and the county detectives. "Either he has been assassinated or he was the victim of some careless person who discharged a revolver in celebrating the new year," said Coroner Tracey, "or it may be that the man who fired the shot saw the flash from Paneblanco's revolver and believed the contractor was shooting at him, returned the fire with fatal result."

PINCHOT SUBMITS COAL LANDS BRIEF

Reviews History of Cunningham Coal Claims in Alaska.

DOCUMENT SENT TO PRESIDENT

Mr. Pinchot Alleges Lands Acquired by Fraudulent Means to Be Worth $25,000,000 and Asks That Patents Be Refused.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Gifford Pinchot has made public the brief that he and his brother, Amos, have presented to President Taft in the Cunningham coal lands. The brief is 10,000 words in length and reviews the history of what Mr. Pinchot declares is a "fraudulent plan to acquire for a single association, public coal lands in Alaska greatly in excess of the amount allowed by law." According to the brief, the area involved is about 5,280 acres and the coal is estimated to be worth at least $25,000,000.

The Pinchot brothers asked permission some weeks ago to present a brief on the Cunningham case before the president should approve the expected recommendatoins of Secretary of the Interior Ballinger that the Cunningham claims be validated. Mr. Ballinger has not, however, approved the Cunnigham claims, but has turned the case over to President Taft with the recommendation that it be put up to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia for approval or disapproval.

The Pinchot brief was filed for the president's information. Much of the evidence presented in the brief is old. The Pinchot brothers charge that the claimants made an unlawful agreement among themselves to defeat the provisions of the United States statutes, limiting the holdings of any one claimant to 160 acres, or any association to 640 acres.

According to the Pinchots, each was to swear he had made entry for his own sole use, when as a matter of fact all understood that after title was secured their interests should be consolidated.

"We believe," say the Pinchots, "that the duty of the executive in regard to the Cunningham claims is obvious and immediate. The record, in our judgment, abundantly proves that the claims are illegal and that from the beginning the claimants have conspired to defraud the government. No resort to a court, or a re-hearing of the case is necessary to secure justice and protect the people's property. The case against the claimants is already conclusive. The claims should be cancelled by the president

"The Cunningham case is of enormous importance," says the brief in conclusion. "It will decide whether many millions of dollars worth of coal lands, one of the richest deposits of semi-bituminous coal on the North American continent, shall be held in trust for the people, or pass forever to claimants charged with fraud, under conditions which make monopoly an imminent probability.

"No transfer of the Cunningham cases to a court for a decision upon the present record would relieve the executive department of responsibility for failure to have the case against the claimants fully presented by attorneys of experience and ability and for omitting to produce all the evidence of fraud available The people of the United States are entitled to a full and reasonable presentation of their case."

D. H. Perkins Reveals Plans for Traffic Development That Will Cost $100,000,000.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—The Chicago Subway, Arcade and Traction company will go before the council committee on local transportation, at its next meeting and ask for the most sweeping ordinance ever granted by any city in the country, it is reported.

The company, according to Dwight H. Perkins, will ask for a franchise to construct a complete system of passenger and freight subways, a complete outer harbor, an extensive system of docks and warehouses and to carry out immediately the "Chicago plan" scheme.

"As soon as the city council or enough members show willingness to grant us franchises for what we want," said Mr. Perkins, "we are prepared to take them to New York and introduce them to the heads of the financial institutions who have agreed to put up the money. We estimate that more than $100,000,000 will be required."

Estate of John Kennedy Valued at $65,659,000, Filed.

MUCH IS GIVEN TO EDUCATION

Charities Also Fare Well by Bequests of the Late New York Banker—Nearly All His Holdings Were Gilt-Edged.

New York, Jan. 2.—The appraisal of the estate of John Stewart Kennedy, the New York banker who died Oct. 1909, leaving large bequests to various charitable and educational institutions, shows that the total amount to be distributed is $65,659,000.

The principal institutions to share in the residuary estate and the sums they receive are as follows:

Presbyterian hospital, New York, $2,858,000; New York public library, $2,858,000; Metropolitan Museum of Art, $2,858,000; Columbia college, $2,858,000; Board of foreign missions, Presbyterian church, $2,858,000; Board of church erection fund, Presbyterian church, $2,858,000; Presbyterian board of aid for colleges and academies, $952,000; Church extension committee, Presbyterian church, $1,905,000; American Bible society, $952,000; United charities, $1,905,000; University of City of New York, $952,000; Robert college, Constantinople, $1,905,000; Charity Organization society, New York, $952,000.

In addition Mr. Kennedy made many special bequests to institutions of various characters. These range from $10,000 to $100,000.

Mr. Kennedy owned $1,175,000 worth of real estate, had $1,675,000 on deposit in various banks, and left personal property worth $725,000.

Most of his fortune was in stocks and bonds. He had 160,000 shares of Northern Pacific worth at the time of his death, $22,280,000; 100,000 shares of Great Northern preferred, valued at $14,000,000; 96,000 shares of Great Northern Iron Ore property, appraised at $7,750,000, and 3,000 shares of Standard Oil, worth $2,000,000. His other holdings included $6,000,000 in bonds, and nearly 30,000 shares of stock in various railroads and banking corporations.

Unlike most men who leave vast estates, Mr. Kennedy owned few worthless stocks. Nearly all his holdings were gilt-edged.

The three executors of the estate divide commissions amounting to $1,954,740. Mrs. Kennedy inherits $15,400,000, and the state will collect a fee of $2,500,000.

BANK FORMED TO SAVE DEPOSITORS

DEPOSITORS TO GET ALL FUNDS

Robin Passes Danger Point After Attempt to Kill Himself Before Being Arraigned on Grand Larceny Indictment.

New York, Jan. 2. — A new bank, formed to take care of the depositors of the Northern Bank and other accounts, will be opened to the public within a week or two, according to several directors of that institution. Officials of the Northern Bank, who did not care to have their names mentioned, said that a plan was under foot and that as soon as the state examiners got through with their work, more particulars will be given.

It was stated, however, that the new institution, if it becomes organized, will have no connection with the Northern Bank further than to try to secure the books of the old depositors, who may get their money in full. None of those who knew of the scheme would give out the names of the backers. They did not deny, however, that some of the Northern directors are going to have a hand in the running of the new bank.

While the affairs of the Northern and the Washington Savings banks are being looked into, the officers are still up in the air as to the results of the investigation. Augustus F. Holly, Jr., a director of the Northern, said that he is quite certain that all the depositors will get all of their money back, and he thought that the directors will get a little of theirs. Martin McHale, a vice president, said that the Northern has about $5,000,000 worth of negotiable paper which can be converted into real money. He too, had a notion that the stockholders would receive something.

Joseph G. Robin, the financier, who tried to kill himself before being arraigned on an indictment of grand larceny, passed a comfortable day in the prison ward of Bellevue hospital. The doctors announced that he was doing well. They were sure that he will be able to go to court on Tuesday to plead to the indictment.

Robin received New Year's greeting from his sister, Dr. Louise G Robinovitch, who visited him in the afternoon. Two trained nurses, whom she engaged, are in constant attendance. This is unusual in the prison ward at Bellevue. A policeman is also keeping his eyes on Robin so that there will be no further attempts at suicide.

THIEVES SENT TO JAIL

Three Young Men Blame Picture Show for Their Crime.

Hold Up and Rob William Kobble of Valuables and Brutally Assault Their Victim.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 2.—After attending a moving picture theater in this city, where they said they witnessed a wild western hold-up, three young men, William Kilpatrick, Paul Swen and Adolph Swen, laid in wait at Bayway and the Long Branch railroad, a lonely spot on the outskirts, for William Kobble of 448 Grier avenue.

Jumping on Kobble they took his wallet, containing two $20 bills, and his watch. They beat him up and left him battered and bleeding on the road. They wore handkerchiefs as masks, but Kobble recognized one and described him to the police and all three were arrested in a saloon, where they were spending their loot. When arraigned before Judge Mahon, the three blamed their evil doing on the moving picture show, but were sent to jail.

"They have arrested him as a spy from Jugendheit, and he is innocent. Save him, highness!"

ARCH HOXSEY AND MOISSANT KILLED

Thousands See Noted Aviators Dashed to Death.

BOTH BIRDMEN ILLINOIS MEN

Moissant Meets Death at New Orleans and Hoxsey Is Killed at Los Angleses—Both Men Held World's Records.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—John B. Miossant and Arch Hoxsey, aviators extraordinary, were killed. Both fell out of the treacherous air with their machines—neither from a great height—and Moissant's remaining minutes of life were so few as to count as naught. Hoxsey was killed instantly. Moissant met his death attempting to alight in a field near New Orleans.

Hoxsey, who went into the air early in the afternoon at Los Angeles lay, at 2:12 p. m., a broken, crushed, lifeless mass in plain view of the thousands who were watching the aviation tournament.

Thus the last day of 1910 brought the total number of deaths of those who have sought to fly to thirty-four, capped the list with two of the most illustrious of aviators, who have been writing the history of aviation in the sky of two continents.

Moissant, a Chicagoan by birth, after an adventurous life in Central America, became interested in aviation in France less than a year ago. He soared into public recognition through his plucky flight from Paris across the English channel to London with a passenger, and later, finding himself without a machine, by buying one from a friend, and within ten minutes, starting on a winning flight from Belmont Park, N. Y., around the Statue of Liberty for a prize of $10,000. A sudden puff of wind caught Moissant within 100 feet of the earth, turned his machine over and a broken neck terminated his career.

Arch Hoxsey, after a year of uniform success with the Wright aeroplane, in which he had come to have a name for fearlessness and competence in the air and in which, within the past week he had set a new world's altitude record of 11,474 feet, and then to show his contempt for the earth had sailed majestically more than 4,000 feet above the highest mountain in California, ran afoul of the same kind of shifty, boiling, treacherous wind when a matter of some 500 feet in the air, and a minute later a horrified crowd aroused from its shock was rushing madly to where a a broken mass of humanity lay beneath a torn bit of canvas and some broken spars.

Both met death in almost the same manner. Each machine was headed for the earth and suddenly seemed to stop, hover in the air, then "turn over" and dive headlong to the earth.

Moissant's machine was a Bleriot monoplane, and in addition to the heavy engine in front of the main planes he had fastened a tank holding thirty-five gallons of gasoline. Aviation experts believe a sudden puff of wind stopped his machine dead in the air and the heavy weight ahead dragged the light framework to the ground. From his position partly back of the main planes Moissant was flipped out clear of the machine and struck the ground on his head, breaking his neck. He died on a flat car en route to New Orleans.

Hoxsey, likewise, was returning from a journey into the clouds. He was within 500 feet of the earth when his machine seemed to stop still, shudder and whirl over and over to the ground. As in the other air tragedy, the rear elevator, rendered useless when the momentum was gone, flipped around helpless to aid the main planes and by the use of the rudder, but before sufficient momentum was gained the frail structure crumpled to the earth. Only a farmer's aid saw Moissant fall to his death, but Hoxsey's end came before the horrified gaze of thousands. Both men were born in Illinois. Moissant in Chicago and Hoxsey at Staunton, near Springfield.

CHAPTER XVII.

A LITTLE FINGER.

THE king of Jugendheit, Prince Ludwig and the chancellor sat in the form of a triangle. Herbeck was making a pyramid of his finger tips, sometimes touching his chin with his thumbs. His face was cheerful.

His royal highness, still in the guise of a mountaineer, sat stiffly in his chair, the expression on his face hardly translatable; that on the king's not at all. He was dressed in the brilliant uniform of a colonel in the Prussian uhlans, an honor conferred upon him recently by King William. Prior to his advent into the grand duchy of Ehrenstein he had been to Berlin. A whim for which he was now grateful had cozened him into carrying this uniform along with him on his adventures. It was only after he met Gretchen that there came moments when he forgot he was a king. He was pale. From hour to hour his heart seemed to grow colder and smaller and harder, till it now rested in his breast with the heaviness of a stone, out of which life and the care of living had been squeezed. He rarely spoke, leaving the burden of the conversation to rest upon his uncle's tongue.

"So your royal highness will understand," said Herbeck, "that it was the simplest move I could make and the safest. Were it known or had it been known this morning that the king of Jugendheit and the prince regent had entered Dreiberg in disguise and had been lodged in the Steinschloss there would have been a serious riot in the city. So I had you arrested as spies. Presently a closed carriage will convey you to the frontier and the unfortunate incident will be ended. And when you cross the frontier it would be wise to disperse the troops waiting there for you."

Prince Ludwig smiled. "It was only an army of defense. The duke had nearly 20,000 men at the maneuvers. I have no desire for war; but, on the other hand, I am always ready for it."

"There will never be any war between us," prophetically. "The duke grows impatient at times, but I can always rouse his sense of justice. You will, of course, pardon the move I made. There will be no publicity. There will be no newspaper notoriety, for the journalists will know nothing of what has really happened."

"For that consideration your excellency has my deepest thanks," replied Prince Ludwig.

"I thought it best to let you go without seeing the duke. The meeting between you two might be painful."

"That also is thoughtful of your excellency," said the king. "I have no desire to see or speak to his highness."

"There is, however, one favor I should like to ask," said the prince.

"Can I grant it?"

"Easily. I wish to leave a sum of money in trust to be paid to one Gretchen Schwarz, who lives in the Krumerweg. She is ambitious to become a singer. Let nothing stand between her and her desires."

"Granted."

The heart of the king at the sound of that dear name suddenly expanded and stiffened. The stiffness went out of his shoulders.

"Ah, this little world of ours! The mistakes and futile schemes we make upon it!" The chancellor dallied with his quill pen. "It was a cynical move of fate that your majesty should see the goose girl first."

"Enough!" cried the king vehemently. "Let us have no more retrospection, if you please. Moreover, I shall be obliged to you if you will summon at once the carriage which is to take us to the frontier. The situation has been amicably and satisfactorily explained. I see no reason why we should be detained any longer."

"Nor I," added Prince Ludwig. "I am rather weary of these tatters. I should even like a bath."

The three of them were immediately attracted by a singular noise in the corridor. The door swung in violently, crashing against the wall and shivering into atoms the Venetian mirror. The king, the prince and the chancellor were instantly upon their feet. The king clutched the back of his chair with a grip of iron. Gretchen? Her highness? What was Gretchen doing here? Ah, could he have flown!

The duke came in first, and he waited till the others were inside. Then he shut the door with lesser violence and rushed over to the chancellor.

"Herbeck, you villain!"

The chancellor stared at the gypsy, at Von Arnsberg, at Grumbach.

"Herbeck, you black scoundrel!" cried the duke. "Can you realize how difficult it is not to take you by the throat and strangle you here and now?"

"He is mad!" said Herbeck, bracing himself against the desk.

"Yes. I am mad, but it is the sane madness of a terribly wronged man. Come here, you gypsy!" The duke seized Herbeck's hand and pressed it down fiercely on the desk. "Look at that and tell me if it is not the hand of a Judas!"

"That is the hand, highness," said the gypsy without hesitation.

The duke flung the hand aside. As he did so something snapped in Herbeck's brain, though at that instant he was not conscious of it.

"It was you—you! It was your hand that wrecked my life—yours! Ah, is there such villainy? Are such men born and do they live? My wife dead, my own heart broken, Arnsberg ruined and disgraced! And these two children, which is mine? Villain, what have you to say? What was your purpose?"

How many years, thought Herbeck, had he been preparing for this moment? How long had he been steeling his heart against this very scene? Futile dream! He drew himself together with a supreme effort. He would face this hour as he had always planned to face it. Found out! He looked at his finger, touched it with an impersonal curiosity. He had forgotten all about such a possibility. A little finger to have stopped the wheel of so great a scheme! Irony!

"Your highness," he said, his voice soft and strangely clear, "I have been waiting for this hour. So I am found [illegible] intends?"

"You speak of God? You blaspheme!"

"Bear with me for a space. I shall not hold you long."

"But why? What have I done to you that you should wreck all I hold dear?"

Herbeck fumbled with his collar. "I have practically governed this country for sixteen years. In that time I have made it prosperous and happy. I have given you a substantial treasury. I have made you an army. I have brought peace where you would have brought war. To my people God will witness that I have done my duty as I saw it. One day I fell the victim of a mad dream. And to think that I almost won!"

"And I?" said Hildegarde, her hands clinched and pressed against her bosom. "What have you done to me, who am innocent of any wrong? What have you done to me?"

"You, my child? I have wronged you greatest of all. The wrong I have done to you is irreparable. Ah, have not my arms hungered for the touch of you, my heart ached for the longing of you? To see you day after day, always humble before you, always glad to kiss the back of your hand! Have I not lived in hell, your highness?" turning to the duke.

"What am I, and who am I?" whispered Hildegarde, her heart almost ceasing to beat.

"I am your father!"

The Grand Duke of Ehrenstein beheld the chancellor with that phase of astonishment which leaves the mind unclouded. What a project! What a mind to conceive it, to perfect it down to so small a detail as a jeweler's mark in the gold of the locket! And a little finger to betray it. In a flash he saw vividly all this man had undergone day by day, unfaltering, unhesitant, forgetting nothing, remembering everything but the one insignificant item which was to overthrow him.

Prince Ludwig took off his hat. "Herbeck, you are a great politician."

"No, prince," replied Herbeck with ineffable sadness. "Had I been a great politician I should have succeeded. Ah, give this to my merit: self never entered into this dream. It was all done for my child."

Hildegarde did not move, nor had she moved since the revelation.

"Hildegarde," said the duke, "you shall become my daughter, and you shall dwell here till the end of your days. I will try to right the wrong that has been done to you."

"No, your highness," she replied. "There is but one place for me, and that is at my father's side." And resolutely she walked to the chancellor's left, and her hand stole down and met his firmly. "My father, I forgive you," she said, with quiet dignity.

"You forgive me?" The chancellor could not believe his ears.

"Yes, father."

Then, recalling all the child hunger in his arms and heart, he swept her to his breast convulsively, and the unloosed tears dropped upon her bright head.

"And who am I?" said Gretchen.

"Breunner, you say this little goose girl is my daughter?"

"I solemnly swear it, highness. Look into her face again carefully."

The duke did so, a hand on either cheek. He scrutinized every contour, the color of the eyes, the low, broad brow, the curve of the chin. Out of the past he conjured up the mother's face. Yes, beyond any doubt there was a haunting likeness, and he had never noted it before.

"But who will prove it to the world?" he cried hopelessly, still holding Gretchen's wondering face between his hands.

"I shall prove it," said the king.

"You? And how?"

"I shall marry Gretchen. I shall make her a queen. That will be proof enough."

"A fine stroke, nephew; a bold stroke!" Prince Ludwig laid his hand upon the king's shoulder with rare affection.

"If you accept her without further proof I, her father, can do no less." And the duke led her over to the king, gravely joining their hands.

"Gretchen!" murmured the king.

"I do not know how to act like a princess."

"I shall teach you."

Gretchen laid her head on his breast. She was very tired and much bewildered.

The duke paced the length of the cabinet several times. No one interrupted his meditation. Back and forth, one hand hanging to the opposite shoulder, the other folding over his chin. Then he paused with abruptness.

"Your majesty," said the grand duke, "I regret that your father is not alive to accept my apologies for so basely misjudging him. Arnsberg, nothing that I can do will restore these wasted years. But I offer you the portfolio."

"I am only a broken man, your highness—too old."

"It is my will."

"As for you," said the duke to the gypsy, "go, and if you ever step this side of the frontier again you will be shot out of hand." He stopped again in front of Grumbach. "I promised to have you shot in the morning. That promise holds. But a train leaves for Paris a little after midnight. My advice is for you not to miss it."

"And my father, your highness?" said Hildegarde bravely.

"Herbeck, your estates are confiscated; your name is struck from the civic and military lists. Have you any ready funds?"

"A little, your highness."

"Enough to take you forever out of this part of the world?"

"Yes, your highness."

"You do not ask to be forgiven, and I like that. You have, perhaps, three hours to get your things in order. Tomorrow you will be judged and condemned. But you, Hildegarde"—

"No, your highness; we shall both take the train for Paris. Gretchen, you will be happy."

Gretchen ran and flung herself into Hildegarde's arms, and the two of them wept. Hildegarde pushed Gretchen away gently.

"Come, father; we have so little time."

And this was the sum of the duke's revenge.

It never took Carmichael long to make up his mind definitely. He found his old friend the cabman in the Platz, and they drove like mad to the consulate. An hour here sufficed to close his diplomatic career and seal it hermetically. The clerk, however, would go on like Tennyson's brook, forever and forever. Next he went to the residence of his banker in the Konigstrasse and got together all his available funds.

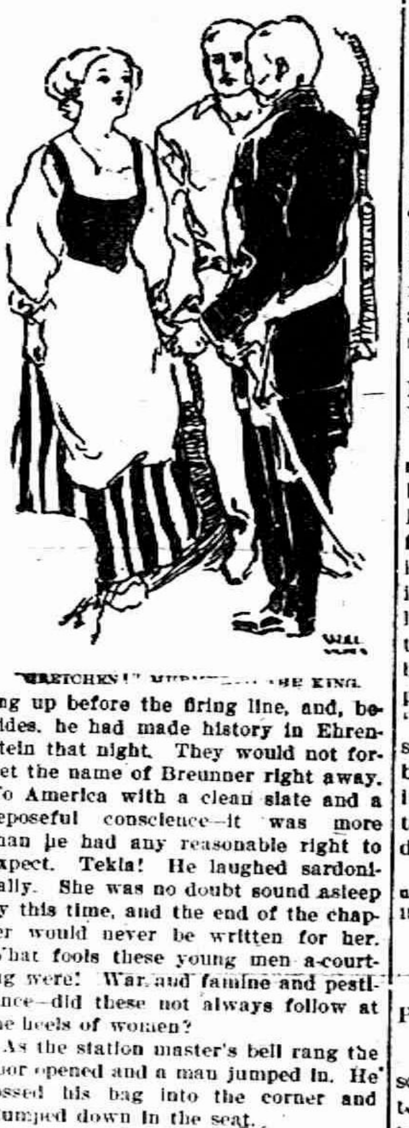
Eleven o'clock found Carmichael in his rooms at the Grand hotel, feverishly packing his trunk and bag. Paris! He would go also even if they passed on to the remote ends of the world.

The train stood waiting in the gloomy Bahnhof. The guards patrolled the platform. Presently three men came out of the station door. Two were officers. The third, Colonel von Wallenstein, was in civilian dress. He was sullen and depressed.

Said one of the officers: "And it is the express command of General Ducwitz that you will return here under the pain of death. Is that explicit?"

"It is." The colonel got into his compartment and slammed the door viciously.

In the next compartment sat Grumbach. He was smoking his faithful pipe. He was withal content. This was far more satisfactory than standing up before the firing line, and, besides, he had made history in Ehrenstein that night. They would not forget the name of Breunner right away. To America with a clean slate and a reposeful conscience—it was more than he had any reasonable right to expect. Tekla! He laughed sardonically. She was no doubt sound asleep by this time, and the end of the chapter would never be written for her. What fools these young men a-courting were! War and famine and pestilence—did these not always follow at the heels of women?



"GRETCHEN!" MURMURED THE KING.

As the station master's bell rang the door opened and a man jumped in. He tossed his bag into the corner and plumped down in the seat.

"Captain!"

"You, Hans?"

"Yes. Where are you going?"

"I am weary of Dreiberg, so I am taking a little vacation."

"For how long?" suspiciously.

"Oh, for ever so long!" evasively.

Hans said nothing more. He was

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer—who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—yet with the help of the REVIEW OF REVIEWS, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little-known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

WASHINGTON LETTER

With the close of the holiday season there is a renewal of activity in the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government in Washington. Barely two months of the life of the present Congress remains, for at the hour of 12 M. on the 4th of March the 61st Congress will expire by limitation. Then nearly 12 months must elapse before the Congress elected last November can assemble and begin the work for which it was elected. This is an exceedingly clumsy arrangement, for it not only puts off till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day, but multiplies the delay by nearly four hundred days. However, let the heathen rage because inasmuch as the remedy must be through legislation, it is almost impossible of attainment.

As measure of prime importance which will be urged by the President the Secretary of War, the Secretary of State and by members and Senators in both houses of Congress, is the prompt fortification of the Panama Canal, especially at its western end. Defenses against modern dreadnought cannot be improvised in a night, and it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of protecting a work upon which so much money has been spent and which is so vital to the protection of the Pacific coast.

The new year opens with the United States at peace with all the world, but the words of Patrick Henry, "Gentlemen may cry Peace, peace, but there is no peace" are just as true now as they were in 1776. There is no peace in the family, no peace in the apartment house, no peace between owners of adjoining farms, and the United States having extended its boarders to Panama, the Hawaiian Islands, the Phillipines, Guam and the Aleutian Islands, is in perpetual rasping attrition with the rest of the world. It might be better if we could give away or sink the Phillippines and let the Japanese poachers have all the seals on the Pribilof Islands and escape quarrels by confining ourselves to antebellum boundaries, but we are in a situation of having and holding and can't let go. Therefore, it is wisdom to strengthen our hold with warships and fortifications.

The physician had taken his patiens pulse and temperature, and proceeded to ask the usual questions.

"It—er—seems," said he regarding the unfortunate with scientific interest, "that the attacks of fever and the chills appear on alternate days. Do you think—is it your opinion—that they have, so to speak, decreased in violence, if I may use that word?"

The patient smiled feebly. "Doc," said he, "on fever days my head's so hot I can't think, and on ague days I shake so I can't hold an opinion."—January Lippincott's.

CHRISTMAS IN FLORIDA

The many friends of the crowd who left Tecumseh for Eustis, Florida will be interested in the Christmas party held at the home of James Lane and wife. There were 29 in the party, the weather was a little cool in the morning so they had a fire but by noon it was warm enough to spread one table on the porch. A three course dinner was served consisting of oysters, and fish and fancy fixins for dessert. After dinner the group was photographed.

A short devotional time then followed, after which the Xmas. gifts were distributed from a fine tree. It was hard to believe from the weather indications that it was Christmas time The churches all had services suitable to the day.

The crowd are all enjoying winter, and will be glad to see Michigan again in the spring.

GRAND OPENING

DECEMBER 31, 1910

Lilley State Bank

After fifty-five years in one location The Lilley State Bank is now completely re-modeled and refurnished and is now in fair condition to run for fifty years more. Saturday was a gala day in town for the opening of the bank which occured in the afternoon and evening of that day. The public were invited to be present and by special request, of Mr. Lilley, the ladies and children had invitations.

Souvenirs were given to each visitor and the small boy was much in evidence receiving a cap and feathers, a la indian, with a musical tom-tom, the gentlemen received the ever welcigar while the ladies had many quaint receptacles for candies in fruit shapes.

The bank itself was fine in all of its appointments, it is finished in Italian marble, mahogany and verdi antique grill work. The greek scroll work on the wall is carried out in the tiling and the lighting fixtures; everything is in perfect harmony.

The chandeliers are most delightful the light is so arranged that it reflects from the ceiling and is soft and pleasing to the eyes.

The various offices are so arranged that while seperate from one another yet can be in direct communication.

A dainty rest room for ladies, a customers room and the directors room are all furnished with mahogany chairs and tables and other accessories

The vault is built seperate from the banking rooms and with a twenty-two inch concrete wall, reinforced with railway steel. It would seem impossible for it to be tampered with by burglars. The safe is one manufactured by the Victor Safe and Lock Co of Cincinnati. The vault front is of solid marble. A second vault is in the basement, used for storage purposes.

With the smiling crowd, the beautiful flowers and bright surrouudings it was a notable gathering. Mr. Lucius Lilley, president of the Bank for fifty-six years, was able to be present and shake hands with his many friends who have missed him from his accustomed place. He will celebrate his 88th birthday, Feb. 21.

We join with the many friends in wishing a prosperous New Year to the Lilley State Bank.

LOVELY COMPLEXION

A Clear Skin and Bright Eyes are Easy to Get-

All the beauty creams in creation won't improve your complexion if your stomach is out of order.

Belching of gas and heartburn mean bad food in the stomach. Bad food means bad blood and bad blood means a bad complexion.

Try MI-O-NA stomach tablets for stomach misery, billiousness, dizziness and indigestion. They relieve in a few minutes; they make rich red blood. They are guaranteed by C. A Wright & Son to cure or money back:

Read what a Kansas woman says:

"I had been doctoring, for a year stomach trouble and found nothing that did as much good as MI-O-NA. I only have the second box and they have relieved all pain in my stomach. For stomach trouble or indigestion MI O-NA can't be beaten. MI-O-NA has done a world of good for me when doctors failed."—Mrs. Cordelia B. Mann, 207 E. 11th St., Junction City, Kans.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—Thomas Higgins.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe back aches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

The End of the Summer

By ELIZABETH ROSE.

"Who could want heaven to be more perfect than a day in June!" exclaimed the man, stretched lazily upon the grass, and he looked up with a sigh of content at the girl in the hammock.

"Who, indeed," she responded, sympathetically. "If it could but always be summer, and June!"

"Always this June, with the flowers and the grass and the green things, and you and I here together," he suggested.

"We should stagnate, and we should grow very tired of each other."

"Not I. I should be perfectly happy if I remained here forever, provided you remained with me."

"I do not agree with you. Happiness itself would become monotonous, and we should long for a discord, just for the sake of a change. We should pine away longing for a good old-fashioned November drizzle. I should wear my heart out waiting for an opportunity to wear my sable furs, and your limbs would become stiff for want of a good ball game, or a snowball fight, and all the other good things that do not belong to June."

"How very practical you are, and at such a time, too!"

"Not at all. On the contrary, I am very romantic; but one cannot live on a continuous diet of sentiment and romance. It is very appropriate and delightful in the summer time, when everybody and everything is glad and happy, but in the winter one needs more substantial things. If it were raining heavily at this moment, and you were cold and wet and tired, would you still be content because I shared your plight?"

"Please don't; I detest the subjunctive. I only know that I want you very badly," he said tenderly. "I need you."

"And yet, a month ago you had never seen me. Singular that your need developed in so short a time."

"Necessity knows no law," he retorted glibly.

"You are flippant," she answered. "I have heard men talk like this before. You are a selfish lot. Unfortunately, I am not a 'summer girl'; I hate flirting and I hate flattery." She rose, with a laugh. "However," she added, sweeping him a courtesy, with a tinge of sarcasm, "I thank you for a very entertaining afternoon."

"Ah, don't go!" he pleaded, springing to his feet. "You will not deny me the privilege of defending myself against such an accusation. Little girl," he said, taking the brown hands in his, "you may believe me when I tell you that I am not flirting with you, nor am I flattering you when I say that you are the dearest, sweetest little comrade, and that these weeks have been the happiest I have ever known, because they were spent with you. With all my heart I mean it when I say I love you, and I want you, not for a 'summer girl,' but for an all year round girl, a girl who can winter it with me in the absence of the sunshine and the flowers and the birds, and who can love and cheer me just the same in the November drizzle, when the skies are gray and heavy, as she can in June, when it is so easy to love and be happy. I really want you, will you come?"

"Am I the first to whom you have extended the invitation?" she asked, saucily.

"The very first, little girl. I have been waiting for you for years."

"Indeed; and during all those years you have never cared for anybody?"

"I never cared for anybody as I care for you. I never loved anybody so much as I love you, and I never thought of marrying until I met you. As the poet says, my heart [illegible] always to give you all the [illegible] And you?" he asked anxiously.

"I have believed myself to be in love dozens of times, and it has been very pleasant for the time being, but I have always outgrown it."

"And you are quite sure there is nobody else now except me?"

"There has never been anyone quite like you."

. . . .

"You are silent this evening. Is there anything troubling you? Can I help you?"

"You are the only one who can," he answered drearily.

"Tell me. You know there is nothing I would not do for you."

He looked at her, half eagerly, half tenderly. "You will think me a cad and a brute," he said.

"You may be assured I shall not. Please tell me."

"You will hate me, but I am going to ask you to release me from our engagement."

The girl's face flushed then paled. She looked into his eyes earnestly for a moment then dropped her own. "Gladly," she replied, looking up with a bright smile. "Do not trouble to explain, I know. You no longer care for me, and you think it would be best."

"You are a mind reader," he said with relief. "How did you know?"

"It is easy to guess what one would like to guess."

"You are glad; you wanted this to happen?" he said in amazement.

"I think as you do, that it is better it should end."

"And you are not angry with me?" he asked doubtingly.

"Certainly not," she answered promptly. "Why should I be angry? I release you gladly. We all make mistakes, and it is better to rectify them when we can before it is too late. I am pleased to be freed from the engagement."

"May I ask if you made a mistake when you said you loved me a few months ago?" he said curiously.

"Did you make a mistake when you told me how much you cared, and how much you needed me? May not a woman also make a mistake? I release you most willingly. What more would you have?"

"But I thought you loved me. I remember your very words; you said you never knew anybody quite like me," and he laughed a trifle bitterly.

"It is true. I never have known anybody quite like you. But things look different to one in the city, without the flowers and the birds and the 'green things.' However, since we have come to an agreeable understanding let us part friends. Good-by?" and she held out her hand.

"You mean it?" he said, taking it in his own.

"Certainly. I am not in the habit of lying."

A week later he returned. "I have come to say I am sorry for what I said last time I was with you. I made a great mistake. I love you just the same, dear; I have always loved you and I want you to take me back. You said you did not care. Don't you think you could learn to care all over again? I love you and I should be miserable without you."

"It is useless," said the girl, "I do not care to enter into the engagement again."

"Won't you come, even if you do not care? You will learn to; you are not like other girls."

"You are wrong," she answered sharply, "I am no different from other girls. We are all alike."

He was silent a moment, then he said slowly, "Tell me one thing; I cannot believe it until I hear you say it. Is it possible that you were flirting with me all the time?"

She drew herself up proudly, but did not reply.

"I knew you were not."

"Mistaken again. I was flirting with you all the time," she said deliberately. "My heart was shedding dead leaves."

"I should not have believed it had anybody else sworn it, but, as you say, you are not in the habit of lying. Then this is the end?"

"Yes."

"Very well. Good-by, dear little girl. That is what I have always called you in my heart—dear little girl. In spite of everything I love you. Good-by."

"And," she whispered brokenly to herself, "I am not in the habit of lying."—Boston Post.

Funerals in Peru.

According to social usage, women in Peru cannot attend funerals, and they do not appear at weddings unless they are very intimate friends. When a funeral procession passes through the streets the coffin is carried upon the shoulders of the pallbearers, who are followed by an empty hearse drawn by two, four or six horses, according to the means of the mourners and their desire for display. All the male members of the family and friends of the deceased follow on foot, with a line of empty carriages behind them. As long as they are in the presence of the dead it is considered a proper and necessary evidence of respect to walk. After the body has been committed to the grave those who attend the funeral are brought home in carriages.

Willing to Help Him.

He had gone to the dry goods store with a bit of dress material which his wife had bidden him to match. "I am very sorry, sir," said the salesman, "but I have nothing exactly like this. The very last remnant was sold this morning."

"But I must have it!" exclaimed the husband. "Otherwise, how can I face my wife?"

"If you will permit me, sir," said the salesman, "I would venture to suggest that you invite a friend home to dinner with you."

Boys Grades the Clergy.

The late Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are 2 kinds of clergymen Bishups recters and curats. the bishups tells the recters to work and the curats have to do it. A curat is a thin married man but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."

It is estimated that London theatre managers have lost during one season no less than $400,000 in the production of plays that have been unsuccessful, and much of this amount on dramatic enterprises imported from the United States.

FALL FROM CAR PROVES FATAL

William Shellfish Dies Suddenly as Result of Injuries.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan 2.—William Shellfish, one of the best known liquor dealers of Kalamazoo, died suddenly from injuries sustained over three months ago. Shellfish fell off a street car and was hurt internally.

He apparently recovered and resumed work, but hemorrhages started and he bled to death in an hour. Physicians say the hemorrhages were the result of the injury he received when he fell off the car.

RESIGNATIONS DEMANDED

Two Members of Pardon Board Hear From Osborn.

PARDON OF MURDERERS CAUSE

Connor and Rumer Charged With Combining With Ex-Gov. Warner to Bring About Release of Ascher and Hayes—Blakeslee, Other Member, Was Against Action.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—Governor Osborn threw his first big bomb when he formally demanded the resignations of Attorney Rowland Connor of Saginaw and Dr. James F. Rumer of Davison, as members of the state pardon board, for their action in combining with ex-Governor Warner to bring about the release of Edward Ascher and Frank Hayes, who were life prisoners in Jackson for murder. Both officials were given forty-eight hours in which to tender their resignations, and it was intimated that unless they complied, charges would be made against them.

Former State Senator Blakeslee of Galien, who is a third member of the board, was not included in the executive demand, for the reason that the record of the pardon board shows that he voted against granting clemency to the men who were freed.

Mr. Connor declares emphatically, it is said, that the record of the meeting was falsified by Blakeslee, who induced the clerk, after the meeting had adjourned, to record him as voting in the negative on the proposition, when in fact he did not vote.

It is claimed, ex-Governor Warner persuaded the two members of the board to release Ascher and Hayes, and it is also claimed he took Blakeslee out of the room at the time so that the two members would have no opposition in the clemency action.

Connor has been on the pardon board about two years, succeeding Judge Kendrick of Saginaw. Dr. Rumer was appointed to succeed Dr. Thomas some months ago, and is a recess appointment.

On the last days of the closing year, Governor Fred Warner and the pardon board capped the Warner administration by announcing that they had commuted the sentences of six life prisoners, three of whom were released immediately on parole.

The convicts receiving clemency are:

Edward C. Ascher, Detroit, sentenced for life to Jackson prison in 1898 for killing Valmore C. Nichols.

Frank H. Hayes, sentenced to Jackson prison for the murder of Fred H. Kelley in 1892, at Caldwell's drug store, 242 Grand River avenue.

"Black Bart" Reimund Holzhay, noted highwayman of the upper peninsula. Sentenced to life in Marquette prison in 1889 for the murder of A. E. Fleischbein, a Chicago banker, near Lake Gogebic.

John Boyd, Grand Rapids, lifer at Jackson prison for murder. Sentence commuted so that he will be released in two years.

Clarence Benjamin, serving a life sentence for murder from Lapeer county, commuted to thirty years. Has served ten years and will be released in 1913 on parole.

John Butcher, serving a life sentence for murder from Eaton county, sentenced in 1893, conditionally pardoned, to be released in 1913.

George Ely, sent up for burglary from Berrien county in 1906, conditionaly pardoned, to be set free next month.

Frank Restrick, sent up from St. Clair county in 1908 for fifteen years for perjury, conditionaly pardoned, to be set free in January.

DESPERADOES DIE FIGHTING

Two Men Hold 1,500 London Police at Bay For Ten Hours.

London (Special).—A street battle was witnessed in the East End of London, at a spot within a mile and a half of the Mansion House and even nearer the Tower of London. There are now lying in the mortuary of the London hospital, only a couple of hundred yards from the scene of the astonishing action, the charred remains of two men, who for more than ten hours held at bay a hundred picked guardsmen and 1,500 London police, and then perished unpunished. The home secretary himself and thousands of people watched the amazing spectacle hour after hour to its dramatic close. The dead men are believed to be two desperadoes known as "Dutch Fritz" and "Peter the Painter."

The men are supposed to be part of a gang of desperadoes that murdered three police officers a couple of weeks ago. They were located in the house, and the police, yesterday, attempted to capture them. They opened fire on the officers, and during the battle wounded many policemen and civilians. When the fighting got to hot for the desperadoes, they fired the building and perished in the flames.

Mich. Third in Copper Production.

Washington.—The activity in the production of copper, zinc and lead from primary sources in the United States was greater in 1909 than in any previous year. The total output of copper from smelters was 1,092,951,624 pounds. The total quantity of refined copper produced by all methods, including both domestic and foreign ores, was 1,391,021,454 pounds, an increase of 253,059,046 pounds over the previous year. In the production of copper Montana led all states, with Arizona second, Michigan third and Utah fourth. The United States produced 36 per cent of the lead of the world and 30 per cent of the zinc.

Big Fire in Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma City, Okla. (Special).—Several buildings were destroyed by fire here Monday night. Water in the mains was frozen and made fire fighting extremely difficult. A high wind was raging, also, and spread the flames rapidly.

MOISANT AND HOXEY PLUNGE TO DEATHS

America's Two Foremost Aviators Die on Same Day.

John B. Moisant and Arch Hoxsey, American aviators, were killed Saturday. Both fell out of their aeroplanes.

Moisant met his death at 9:55 a. m., attempting to alight in a field a few miles from New Orleans, La. Hoxsey, who went into the air early in the afternoon at Los Angeles, fell to his death in view of the thousands who were watching the aviation tournament in the California city.

Thus, the last day of 1910 brings the total number of deaths of aviators during the year to twenty-three.

MOISANT FALLS TO DEATH NEAR NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans (Special).—John B. Moisant, the hero of the Paris to London and return flight with a passenger, and winner of the $10,000 race around the statue of liberty, was killed here by a fall from his aeroplane.

Moisant's death came as he was about to make the flight of his life in an attempt to break the world distance record made by Maurice Tabuteau, who covered 362.66 miles in 7 hours and 45 minutes.

While preparing to make a landing on a special field selected for the contest, twelve miles west of New Orleans and along the east coast of the Mississippi river, Moisant was thrown from a Belriot monoplane and landed on his head. His neck was broken by the fall. Otherwise there was not a bruise on his body.

ARCH HOXSEY PLUNGES 563 FEET TO HIS TRAGIC DOOM

Los Angeles (Special).—Arch Hoxsey, in a Wright biplane, fell 563 feet to his death before a crowded grandstand and in front of the hangar where his flag floated more proudly than those of his rivals to show how he won the title of king of the airmen by breaking the record for altitude last Monday.

He had risen to a height of 7,000 feet or more, and was descending, when a trecherous air current caught his machine and turned it over and over until it struck the ground. It was mashed to bits, and Hoxsey's body was extricated from the wreckage in a mutilated condition.

William Corey Resigns.

New York (Special).—William Ellis Corey has resigned the presidency of the United States Steel corporation. The resignation is to take effect at the pleasure of the board of directors. It is probable that no successor will be formally chosen, the powers of the position falling to Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors.

BAKER ELECTED SPEAKER.

Cheboygan Man Wins Over Warner by Vote of 59 to 23.

Lansing, Mich., Jan 4.—Herbert F. Baker of Cheboygan has been elected speaker of the house of representatives over D. G. F. Warner of Leelanau by a vote of 59 to 23. There were three absent from the caucus, and both candidates refrained from voting.

Baker made a very brief speech, thanking his colleagues for the confidence they had reposed in him, and Representative Warner followed with some humorous allusions to his defeat.

The results of the elections in both branches of the state legislature follow:

The House.

Speaker—Herbert F. Baker, Cheboygan.
Speaker pro. tem.—John M. Perry, Tustin.
Clerk—Paul King, Lansing.
Sergeant-at-arms—A. A. Bush, Detroit.
Assistant postmaster—Fred H. Myers, Manton.

The Senate.

President pro. tem.—Senator Fred Kline, Addison.
Secretary—E. V. Chilson, Lansing.
Sergeant-at-arms—H. D. O'Keefe, Port Huron.
Postmaster—Rev. J. A. Sprague, Kalamazoo.

INAUGURATION WAS SIMPLE AFFAIR

Osborn Begins Administration in Unostentatious Manner.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 3.—Chase S. Osborn of Sault Ste. Marie became governor of the state of Michigan shortly after noon Monday. The oath of office was administered by Chief Justice R. C. Ostrander in the senate chamber, and the simplicity of the ceremony added to the dignity of the occasion.

There was an entire absence of gold lace, and the formalities lasted but a few minutes.

The senate chamber and galleries were filled with ladies and gentlemen, including many personal friends of the new governor, and the state officers. Governor Warner was also present. He remained in the background during the ceremonies and then walked up to his successor and congratulated him.

Without question the most delighted spectator was Governor Osborn's aged mother, now eighty-five years old, who was given a seat quite near her son so that she would be able to hear and see everything that went on.

The thrill of the occasion was furnished by Battery A, M. N. G. artillery, which was stationed in front of the capitol with four guns. A telephone wire was strung from the ground to the senate chamber, and the moment the oath was finished Captain Vandercook gave the order to fire, the four guns alternating.

Many crowded forward to congratulate the new chief executive, but as soon as possible he made his way to the governor's parlors, where a reception line was formed with the state officers and justices of the supreme court in the receiving line.

Governor Osborn and his family, being unable to rent a house, were obliged to secure quarters in the Downey House.

Governor Osborn announced his personal staff as follows: Private secretary, Major W. R. Oates, Houghton; executive clerk, M. H. Defoe, Charlotte; stenographer, Clarence M. Dudd, Lansing; stenographer to the pardon board, Miss M. Hadrick, who has been the governor's private secretary for a number of years; messenger, Dennis J. Farrell, Cheboygan.

Mich.'s Auto Show Nears Completion.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 3.—The preparations for the Detroit Automobile Dealers' association big auto show, at Wayne Gardens during the week of Jan 16, are being pushed forward rapidly. Many dealers were disappointed in getting space, and much money was returned by the management to the laggards. Many parties are being made up in up-state cities to take in the affair, and it is expected that the number of out-of-town visitors will be greater than ever before.

Two Robbers Hold Up 100 Persons.

Ogden, Utah (Special).—Southern Pacific train No. 1, westbound, was held up by two masked robbers at Rees, nine miles west of here. William Davis, negro porter, was shot and instantly killed, and another porter was mortally wounded. A passenger was slightly wounded. One hundred passengers on the train were relieved of their valuables.

Reception Breaks All Records.

Washington (Special).—President Taft's second New Year's reception was held Monday. Exactly 5,625 persons filed past the president and Mrs. Taft in two hours and a half. This beats the record of last year by fifty.

Another Carnegie Hero Fund.

Berlin (Special).—Andrew Carnegie has given $1,250,000 to establish a hero fund in Germany. This is the fourth hero fund established by Mr. Carnegie.

Clapp Will Succeed Himself.

St. Paul, Minn.—At a caucus of Republican members of the state legislature, Senator Moses E. Clapp was unanimously indorsed as his party's candidate to succeed himself in the United States senate. This insures Clapp's re-election.

DAVILLA IS IN GRAVE DANGER

Revolutionists Are Marching to Overthrow Houduras' President.

BONILLA HEADS THE REVOLT

Former Ruler Has Proclaimed Himself Constitutional President of Republic, and Government Troops Are Deserting and Rallying to His Standard in Large Numbers.

New Orleans (Special).—Re-entering the country over which he formerly ruled and from which he was practically banished after being deposed three years ago, Manuel Bonilla has proclaimed himself "constitutional president of the republic of Honduras."

Puerto, Cortez (Special).—With the arrival of Manuel Bonilla and Gen. Lee Christmas near this city, the revolution against President Davilla of of Honduras is well under way.

Bonilla has sent a large force against the garrison here, and this port is practically in the hands of the revolutionists. The soldiers of the government deserted in large numbers to Bonilla.

Part of the force arriving with Bonilla and Christmas has been sent on towards this capital as a reserve force to the main army which is expected to arrive here inside of a week. The army is advancing by easy stages and putting to rout all opposition.

That an attack will be made by land and sea on this city within a few days is confidently believed. The gunboat Hornet, in the hands of the revolutionists, has been sighted off the harbor.

From all indications the government intends to make a strong fight, but there is grave doubts as to the loyalty of the troops.

That President Cabrera of Guatemala, the most prosperous of Central American states, has broken the Washington convention and all neutrality laws is indicated by the fact that Bonilla and Christmas picked up most of their men on Guatemalan soil. Their boat, the Hornet, called at several Guatemalan ports. That Bonilla will win seems almost assured.

440 IN CONGRESS.

Membership Will Be Increased as Result of 1910 Census.

Washington (Special).—The tables compiled by the census bureau for the use of congress in enacting a reapportionment law have come from the printer. The house census committee will hold a meeting Friday, the day after congress re-convenes, to start the ball rolling, the present determination being to put the legislation through at this session.

It is settled in advance that the reapportionment will be so conducted as not to decrease the present representation being held by any state. To do this the census bureau figures that the total membership must be raised to 440. The present membership is 391.

If the membership is increased to 440, Michigan will be entitled to an additional congressman, bringing the Wolverine state representation in Washington up to fourteen.

"CUPPY" GROESCHOW

Victim of Sad Accident.

"Cuppy" Groeschrow a well known ball player among Tecumseh people met with a most painful accident at the Peerless Fence factory in Adrian Monday evening. He had not been at work for some time but Monday evening began work for the winter. About five o'clock his left arm in some manner became caught in the machinery and the elbow and lower arm was terribly crushed. He was taken at once to the Adrian hospital and Dr's Stephenson and Seager were called. Amputation seemed nesscessary, and the arm was taken off between the elbow and shoulder. He was reported as resting as well as could be expected after such a shock.

Mr. Groeschow has been manager of the Terre Haute team of the Central league for the past two years and is very popular with the fans. He signed with the Utica, N. Y. league for the coming season. He began playing ball in Adrian and was at one time connected with the Tecumseh team. His many friends will join in sympathy for his sad accident and baseballdom will regret the fate that robs them of one of their stars.

SPECIAL COURSE OF SERMONS ON THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE

At the Methodist Episcopal church, beginning with next Sunday morning Rev. G. N. Kennedy will deliver a course of addresses on the devotional life. The subjects and dates follow:

Jan. 8, 10 a. m. "Prayer, does it profit"
Jan. 15, "Prayer, If Ye abide"
Jan 22, "The Pharisees Prayer"
Jan. 29, "Prayer, an answer"
Feb. 5, "The Secret of Power"
Feb. 12, "The power in a whisper"
Feb. 19, "The transmuted life"
Feb. 26, "The power of an endless life"

The congregation will enjoy these subjects because they are calculated to feed and encourage the religious life, but a special invitation is extended to the non-church going people, because the very vital principles of religion are to be treated from the standpoint of the most recent knowledge and faith. There are many people in every community who are still discussing ideas the church left behind twenty-five years ago, because they stopped going to church then.

This will be a good opportunity to see where the church stands now.

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 30 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer—who died poor and broken down. That duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 20 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—yet with the help of the Review of Reviews the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

LETTER FROM BENSON, ARIZ.

INTERESTING ARTICLE FROM A FORMER RESIDENT OF TECUMSEH

Benson, Arizona.

To the Editor of the Tecumseh Herald.

Dear Sir and Friends of the Herald: It has been amusing to read the letters in your paper from W. P. Stocking of Long Beach and H. Wilson of Tecumseh, as they do not agree on the conditions and climate of California and as I have traveled Southern California over for two years and made a study of its habits and doings, I will have to referee in favor of Mr. Wilson.

Now if you kind readers will notice in Mr. Stocking's letter all he boasts of is climate. If he calls Long Beach a good one he has another guess coming as every morning it is foggy until about 10 o'clock and damp and cold and then the wind commences to blow as Mr. Wilson says and it blows the alkali dust until it is almost impossible to see. It covers your clothes and fills your house with the worst kind of dust.

Of course it don't freeze in Long Beach or Los Angeles but you feel the cold just as much as you do in Michigan; wear the same clothes and have your house warmed with coal at $15 a ton. Now can you tell the difference if you pay $30 for coal enough to last you all winter in Los Angeles or $30 for enough coal to last you all winter in Michigan?

That country is made up of grafters and boosters. The grafters are the real estate men selling you nothing for something. They sell you an acre of land for $1000, without water, covered with white sediments which denotes alkali in any country.

As you readers all know what alkali land is, I will not try and explain, but the land of California and its price brings back to my mind the old Bohemian oat scheme in Michigan. You buy ten bushel of oats at $10 per bushel and it will sell you 20 bushel next year; you buy one acre of land at $1000 per acre now and they will get you $1200 per acre next year—they find a sucker from the East who will give you $1200 for it. That is the principal that Southern California is worked on.

The Los Angeles papers tell you of the manufactories in their city and to tell you readers the truth I will name some of them—the Southern Pacific Railroad shops is the largest and they employ 650 men; the Lewylen Iron Works, 350 men and possibly 25 shops which employ from 5 to 25 men. I can tell you the largest manufactory that Southern California has is the Tourist Crop of the East which the Los Angeles Examiner and the Times grind out in their editorials. Why, the Times even had nerve to compare Los Angeles with Chicago Now, wouldn't that look absurd to any person that has been in Chicago?

As I have been in Arizona something like four months and lived in its climate, I can state by actual experience that they have the finest climate in the United States—that is for winter. There are no fogs, no rainy weather, every day bright sunshine and warm; don't have to have fires in your stoves in the day time; nights cool, air dry, which makes it healthy; water pure as it comes from 800 to 1000 feet from Mother Earth

The population is composed of Mexicans, Chinamen and Indians Mining of all kinds, copper, lead, silver and gold in paying quantities; game of all kinds, deer, bear, goat, quail, prairie chicken and jack rabbit are in abundance.

Now, kind readers, don't think I am trying to be a knocker of the west or any parts of it. I am only telling you the facts of Southern California and part of the west that comes under my observation in my travels of 12000 miles in the last few months.

Hurrah for Michigan! with all its manufactories, its golden fields and prosperity in all lines of business. Just forget the climate of the West, kind readers, for whatever country you are in you will put up with hardships of one kind or another that will over come the cold winter winds of Michigan.

They tell you to go west and all you have to do is to pick money off the trees, but it is not so for it is the hardest place to get money in the United States if you have not a trade of some kind.

If any readers of the Herald would like any information about Arizona, I would be only too glad to give them all information I can of the western country that I have traveled if they will write me at my address.

Yours Respectfully,
George Graves,
Benson, Arizona.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910. "I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve.—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fa[ult].

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and larger size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe back aches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

Washington—A marked falling off in the production of gold in Alaska, due to the failure of the placer mines in the Fairbanks and Seward peninsula districts, is reported in the preliminary statement of the geological survey on Alaska mining conditions for 1910.

El Paso, Tex.—A special to the Times from its correspondent in Chihuahua, says: "Luque's relief column has encountered four days fierce fighting near Casa Colorado, and its loss is 600 men killed. The insurrecto loss is slight. The column is badly demoralized. Navarro's command is still bottled up near Mal Paso."

FOREIGN.

Ottawa—A government report shows a decrease in the value of field crops grown in Canada last year of $25,806,000. The total value is $507,158,500. The decrease was due to drought and heat in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Sydney, B. C.—An explosion of gas caused the death of six miners in the south section of No. 4 colliery of the Nova Scotia Steel company's mines. Eight miners were entombed by the fall of coal and stone, only two being rescued.

"I am in favor of amending the constitution," said Mr. Clark, "so as to elect the president for one term of six years and make him forever ineligible for re-election."

Washington—Unanimously, the supreme court of the United States has decided that the federal government could not maintain the so-called "Panama canal libel suit" against the Press Publishing company of New York in the federal courts of New York. In fact, the decision was that the federal court had no jurisdiction over the alleged offense, because the case might have been brought in a state court.

After many months of negotiations between the governments of the United States and Canada, a conclusion was reached which means that, in probably a few months, regulatory authority will be extended over railway operations between the two countries.

THE RAILROAD BROTHERHOOD

AND THE CITY OF CLEVELAND

Told About in An Interesting Letter Received From A. Arner. Formerly of Allegan

The following letter was received by the editor of the News recently which we are sure will be of interest to our readers:

Brother Firestone:—

Several of my friends have shown an interest in my work here and I have decided to write a little descriptive letter, and if you care to you can give it to them through the News.

To begin with, Mr Dan L. Cease, who is editor of The Railroad Trainman (a copy of which I am mailing you) is a friend of mine, but greatly surprised me when he offered me a place in his office about go I am pleased with my work here and so far as I know, am giving satisfaction.

We live on the east side, about five miles from our offices, and enjoy a pretty car ride each day.

It might be of interest to know something of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and its grand lodge headquarters here where we work. It is the largest railroad organization in the world and the membership is increasing rapidly. We mail The Trainman to practically every nation in the world, but of course, principally to the members in the United States, Canada and Mexico. We are mailing about 120,000 copies a month, and as each one with wrapper, weighs eight ounces, you can easily figure that we pay Uncle Sam postage on about 30 tons of mail each month, besides nearly as much more in general postage, or nearly $1,500 postage monthly. We also pay $500 and $600 express charges each month and have paid as high as $1,100 We pay $600 per month rent for offices which are on the twelfth floor of the American Trust building, facing the public square and our rear windows look out onto Lake Erie.

For September our beneficiary department paid on killed and disabled members a trifle less than $200,000.

The order has paid over $21,000,000 in claims since it was founded in 1883

While the cost to maintain the brotherhood is enormous it is without question a good investment. Take for instance the recent wage movement. This was entered into in joint committees with the general managers of the roads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio rivers and resulted, I believe in an actual increase in the trainmen's pay to about $37,000,000 a year, some men in the best-received as high as a forty-dollar-a-month raise.

Mr. Cease under whom I am working came from the ranks of the brotherhood and is known as one of the very best writers in the country on practical railroading. President Taft appointed him a short time ago as one of three members of a commission to take charge of bills to make laws to govern the employers liability for safety appliances on cars and engines.

Referring again to this city, I will say that it is a great one. The recent census shows 560,663 population and the slogan is now —"1,000,000 in 1920." The new two-million-dollar federal building, also the new Cuyahoga court house that cost three million dollars have been finished in recent months and the buildings on the new city hall site are now being razed This building will cost $1,500,000.

At the recent elections it was voted to bond for $3,000,000 to build a high-level bridge connecting the east and west sides. We are to have a rapid transit subway, also. The city is paying one-half and the railroads one-half the cost to elevate the steam roads at all street crossings in the city to promote public safety. The interurban lines are also talking of building the largest and finest electric stations in the world for Cleveland.

In conclusion I wish to say that if you or any of our friends come to Cleveland, be sure to come and visit us.

With my very best regards to you and all who might care to hear from me. I hope to remain

Yours truly,
Vinz R Arner.

AMUSEMENTS

Petrons of the Bradley opera house will have at least one opportunity of seeing the celebrated Hyde Theatre Party this season. On account of their losing a night at Jackson they have been induced to fill the date here.

Their offering will be the four act society play "The Man of Her Choice" It is a gem of dramatic art. The play has a theme, vigorous in thought and has those touches of human nature that appeal to all classes. The "Man of Her Choice" does things and wins against odds the woman he loves There is no mockish sentiment in the lines, no strain ror dramatic effect It is a fine, delightful story The play is equally as strong in interest as "Paid in Full."

This is the same company that gave such excellent satisfaction here in "St. Elmo" last season. Miss Alice Bolton and Mr. W. O McWatters who were playing the leading roles lost season having the same positions with the company this year.

FARMERS INSTITUTE

HELD AT BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE MONDAY.

The meeting was opened at 11 a. m. by Warren Shepherd of Onsted.

Invocation by Dr. Hartzog.

The first topic on the program was "The Philo System of Raising Chickens" by Rev. Weld. It seems very appropriate that he should speak on this subject as the system was one invented and used by a retired Methodist minister at Almira, N. Y. In his usual happy way of handling a subject Rev. Weld remarked "that ministers had the reputation of eating chicken but it remained to be proven if they could give instructions in raising." Looking over the audience he though it might be well in the near future to preach on the subject of chickens.

Taking up his subject on the Philo System so many thought that any old thing was good enough for chickens, but what he now gave them was from his personal experience of raising chickens under the Philo System This system limits the size of the coops to 3x6 feet this to hold six fowls It is divided into two parts dirt floor in one and litter in the other, the roost being inserted at night with a drop board 1 1 2 ft. wide under it, this to be removed every morning.

Everything in the food line must be furnished that the is needed for the building up of the hen, or the ingredients that go to make up an egg. The green stuff, necessary is supplied by sprouted oats. By this system everything is regulated and reversed from the old way, the hens moulting in the spring when eggs are the cheapest which makes them early fall layers They also weigh more, the taste of the egg is improved and they do not eat as much. At the conclusion of his speech A. W. Mills asked for a little information on the hatching of chickens.

The discussion was lead by Leon Wilson who for the past year has been at Cornell University taking instructions on chicken raising. He remarked that sprouted oats were very well if they were not mouldy, and he had visited Mr. Philo and found the coops so small the cocks could not crow. He thought the cost of the pens would be much more expensive but Rev. Weld proved to him that they were far cheaper. Wilson remarked that there wae too much hard work raising chickens by the Philo System; cleaning coops, shoveling snow where one is raising on a large scale; and then keeping them in this confined condition the stock has to renewed every year Mr Wilson exhibited a fireless brooder that he had made him self which was very interesting.

Will Waldron, next on the discussion, quoted P. T. Barnum, 'that the American pdople liked to be humbugged' and he thought this a great one and his advice was, "Cut it out."

Just here the company adjourned to Grange hall for dinner

At 1 p. m. the first paper was that given to Prof. D. P. McAlpine, Subject New Work for Rural School The entire paper was voted to be published in both our home papers and will appear in our Fridays issue.

Edith Wilson sang in a most delightful manner and responded to an encore. Reading by Miss Nellie Mingay, her subject which appealed to every one present, was given in her own jolly manner and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

In the absence of Dr. Waterman, Evans Russell of Sand Creek spoke on the merits of the Holstein cow, giving a short history of the same stating that 120 lbs. of milk producing 35 lbs. of butter was a weeks average, of the size of the cow he stated that 1250 lbs weight for the cow and 2500 lbs. for the sire was a fair weight. In his opinion they were the best cow to keep being easy to raise and their milk contained the best vital qualities for the use of children being more easily digested.

J. R. Keeney then in a very forceful and earnest manner spoke on the merits of the Jersey cow, having to illustrate his point, a black-board on which were the statistics of the two herd of cattle, the Holstein and the Jersey, at the St. Louis Fair. The average fat in the milk of the holstein was 3.4 against 4.7 of the jersey. He then proved that the Jersey was of more profit to the farmer than the Holstein, it costing much less to feed them, and of the cheese factory and creamery, the Jersey was much more profitable, the condensed milk factory being the only one where the Holstein was ahead. It was listened to with deep attention and at the close of his remarks was greeted with a round of applause.

State speaker E. M. Moore closed this discussion by saying that these results could not be reached unles the cattle were fed in a sientific manner and proceeded to instruct the people upon the best and most scientific and hygenic manner.

The meeting was called to order at 7:30 p. m. and Frank F. Rogers spoke on the subject of "Good Roads" a subject in which his audience was deeply interested. The discussion was lead by Will Waldron.

Duet by B. J. Pulver and Mrs. Ruthruff. Care of country roads was the subject of E. M. Moores speech

Taken all in all, the meeting was deeply interesting from beginning to end and was enjoyed by all. and best of all it drew a large house morning, noon and night.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

SUNFLOWER PHILOSOPHY

Nations go armed; but citizens must not.

A wise workman lets the boss have his own way.

It is easy to get rid of a habit, it is not a serious one.

Every man makes a satisfactory husband for a few days.

A past is as dangerous with a politician as with a woman.

If you have a good friend don't spoil it all by imposing on him.

The weather eventually gets back at the people who talk about it.

A drunken man always wants to talk about his respectability.

People who get rich quickly usually get rid of it the same way.

Opinions and visits are more appreciated when not forced upon people.

A woman says unprintable things about as gracefully as she throws a brick.

Every poor man is ready to make fun of a rich man, or borrow money of him.

The express purpose of some people seems to be to [illegible] expressing themselves.

Some people have nothing to sell except promises they cannot make make good.

There is plenty of cooking as good as "mother's" but very few appetites like a boy's.

Moralists tell us that we should constantly labor for the good of others Well, don't we?

You can never gain any advantage over another woman by telling her you think that she is foolish.

What has become of the old fashioned man who thought it smart to swear in the presence of a preacher?

When you hear a smart saying by a child it is a sign the child has a smart mother and that she made it up.

When a boy wears a pair of new shoes without protest, it is an indication that he is going away on the cars.

The girl who usually works hardest in decorating the church can usually be depended on to be a poor worker at home.

When a man inherits money keep it dark from the lawyers, and when a woman has money don't let the doctors learn about it.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. [illegible], Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe backaches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

ONE OF CLINTONS OLDEST RESIDENTS DEAD

Alonzo Clark Passed Away Friday Afternoon

Alonzo Clark who has been in feeble health for some time, passed away Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock at the Clintonian, aged 94 years.

Deceased was next to the oldest resident in Clinton and a man who had done much for our village. He is survived by two children Ed. A. Clark and Mrs. Mary Baker of Chicago. Deceased was born April 17, 1816 in an humble Connecticut home. While a small boy his parents moved to Groton Hollow N. Y., and later on they all came to Monroe Michigan.

In 1835 Mr. Clark located in Clinton coming with his brother Phillip working for him for a time in a general store but he soon embarked in business for him self and built the building where the Wallinger picture show is now located and for a time was in business with the late Dwight Kies, he afterwards had a general store in the building now occupied by Will Hause his partner being E. W. Freeze, the firm Clark & Freeze did a big business in their time and before their dissolution built the big store building which is now occupied by the bowling alley, in fact Mr. Clark is mainly responsible for the building of all the brick stores on the north side of Chicago Street, his final work being the Clintonian hotel where he breathed his last. He owned the Woolen Mills at one time the Exchange Bank at VanTuyle and Silvers selling to same, also was owner of the flouring mills in its palmy days. The late Solomon Brown was the miller.

Mr. Clark was a thorough business man with an energy possessed by few which resulted in his accumulating a fortune. He invested in Chicago property in the latter part of his business career and this grew rapidly in value. His first marriage was to Mary Jane Kies Dec., 31, 1840 just seventy years ago last Saturday, there were three children born to them, one of whom survives, Mrs. Mary Baker. Mrs. Clark died in 1853. In August 1855 he married Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Kies-Ives, two children blest this union, Freddie and Eddie, the former died at the age of 4 years. The second Mrs. Clark passed away July 1, 1909 at the age of 86 years, two grandchildren and one great grand-child are left also to mourn his loss. Since then he had grown feeble and his son Ed. and wife have been in constant attendance, making his last days as full of pleasure as possible and looking to his every comfort.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock Rev. C. C. Kemp officiating and he was laid to rest in the family lot at Riverside. As a mark of respect the business places were closed at noon and remained closed for the rest of the day.

It is idleness that is the curse of man—not labor.

Mrs. Wm. Rinn and children returned to Detroit Monday.

A quiet but pretty home wedding took place at the home of Walter Exelby Saturday when his daughter Alice was united in marriage to Edward L. McCrate of Columbus Grove, Ohio. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate family and a few friends. The bridal couple left on the evening train for Detroit before going to their home in Columbus Grove. Their many friends here extend congratulations.

The Keeper's Daughter

For days the thermometer had been soaring at almost midsummer heat, softening the ice of the Great South bay, until nearly all its cohesive power was gone. Now the ice was a thick, spongy mass, so rotten that even the foot of a life-saver pressing upon it firmly would break through at many places. It was impossible for either foot passage or for a boat to be forced through. And to increase the seriousness of the case the last two days had brought a fog so gray and dense as to shut Fire Island from every object a dozen yards away.

Out in midchannel toward the Long Island shore, and on the ocean side, currents had kept the ice from freezing thickly and had hastened the decomposition. Already the delayed shipping was seeking passage toward New York or the open sea, and in the fog and the narrow channels that were free from ice were meeting with disaster, from time to time signals of distress came from one direction or another, and so far as they were able the life-saving stations of Fire Island responded.

Perhaps at no other place in the world could assistance have been rendered across that barrier of slush ice, in which spaces of open water were beginning to appear, but then at no other place in the world perhaps were there amphibious scooters.

Several of these unique distinctions of Fire Island were lying on the edge of the ice, with pike and scootering iron and oars across the thwarts ready for instant use while their owners leaned forward listening, peering and for the most part shaking their heads. The wind was rising, blowing straight from the sea. In another hour it was likely to freshen into a gale. Before it the gray fog was being swirled and tossed and eddied, but still encompassing and dense—a huge wet blanket that seemed writhing in the agonies of pain.

On all sides were the sounds of fog and danger, bell buoys, boat whistles, occasional fog horns, the pounding and crushing ice where some vessel was forcing its way through, and now and then the ominous signal of distress and call for help. Among these came a sudden dull booming toward the sea, and evidently at considerable distance. The men who were in looked at each other, their faces paling.

"A big ship," one of them said, "and on the bar."

"Yes," assented the man nearest him, "nothing can get to 'em that far out, not even scooters."

There was a peculiar grinding sound near them. A scooter slid up the beach and a man sprang out.

"The other fellows in yet?" he asked.

"Only Carey. He brought a man ashore and sent him up to the station, and then hurried back. He said it was a coal barge, with two men and a boy and a dog, and the other scooters will bring them in. The keeper ordered us to watch here for other work. What was yours?"

"Just a sailboat, with two young men. They called for help because they didn't know their surroundings. When I explained they decided to remain on board until the ice let them out. They have plenty of provisions and a snug little cabin. I heard the ship's call from outside and hurried back. I couldn't quite make out the location in the fog. Anybody gone?"

"Gone?" derisively. "Why, man alive! That's on the bar three miles away. No scooter could ever get there, across the open channel. Besides the ice has been piled up by the waves. She'll have to wait until the sea opens so we can use a lifeboat, or the fog lifts so we can scooter out. No one—where are you going?"

For the man had swung the bow of his craft into the fog and was again hoisting the sails.

"Out to the vessel, of course!" quietly.

"But it's sure death, Jack," remonstrated the life saver sharply. "Don't be a fool. You couldn't pick your way through the fog with that scooter and get back alive."

"Maybe not. But that signal sounds like a big boat, and if so there are a good many folks out there waiting for help. I'm only one."

"Oh, Mr. Bowman!" The call was clear and peremptory. Jack Bowman paused, with one foot in the scooter, his face growing set. The owner of the voice was the keeper's daughter, and only the day before she had closed the door into a future which he had begun to believe would be his. The sentence, "I shall never marry a man whose future is bounded by a clam hoe and a fish trawl; the world has use for brave deeds," still rang in his ears.

"Father says for no one to answer that call just yet. He thinks this wind will soon break up the ice so that the lifeboat can go out. He says it will be suicide to attempt scootering through this fog. Mr. Bowman!" her voice rising in sudden displeasure, for the scooterist had stepped into his craft and thrown out his pike to shove her into the wind.

"I'm sorry, Miss Blanche," over his shoulder, "but the keeper's orders are for his own men, and not for a poor outside fisherman like me. Besides, the boat may be in sore need and though a little scooter cannot do much, it may at least carry intelligence and perhaps save one or two—provided I can reach them."

The girl's face underwent a sudden change, and she took an impetuous step forward, but already the scooter had slipped away into the fog.

As they waited there, listening, peering, while the hours dragged by, the faces of the men showed something of what they knew to be taking place within the fearsome, shifting pall of mist. The scooter was rushing on, dropping into open spaces of water, slipping up again upon patches of rotten ice, swiftly, with scarcely any checking of speed, its owner knowing that time was of more importance than caution. Any moment its nose was liable to strike some obstruction and throw out its occupant; the wind at that speed might overturn the scooter, or a sudden jibing wreck it without an instant's warning, either of which on the waste of rotten ice held but one

Two hours and there came another signal of distress close in shore. The waiting life-savers dropped into their scooters and slid out into the fog. The girl was still there watching, her face white. Ten minutes more, and a scooter's nose suddenly slipped from the darkness, almost at her feet, and Jack Bowman sprang out. Bending over, he lifted a recumbent figure from the scooter to the sand.

"Will you call someone from the station to carry this man up, Miss Blanche?" he said hurriedly, as he swung his craft back into the wind. "I haven't time. There are others waiting for me."

The girl moved forward swiftly, placing a hand upon his shoulder.

"I shall be waiting, too, Jack," she said in a low voice. "You must come back to me."

A tremor went through the man's frame, but he did not pause for an instant in his work. As the craft disappeared in the fog his voice rose strong and resolute above the wind.

"Yes, Blanche, I will come back to you."

And he did.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Slaves of the Harem.

The members of the harem are still young slaves bought in Circassia, Georgia, Armenia, and other places, and practically educated in the harem itself on the chance that the Sultan may one day notice them, writes a Constantinople correspondent of a London paper. It appears also that civilization has not made great strides in the management of the royal harem, and that corporal punishments are still frequent, eunuchs, called "beating eunuchs," still being kept for refractory persons. Poisoned coffee is also not entirely out of fashion, while grimmer still, the terrible sack flung into the Bosphorus even now does its sinister work. It is piteous to learn that, notwithstanding all this, many parents willingly sell children to supply the enormous colony which constitutes the harem.

Before the Time of Matches.

Sixty years ago the use of flint and steel to produce a fire was not wholly unknown. The late William E. Stone of ePoria lived at Beaver, Pa. His father one warm August night was stricken with apoplexy. The fire was out in the kitchen hearth and his mother in her distress, unable to find the tinder box, was obliged to send his brother Marsh two miles and a half to a neighbor. She gave him a handful of tow, which he put in his pocket. Arousing a neighbor with some difficulty, she gave him a live coal, which he wrapped in the tow, and putting it back in his pocket, ran home. When he arrived there he swung the tow around his head, thus fanned the coal and produced a flame which lighted a candle. In the meantime relief had been so long coming that the father was past all surgery.

Tibetan Trade in Musk.

A number of Tibetan traders who visited Calcutta in March, 1908, brought with them, among other articles, a large quantity of musk, which is held in high esteem by the high caste Indians. The little deer from which the musk is obtained ranges in the Himalayas and Tibetan mountains, 9,000 feet above sea level. The male deer yields the finest and greatest quantity of musk. The deer are shy and alert, and difficult to capture.

Parisian Horse Markets

The famous old horse market in the Boulevard de l'Hopital in Paris, where Rosa Bonheur used to plod about in man's attire with pencil and sketch book, has ceased to exist. No one who loves horses will regret it, for it represented the acme of equine discomfort. The new horse market, in the Rue Brancion, is a model of its kind. It comprises stables and sheds sufficient to shelter 800 horses.

Elkins, W. Va. (Special).—Senator Stephen B. Elkins, who died in Washington last week, today is sleeping his last long sleep in the graveyard of this little mountain town.

He was laid to rest within a brief time after the funeral train from Washington had crept into the station Monday morning.

Dems. Turn Flip-Flop.

Washington (Special).—The Democrats of the house last March voted to overrule a decision of Speaker Cannon that the now famous Norris resolution, the introduction of which was followed by three days of riot and excitement, was not in order. But Monday the Democracy of the house turned a flip-flap.

They fought bitterly to prevent the acceptance of the very principle that they so triumphantly championed last March. For three hours there was the finest kind of a row on the troublesome subject.

REPUBLICAN VOTE SCATTERED

Ballots Were Cast For Senator Dick, H. M. Daugherty, Charles P. Taft, Warren Harding, James R. Garfield and J. G. Butler—Works Wins In California; McLean In Connecticut.

Columbus (Special).—In spite of the bitterness of the late Democratic senatorial campaign, the victor, Lieutenant Governor Atlee Pomerene, was elected to the United States senate by the legislature by the vote of every Democratic member of that body. In the senate, Lieutenant Governor Pomerene received nineteen votes and in the house seventy votes.

The Republican vote went: For Senator Dick, 3 votes; Harry M. Daugherty of Columbus, 7 votes; Charles P. Taft, brother of the president, 2 votes; Warren G. Harding, 1 vote; James R. Garfield, 1, and J. G. Butler, an iron manufacturer of Youngstown, 1 vote.

Works Wins In California.

Sacramento, Cal. (Special).—The house of representatives of the state legislature gave a majority for Judge John D. Works for United States senator over A. G. Spalding by a vote of 62 to 16. This insures Works' election, whatever the vote of the state senate may be, as the total vote of both houses is only 120.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE.

Indiana Statesman Who Would Deprive Lorimer of His Seat In Senate.

COPYRIGHT BY CLINEDINST

WOULD OUST LORIMER.

Hot Fight Is On In Senate to Remove Illinois Member.

Washington (Special).—The fight to prevent Senator Lorimer of Illinois retaining his seat in the United States senate was opened in the senate with a contest between Senators Beveridge of Indiana and Owen of Oklahoma, both of whom contested for the right to fire the first gun in the same cause.

Senator Beveridge, by virtue of being a member of the committee on privileges and elections which investigated charges of bribery against Mr. Lorimer, gained a tactical victory by filing a minority report attacking the position of his colleagues on the committee who voted to exonerate the Illinois senator. Senator Owen, however, introduced a resolution to declare the election of Lorimer illegal and void, but he was not permitted to address the senate in its support, until Beveridge had finished. Mr. Beveridge submitted a report, the conclusion of which was:

"That this election was invalid is a certainty. Lorimer was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Illinois."

Before the report was filed, Senator Lorimer made a brief speech, declaring his innocence of bribery and the innocence of his friends of any participation in corrupt practices in connection with his election. He announced his intention to be present during the discussion of his case.

DECISION FAVORS FORD.

Circuit Court Judge Rules Selden Patent Is Not Infringed Upon.

New York (Special).—The United States circuit court of appeals gave a decision Monday reversing the action of the lower court in sustaining the validity of the Selden patent. The gist of the decision was that Selden had a patent on a car that made use of the Brayton two-cycle engine, which was of the constant pressure type, but that his patent could not be considered as covering the Otto gas engine of the four-cycle type.

Therefore, it was ruled, the defendants in the case of the Ford Motor company and Panhard and Levasseaur, among others, do not infringe on the Selden patent.

The reversal of the ruling of Judge Hough by Judge Noyes's decision is regarded as a sweeping victory for the independent dealers.

"Bath Tub Trust" Witness Arrested.

Pittsburg (Special).—Edwin L. Wayman, principal witness for the government in the "bath tub trust" proceedings, has been arrested in his office here by a United States marshal, and held under [illegible] bond for his appearance at Detroit, March 6, next, as a witness.

EXPLOSIVES FOUND IN Y

Warden Simpson Also Fir.'s Qua of Cartridges Near Spot Where Nitroglycerin Was Found--Pris Who Made Confession Remove Ionia.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 11.—Follo the discovery of enough nitrogly to blow the Michigan state priso all its inmates to atoms, Warden Simpson also found two large of 38 caliber revolver cartridges den near the spot where the ex ives were found, in the prison yar

A search for explosives was n following a confession by Ja Burke, an inmate of Marquette. B was formerly a prisoner in Jack but was removed to Marquette. It while at Jackson that a priso named Thompson, he says, disclo the fact that explosives and the n essary tools to fire them and othe wise effect the escape of many prisoners were within the walls. Burke said he became a party to the plot from that day until he told the whole story to Warden Russel, after his transfer to Marquette prison a few days ago.

Warden Simpson, however, says that the plot was known before Burke's removal to Marquette. He also asserts the knowledge of the existence of the plot and the belief that Burk and four other convicts transferred to Marquette were implicated in it, was the very reason for their transfer.

George Jefferson, who slipped himself out of Jackson prison in a box containing ferrules (hoe irons) on Aug. 20, is said here to be one man whom the authorities are looking for in connection with the plot to blow up the prison. It is suspected that Jefferson was in the plot before he left the prison and was aided in getting free by others of the convicts on the understanding that he was to return with the explosives and other articles necessary to the plan. Jefferson is still at liberty, and it is believed that some time in the interim he has come back to Jackson and slipped the materials through the hole in the gate to his confederates inside.

The nitroglycerin and the other stuff discovered are proof in plenty that the convicts had planned to blow up the prison, kill the guards and effect a general delivery of the 600 convicts in the institution.

Ionia, Mich., Jan. 11.—James Burke, who disclosed the Jackson prison dynamiting plot, was brought to Ionia and registered in the regular way.

MRS. GOVARE FREED.

Detroit Jury Acquits Woman Accused of Murdering Mt. Clemens Sheriff.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 11.—Not guilty was the verdict brought in by the jury that tried Mrs. August Govare of Detroit for the killing of Sheriff Mathews in Mt. Clemens.

Mrs. Govare cried copiously as she shook hands with all the jurors and thanked them.

This verdict will likely mean that the case against the boy on the same charge will never be brought to trial. Benny Govare pulled the trigger when told by his mother to shoot to drive away the sheriff, whom the Govares thought was a burglar when he tried to force his way into the Govare home after night to arrest the father, who was absent.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

CELEBRATE FIELD DAY IN LENAWEE COUNTY.

The Anti-Saloon League will hold Field day exercise in Lenawee County Sunday January 15, in Tecumseh at the Baptist Church, Pliny W. Marsh will speak, at the Presbyterian, Hon. Fred E. Dunn of Croswell, at Methodist Church, Supt. G. W. Morrow of Detroit.

The day will be observed in Clinton, Hudson, Blissfield, Morenci, Rollin and Clayton.

This league has been in existence for the past 17 years and is now organized in every state in the Union. Its work is the destruction of saloons and is in the interest of no particular church or party. The only question is "Do you hate the saloon and are you willing to join with others of like mind for its abolition from State and Nation? If you do, come on!"

The resident of the national organization is Bishop Luther T. Wilson of the Methodist Episcodal Church; vice president, Fr. James McCleary of the Catholic; national superintendent, Dr. Purley A. Baker of Columbus.

In a little over two years, 25,000 saloons have been put out of business in the United States. At present there are 40 dry counties in Michigan and the hope is in the coming months to see still more dry counties and a hot fight between the wet and dry forces is anticipated.

The following taken from the Hudson Post' explains itself to the many friends of Rev. D. Stanley Shaw. A Hudson preacher took a ride behind a fractious steed, and by the time he reached Baker's Hill was going at great speed; he pulled so hard upon the lines, with feet braced on the dash, that all at once they busted through with a tremendous crash; and then that horse put on more steam, and soon the cutter left, while the poor preacher sat and looked as if he were bereft; we think he should hereafter ride in a great big strong sleigh, and placed his trust on higher things when the steed runs away. We pause to mention one thing more which we had most fotgot; the preacher who took the sleighride was "Johnny on the spot."

POST OFFICE ROBBERY

AT CEMENT CITY ON WEDNESDAY MORNING

The post office at Cement City was broken into early Wednesday morning by a gang of robbers who carried a small Safe from the building to the Cincinnati Northern railroad tracks where it was blown up. They secured about $150 in stamps, a gold watch and 2 or 3 dollars in money.

Sheriff Knowles at Adrian was notified as soon as the robbery was discovered, and he together with Deputy Cross hurried to the scene of the robbery by auto. They secured information at that place that after blowing the safe the robbers had taken advantage of a hand car, going in the direction of Jackson.

Jackson officers were immediately notified and deputies sent out by them saw two men coming toward them on the tracks. They tried to arrest these two but one escaped, the other was held and taken to Adrian he gave his name as John Mack and when searched, there was found in his possession a 38 calibre revolver skeleton key, percussion caps, fuse and a map of the vicinity. He denies any complicity in the robbery and will have nothing to say of the affair.

ARE YOU DEAF?

Catarrh is Probably the Cause. Get Rid of the Cause

If you have catarrh and have constant ringing noises in your ears look into the matter at once.

It's a pretty sure sign that catarrh is spreading and is making its way through the Eustachian tubes that lead from the nose to the ears.

When catarrh gets to the ears partial deafness follows. If you have ringing noises in your ears go to C. A. Wright & Son to-day and get a HYOMEI outfit and drive out catarrh.

To cure catarrh HYOMEI should be breathed through a pocket inhaler for a few minutes, four or five times a day. Just pour a few drops into the hard rubber inhaler and breathe it.

It kills the germs; soothes the irritation; heals the inflamation; stops hawking, spitting and snuffling.

HYOMEI keeps the throat free from mucus and prevents crusts in nose.

The complete HYOMEI outfit which includes the indestructible hard rubber inhaler, a bottle of HYOMEI and simple instructions for use, costs $1.00. Separate bottles of HYOMEI costs 50 cents at duggists every, or at C. A. & Son on money back plan.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

Dr. Rumer Honored, but Bradley Will Take His Place on Pardon Board.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 12.—The first batch of appointments of the new governor came up in the senate Tuesday, when they were referred to the committee on executive business without opposition. Those honored were: Dr. Rumer, recess appointment as a member of the pardon board; C. L. Glasgow, member of the railroad commission; George Horton, new member of the tax commission, and John Holbrook of Lansing, member of board of control of school for the blind.

In the case of Dr. Rumer, the honor was short lived, as Governor Osborn had his resignation, which took effect as soon as he was confirmed. Dr. J. B. Bradley of Eaton Rapids will succeed Dr. Rumer on the pardon board, but as yet no definite selection has been made for the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rowland Connor of Saginaw.

Can Commission Change Rates?

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 11.—One of the most interesting railroad rate cases ever taken in a court in the United States, and which both sides say will go to the United States supreme court for a final settlement which will affect all the state of the Union where forestry is carried on, is being heard by Judge Murfin in the circuit court here. The case is that of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad company vs. the Michigan railroad commission and several corporations, covering the right of the railroad commission to abrogate a rate and set one of its own liking.

OPPOSE CANAL FORTIFICATION

Well Known Persons Sign Petition Opposing President.

SIX REASONS GIVEN FOR ACTION

Neutralization of Big Waterway Held as Preferable Owing to Peaceful Conditions and the Saving of Enormous Sums.

Boston, Jan. 16.—The names of several well known persons are signed to a statement opposing the fortification of the Panama canal which was given out here. Six reasons are advanced for neutralization rather than fortification of the big ditch.

Among the signers are Richard Olney, former secretary of state; President Jordan, of Stanford university; William Dean Howells, Bishop Charles P. Anderson, of Chicago; President Faunce, of Brown university; Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago; Judge George B. Holt, of the United States district court; George Foster Peabody, the New York banker; Dean Rogers, of the Yale Law school; John Graham Brooks, lecturer on economics; N. O. Nelson, a St. Louis manufacturer; E. P. Wheeler, a New York attorney; President Capen, of the American board, and Thomas Mott Osborne, of Auburn, N. Y. Some of the reasons advanced are:

First—Because the canal would be safer in war time without fortification. According to the agreement signed by the Hague conference in 1907, unfortified coast places cannot be bombarded.

Second—Because the original intention of our government, as distinctly expressed in 1900, and previously, was to prohibit fortifications on the canal.

Third—Because, though the Suez canal was built with English money, England agreed to its neutralization.

Fourth—Because the United States in all its history, has never been attacked, and is too important a customer for any great nation at this late day to wantonly attack.

Fifth—Because with the experience of nearly a century's peace with England, insured by our undefended Canadian border line until we have asked for complete arbitration treaties with all future enemies and have been refused, we should be insincere in increasing our war measures.

Sixth—Because in the words of David J. Foster, chairman of the committee of foreign affairs in the house of representatives: "The initial expense of the necessary fortifications would not be less than $25,000,000, in all probability it would not be less $50,000,000. The annual expense of maintaining such fortifications, 2,000 miles from home, would probably amount to $5,000,000.

MEXICAN BANDITS ROB PAYMASTER

Pay Train on Parral and Durango Road Pillaged.

FEDERAL OFFICERS EXECUTED

Rebels in Hills While Robbers Attack and Rob Many Persons Under Guise of Being Insurrectos—Several Leaders Killed.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 16.—While the operations of the revolutionists have not ceased to give trouble, a new source of bother has arisen in northern Mexico in the operations of robbers and bandits. Many of these, taking advantage of the rebel uprising, pose as insurrectos and are going through the country plundering and stealing. The rebels have put to death the leader of several such bandits, but still many are operating and depredations are growing worse.

News has reached here of the attack by bandits on the community known as Manuel, near Jimulco, south of Torreon, on the National railway lines, and the robbery of a Spaniard of $300. The same band, or another of equal size, also robbed the Hacienda El Guaje, owned by Senor Amador Carnedas. Fifty soldiers sent from Torreon, have been unable to locate the bandits. The ranch of Gen. Luis Terrazas, generally recognized as the political boss of the state of Chihuahua, suffered a raid during the past week, but the Terrazas family charges that insurrectos did this. The report says that the 300 employes of the ranch joined the insurgents after the raid and they drove off all of the horses and took all fire arms available. The Terrazas ranch is forty miles from the city of Chihuahua.

From Parral, in Chihuahua, comes the confirmed report of the robbery of the pay train of the Parral and Durango railroad at a point known as Mesa Sandia, 77 kilometers out of Parral. The paymaster, D. Piza, was robbed of $800 in cash, a watch and his pistol. The robbers caught the train on its return, instead of as it went out, or several thousand dollars would have been secured.

The administration papers published in Chihuahua are making much capital of the execution of federal officials at Guerrero by the insurgents in reprisal for Navarro's act in executing all his wounded and prisoners at Cerrero Prieto several weeks ago. El Norte, a daily paper owned by Enrique Creel, minister of foreign affairs, and published in his home town in Chihuahua, says that it has just become known that a prominent ranchman was captured and executed at Guerrero by the rebels because he refused to give money and horses for the rebel cause. His head was cut off with an axe, the paper charges.

The alliance seems to be approved by the family of Viscount Esher, whose guest Miss Dare has frequently been during the past three years. Miss Dare's father is a lawyer's clerk.

PEARL NECKLACE STOLEN

Rome, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Mary Frey, of New York, has reported to the police the disappearance of a pearl necklace which she kept locked in a drawer beside her bed at the Hotel Excelsior.

The police suspect that it was stolen by a German hotel thief, who is already in custody. His baggage, which was sequestered in Genoa, is being brought here. It may yield the necklace.

STRIKE SETTLED IN CHICAGO PLANT

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Reach Agreement With Workers.

10,000 TO RETURN TO WORK

Action of Body of Garment Workers Said to Mean End of Bitter Struggle in Chicago—Committee to Adjust Terms.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—A settlement of the garment workers' strike in the shops of Hart, Schaffer & Marx, the largest of the independent clothing concerns, was made at a conference between Joseph Schaffner of the firm and a subcommittee of the joint strike conference board.

An agreement was signed by both sides by which 10,000 strikers will return to work within ten days, beginning this morning. It was predicted that the settlement will result in a speedy termination of the strike in the "association" houses and the smaller concerns.

More than 18,000 strikers will remain out and the strike leaders will exert every effort during the next few days to reach a settlement for these workers. The strike began last September and has been one of the bitterest fought industrial disputes in the history of labor disturbance in the city of Chicago.

In addition to the 10,000 strikers that will return to work, the labor leaders agreed that the firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx shall have the pick of the mechanics among 2,000 additional workers, who will be put to work in the firm's shops as soon as the regular quota of employes has been taken care of. It was announced by the firm that its intention is to put to work at least 12,000 employes as soon as shop arrangements can be made for this number.

The agreement was reached at a conference held at the Great Northern hotel. Those who attended and signed the agreement were Joseph Schaffner, representing the firm, and President John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor, chairman of the joint strike conference board; President Thomas A. Rickert, of the United Garment Workers of America; Mrs. Raymond Robins, president of the Women's Trade Union league; H. C. Harris, a cutter, representing the strikers direct.

The principal feature of the agreement is an arbitration proviso by which all grievances, real or supposed, shall be submitted for adjusement to a board of three arbitrators. This board shall be selected within three days and shall proceed immediately with the work of adjustment. By the agreement the employes will not get the "closed shop," but the arbitration board is empowered to provide a method of settlement of possible future grievances.

The Goose Girl

By HAROLD MacGRATH

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

full of wisdom. He had an idea. The fleeing chancellor and his daughter were on the train, and he was certain that his friend Carmichael knew it.

By the aid of certain small briberies on the train and in Paris Carmichael gathered bit by bit that the destination of the woman he loved was America. But never once did he set eyes upon her till she and her father mounted the gangplank to the vessel which was to carry them across the wide Atlantic. The change in Herbeck was pitiable. His face had aged twenty years in these sixty odd hours. His clothes, the same he had worn that ever memorable night, hung loosely about his gaunt frame, and there was a vacancy in his eyes which was eloquent of mental collapse. Carmichael abided his time.

A French newspaper contained a full account of Herbeck's coup and his subsequent flight. It also recounted the excitement of the following day, the appearance of Gretchen on the steps of the palace and the great shouting of the people as they acclaimed her the queen of Jugendheit.

The second day out Carmichael's first opportunity came. He discovered Herbeck and his daughter leaning against the rail. He watched them uneasily, wondering how he might approach without startling her. At last he keyed up his courage.

"Good morning, your highness," he stammered, and inwardly cursed his stupidity.

At the sound of his voice she turned, and there was no mistaking the gladness in her eyes.

"Mr. Carmichael!"

"Yes. I was surprised to learn that you were taking the same boat as myself."

How clumsy he was, she thought. For she had known his every move since the train drew out of Dreiberg.

"Father, here is our friend, Herr Carmichael."

"Carmichael?" said Herbeck slowly. "Ah, yes. Good morning."

And Carmichael instantly comprehended that his name recalled nothing to the other man's remembrance.

"You are returning to America?" she asked.

"For good, perhaps. To tell the truth, I ran away, deserted my post, though technically I have already resigned. But America has been calling me for some days. You have never been to sea before?"

"No; it is all marvelous and strange to me."

"Let us walk, my child," said Herbeck.

"You will excuse me, Mr. Carmichael?" she said. Never more the rides in the fair mornings; never more the beautiful gardens, the music, the galloping of soldiers who drew their sabers whenever they passed her. Never more any of these things.

"Can I be of any assistance?" he said in an undertone.

"No," sadly.

The days, more or less monotonous, went past. Sometimes he saw her alone on deck, but only for a little while. Her father was slowly improving, but with this improvement came the natural desire for seclusion. So he came on deck only at night.

The night on which the vessel bore into the moist, warm air of the gulf stream was full of moonshine, of smooth, phosphorescent billows. Herbeck had gone below. The girl leaned over the rail, alone and lonely. And Carmichael, seeing her, could no longer still the desire in his heart. He came up to her.

"See!" she exclaimed, pointing to the little eddies of foam speeding along the hull. "Do you know what they remind me of? Mermaids' fingers grasping and clutching at the boat as if to drag it down below."

How beautiful she was with the frost of moonlight on her hair!

"You must not talk like that," he admonished.

"I am very unhappy."

"And when you say that you make me so too."

"Why?" She had spoken the word at last.

"Do you remember the night you dropped your fan?" leaning so closely toward her that his arm pressed against hers.

"I remember."

"You put that word then. In honor I dared not answer. You were a princess! I was only a soldier of fortune. But now that you are in trouble, now that you have need of me, I may answer. I may tell you now why, why I have thrown ambition and future to the winds, why I am here at your side tonight. Need I tell you? Do you not know, and have you not known? Am I cruel to speak of love in the moment of your great affliction? Well, I must be cruel. I love you faithfully and loyally, now and hereafter, through this sad day into happier ones. I ask nothing for this love I offer. I ask only that I may use it in your service, in good times or bad."

"ASK WHAT YOU WILL."

"Ask what you will," she whispered. "I am happy now!"

THE END.

WASHINGTON LETTER

With the exception of the death of Senator Elkins of West Virginia no event of very great importance has occurred in Washington since the adjournment of Congress. The death of Mr. Elkins makes it certain that there will be two Democratic Senators from his state, the legislature being Democratic will elect a Senator of that party to succeed Senator Elkins. The late Senator was one of the wealthiest of what has been called the "American House of Millionaires." His death is generally explained in the press as caused by over work at the late Congressional session, but anyone at all familiar with the facts will not be slow to attribute his illness to high living. He no doubt had a powerful constitution but no constitution can forever withstand a perpetual banquet.

The President has announced that he will not take the initiative in bringing together in holy accord the belligerent wings of the Republican party known as the stand-patters and the insurgents, he says that he will address the business of the country and leave any peace making program to the contending parties.

When it was announced some days ago that Senator-elect Lorimer had been given a clean bill of morals with reference to his election as Senator, there were many who said, "How will Col. Roosevelt feel now for refusing to sit at table with him and having the refusal published over the world?" but now that the Senate has refused to adprove the clean bill prepared by Senator Burroughs and others and proposed to take up the matter again, it is quite possible after all that history will justify ex-President Roosevelt's action.

If appearances are to be trusted, something will be done at this session of Congress to prevent the influx of undesirable people from Europe. Surely if there is any choice in undesirables the Asiatics by way of the Pacific are less vicious than some who have been recently coming across the Atlantic. A deputation of American newspapers numering 32 called on President Taft to protest against the hardships encourted by immigrants landing in this country. Their spokesman, Louis Hammerling, told the Presideet that they objected to the suspicon with which immigration officers looked upon those arriving in this country. President Taft told them that he went last Fall to Ellis Island and remained there during the forenoon listening to the cases presented to the immigration commissioner would have turned back, and that he had since followed those cases in which he had been influenced against his better judgement but that he had to make the humiliating confession that the outcome vindicated the commissioner and showed that his experience was better than the President's compassion.

Apropos of the immigrant question the fact that the attorney general is proceeding against the international steam ship lines under the Sherman law is very insignificant and far-reaching. The million or more of immigrants annually landing in this country is found to a great extent that steerage traffic is immensely profitable to the great steamship lines such as Lleyds, Hamburg American, Cunard, White Star, Holland-American and several others. They make millions yearly in this traffic and it is a well known fact that they carry large bodies of steerage passengers both. At least half a million are taken Eastward back to the "old country" every year. All the steam ship lines have immigrant bureaus and travelling agents using every means and inducement to bring immigrants to this country.

This is the season of war scares, promoted, it is said by some, in order to get large appropriations for the army and navy and for the contractors who furnish military supplies. There is a report that the Japanese government has successfully negotiated with President Diaz of Mexico for a port and depot of supplies on the western coast. If there were truth in this it would be cause for immediate interference by the U. S. government.

Scott's Emulsion

is a wonderful food-medicine for all ages of mankind. It will make the delicate, sickly baby strong and well—will give the pale, anemic girl rosy cheeks and rich, red blood. CAUSES 95 PER CENT OF DISEASES

Advice Concerning Stomach Troubles and How to Remedy Them

Do not neglect indigestion which leads to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent doctor once said that 95 per cent of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads them to believe them to be them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic eyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction we will return you the money you paid us for them without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25c, 50c and $1.00. Remember you can obtain them only at store—The Rexall Store.

Newlow Spreaders

are 18 in lower than other spreaders, making it the easiest loading spreader on the market. All bearings are rollers of the new pattern. There is a gather to the wheels like all high grade wagons. Other spreader wheels are straight like drill wheels, the result is the Newlow has less draft than other machines.

The frame is all of steel which makes a more rigid frame. There is only one wheel in front which allows you to back into places where it would be impossible with a four wheel machine.

For you to fully appreciate the machine you will have to see one, our best advertisement are the satisfied customers.

PRICES WILL BE HIGHER

It is not the question of selling these spreaders but in getting them that worries us, owing to the demand in other states where they have been selling them for some time. This machine has revolutionized the spreader business. Get in on the ground floor and obtain one while you can at a reasonable price.

MARRIED AT CLINTON

Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock at the pleasant home of the brides mother occured the marriage of Miss Margaret Campbell and Dr. C. C. Johnson of Jackson. Both are popular young Clinton people.

Dr. Johnson is a former Clinton young man and has always made his home with his people who live on a large farm, west of town, until he learned the dentistry, graduating from Ann Arbor last June and is now a promising young Dentist of Jackson Miss Campbell is well known and a favorite among her acquaintances.

At three o'clock the wedding march was heard and softly played by Miss Cora Johnson. Little Robt. and Anna Campbell formed the pathway leading to the prettily decorated dining room of green and white. The couple marched in and took their places beneath a white arch where Rev. Latham of Congregation church performed the marriage ceremony with ring service. The bride wore white and carried a boquet of red roses and a wreath of orange blossoms festooned her hair A three course wedding lunch was then delightfully served after which the happy couple took the evening train for Detroit before returning to their home in Jackson. A shower of rice followed them as they left the station. Misses Blanche Robison and Opal Hogan accompanied them as far as Manchester. Their many friends join us in congratulations

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN LEAGUE MUST OBSERVE RULES

Jas. P. Bowen, president of the So. Michigan League says that the rules submitted by him and adopted at the League meeting at Lansing must be carried out in every detail.

"What we want is a fair deal for everyone," and if the 13-man is adopted we don't want clubs getting by with 15 or 16 and if the salary limit is fixed at $1,500, the owners must stick.

"There will be another meeting in June, at which time several owners will come through and say that they are over the limit and then have the thing passed up. If the rules are to be broken, I would like to know it tomorrow, so all clubs will start on an equal basis, that's all.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis.

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

BUTTE MINE DISASTER

Two Killed and Twelve Overcome by Timber Gas.

Fire in Modoc Mines at Butte Held a Cause of Deaths—Belangle Proves Himself a Hero.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 16—Michael Belangle, a contract miner in the High Ore Mine of the Anaconda company, and James Carney, a shift boss in the Bell and Diamond mine, were killed by timber gas arising from a fire that broke out underground in the Modoc mine, an adjoining and connecting mine, Saturday night. Twelve other men were overcome, but were revived.

Belangle, who was a Spanish war veteran, succeeded in placing Stephen Hogan and Dennis Lynch, two pumpmen on the cage and sending them to the surface when he collapsed and died. Carney was engaged with three assistants in bulk-heading a connecting drift, when all were overcome and before they were discovered and rescued. Carney was beyond aid.

Sample Helps Frail Women

So many women are dragging out weary lives just because their digestive organs are weak. The result is poor circulation, nervousness and the verge of invalidism. It is often very unnecessary and the woman's own fault.

The first thing to do is to look to the welfare of your bowels. There the trouble usually lies. All physicians know that a large percentage of women are habitually constipated, and from this results indigestion, piles, weariness, etc., that women constantly complain of. But there is no use taking "female remedies" and things of that kind until you have started your bowels to moving. You will find that when the bowels move regularly once or twice a day all your petty ills will disappear. Take a good, mild laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for awhile and you will find yourself rapidly getting better and stronger, your bowels will regulate themselves and work at stated times, and then your headaches and dizziness will disappear. Don't take strong cathartic pills or salts, but just such a mild and pleasant-tasting remedy as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

You can obtain a bottle of your druggist for fifty cents or one dollar, and either size may be enough to permanently cure you. Thousands of women keep it regularly in the house and will no longer be without it, as it cured them and can be used with safety by every member of the family, down to the youngest child, but if you have never used it take the advice of Mrs. Earl S. Cox, 409 Twenty-fifth street, Moline, Ill., and Mrs. Ellen Dungan, Muncie, Ind., and send to Dr. Caldwell for a free trial bottle, as they did, and learn for yourself what it will do in your own case. That it will cure you, as it did them, there is no doubt.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

CORRESPONDENCE'

BRITTON.

Mrs. Harry Temple was in Toledo Saturday

Mrs. Henry Bachman and Viva were Adrian visitors Friday.

Miss Fern VanNest is home from Detroit.

Ed Harrison and family of Ridgeway spent Sunday with M. D. Britton and wife.

Lavern Taylor was here from Detroit to attend the funeral of his grandfather.

OBITUARY

On Sunday evening at 10 o'clock occuren the death of Wm Taylor, the oldest resident of this vicinity, he having on the day preceding his death, attained the age of 95 years, and as had been the custom of his children for several years they were home for the occasion, This time, owing perhaps to his illness, it was quietly and reverently kept for they realized that the race was nearly run and the goal in sight.

His had bean a remarkable record, for until the last four weeks he had been active, taking much concern about the affairs around him. At that time he was taken with a hard cold which affected the heart and even then until Thursday he was up and around the house part of the time.

Mr. Tayler was born in Yorkshire, England, Jan. 7, 1816, and on July 4, 1841, he was married to Mary Todd. As a blessing to this union six children were born, two of whom and his wife had preceded him to the better world.

He and his wife and three children came to America in 1851, spending their first year in Raisinville. The next year he came to this township and helped lay thd plank on the old plank road, afterward working in the brick yard owned by Thos. Lupton.

In March, 1856, he bought 40 acres of land where he built his homestead and where he passed away.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were members of the primitive Methodist church of England and while they never united with any church here they always loved to attend Divine worship. His place was never vacant when it was possible for him to go and on New Years moening he expressed his regret tnat he was unable to attend church. To the last he was happy in his faith in a heavenly father's love and his hope beyond the grave. Only a few hours before his death he tried to sing "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and thus passed into a sleep to awaken in realms above.

The funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 10:30 at the Christian church conducted by Revs. Maxwell, Main and Harper, the grandsons acting as pall bearers. Burial at Ridgeway.

CLINTON

Feed house and hog pen, straw stack burned to the ground.

The feed house and hog pen also straw stack of Mike Wallace west of town burned to the ground Saturday night. Mr. Wallace had been cooking feed for his hogs and left the building for a while to do some other chores and in some way the building caught fire from the cooker and was beyond control before he could make an attempt to put it out. Luckily the direction of the wind saved the house and barn.

Quite a little excitement was caused Friday by little Jerry Boomer west of Clinton when it became known that the little fellow could not be found, neighbors were aroused and a diligent search was commenced. Eventually the little fellow was asleep in the corner of a room behind a machine oblivious of the scare his absence had created.

An interesting letter was received from Harry Kies in which he states that crops are above the average in the vicinity in which he lives in Cuba and he is marketing pine apples, grapes and other tropical fruit.

Harold Reed who is visiting at Bert Hittles was a guest of Eugene Eddy Saturday.

The two children of Vern Barrett of Tecumseh were over Sunday visitors at James Woodwards.

St John's wonking society met with Mrs. A. M. Kennedy Wednesday and tied a comforter for Mrs. Sara Steves.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe back aches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

NEGROES LYNCHED BY MASKED MOB

Rope Holding Two Broke and Victims Were Shot.

MOB ORDERLY BUT DETERMINED

Two of Men Lynched Were Held For Attacking White Girls and One For Killing an Old Negro Woman—Mob a Small One.

Shelbyville, Ky., Jan. 16.—A mob of twenty persons visited the jail here, demanded the keys of Jailer Edward Thompson and proceeded to hang three negroes who were incarcerated in the jail, two of whom were held on the charge of detaining white women, and the third for murdering an old negro woman. The mob was an orderly one, but determined, and all were heavily masked.

Before visiting the jail, the mob raided a blacksmith shop, secured a sledge hammer, a bolt cutter and various other tools. They went to the jail and demanded the keys. The jailer foresaw trouble if he did not comply with the wishes of the crowd, and surrendered the keys.

Within a moment the big doors had been opened and the men were inside the jail. They they proceeded to cut th bolts which held the doors of the cage in which the prisoners were sleeping. Despite the pleading of the negroes they were dragged through the streets and hanged just before daylight on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad bridge.

The three negroes were Eugene Marshall, who had been sentenced to be hanged for the murder of an old negro woman here; Wade Patterson, charged with detaining Elisabeth Ruben, a white girl against her will, and James West, also charged with detaining Mary Coley, a white girl here about a month ago. All pleaded for their lives, but were hurried to the bridge and strung up.

As they were being executed, the rope which held Patterson and West broke and the two men sprang up and ran through the woods nearby to escape. Drawing their guns, the mob literally riddled the body of Patterson with bullets. He was shot in at least a dozen places. The body of West has not been located. It is certain, however, that he is dead.

LEAPS TO HIS DEATH

H. R. Whitmore, Rich St. Louisan, Kills Self Over Ill Health.

Leaped from Eighth Story of Hotel in St. Louis and Was Crushed to Death on Pavement.

St. Louis, Jan. 16. — Henry Roger Whitmore, aged 68, former assistant secretary of the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange, leaped from the eighth floor of the Marquette hotel here to the Washington avenue pavement, death being instantenous. He left a note in his room in the hotel saying: "The doctor says I will be utterly helpless and bedridden the rest of my life. I prefer death. Be charitable in your judgment. Notify Clarence L. Hoblitzelle, of 4071 Washington boulevard, and Dr. John Rule, of 5227 Kensington avenue."

He was stricken by paralysis three years ago. Since then he has been a patient in the St. Louis Baptist sanitarium, which he left to take a room in the Marquette hotel. His nephew, Charles E. Whitmore, 27 West Forty-Fourth street, New York, here on business, took charge of the body.

In 1884 the suicide married the wealthy widow of Napoleon Mulliken. She was the daughter of George Knapp, former publisher of the St. Louis Republican, now the Republic. She died five years ago.

TWO CHICAGO FAILURES

Influx of Butter Causes Decrease in Demand for Storage Product.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The great influx of fresh winter butter from the farms has played havoc with the Chicago butter and egg brokers who have invested freely in cold storage products. Following the decreased demand for the stored butter and eggs and the threatening aspect of the butter market, two firms, E. J. Piggott, 35 River street, and E. L. McAdams, 34 La Salle street, failed.

The unwonted activity of the cows in giving milk this winter, according to butter brokers, has terrorized the cold storage dealers. At present it is reported that there is a surplus of 20,000,000 pounds of butter in the associated warehouses.

W. F. AYRES

Suffered a Stroke of Apoplexy While at His Place of Business in Adrian

William F. Ayres, local manager for the Standard Oil company, in charge of the station located near the Lake Shore station, suffered a severe attack of apoplexy Monday about 2:30 p. m. and it was necessary to call Mott's ambulance to convey him to his home 18 East Church street. He was busy in the yard near the office at that time and was noticed to fall. Assistance was soon at hand, but he was unconscious. Dr. Clifford Kirkpatrick was called and recognized the symptoms as apoplexy. He revived a little after he was taken to his home but has been in a semi-conscious state most of the time since. His condition is serious.

Mr. Ayers is one of the oldest traveling salesmen in this section, having a wide acquaintance through southern Michigan and northern Ohio and Indiana. He has been with the Standard Oil company for many years For the past year or more he has not been in rugged health, but prior to that he was a perfect specimen of a healthy man, scarcely knowing a day's illness since young boyhood. Adrian Telegram.

Mr. Ayres having always been a frequent vistor in Tecumseh, has many friends here who regret to hear of his illness.

Word has been received that Mr. Ayres passed away yesterday morning at his home in Adrian. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon.

"Doan's Ointment cured me of eczema that had annoyed me a long time. The cure was permanent."—Hon. S. W. Matthews, Commissioner Labor Statistics, Augusta, Me.

BASEBALL NEWS.

EDDIE PRESTON WANTS TO JOIN THE CRICKETS

Former Tecumseh Player Unattached

Eddie Preston, last year with Bay City and one of the best known outfielders in the Southern Michigan league, has been released by Mo Myers of the Billiken outfit, and wants a berth on the Battle Creek team.

Preston has been in this circuit for several years, playing at Tecumseh, Jackson and Bay City. The season of 1910 was the worst that he ever put in and the fact that he was with a second-rate club probably had some thing to do with this.

He is a fair out-fielder and as a rule a mighty dangerous and heavy hitter. In 1908 he was considered one of the heaviest hitters in the circuit and in 1909 with Jackson he met the ball hard and often. Last season he fell off considerably in his hitting, and was released three times by Bay City, being signed each time. Ever since the season closed he has been after his release from Bay City but Myers would not come across until last week.

One reason that he wants to play in Battle Creek is because that city is his home. He has wintered there every off season with the exception of this, and states that he thinks he would be able to play better ball there than any other place in the circuit. No action has been taken on his application as yet.—Adrian Telg.

"Cuppy" Groeschow, who recently lost an arm in the machines at the Peerless Fence Factory, will become an umpire in the Central League.

For Lagrippe, Coughs, Stuffy Colds

Take Foley's Honey and Tar. It gives quick relief and expels the cold from your system. It contains no opiates, is safe and sure. Sold by all druggists.

Idleness eats the heart of men, and consumes them as rust does iron.

A Reliable Cough Medicine

Is a valuable family friend. Foleys Honey and Tar fulfills this condition exactly. Mrs. Chas. Kline, N. 8th St., Easton, Pa., states: "Several members of my family have been cured of bad coughs and colds by the use of Foleys Honey and Tar and I am never without a bottle in the house. It soothes and relieves the irritation in the throat and loosens up the cold. I have always found it a reliable cough cure." Sold by all druggists.

It is hard to pay as you go when u are going broke.

Parrots in a Fire.

In all likelihood no fireman on duty is going to stand around with his hand in his pockets long enough to read the warning, nevertheless it is printed in large type above the bird fancier's desk:

"In case of fire save the parrots last. They are best able to take care of themselves."

"Looks like hard luck for the parrots," remarked a visitor.

"I have no grudge against them," said the bird man. "I am only trying to protect the smaller and more delicate birds. When a fire starts in a bird store most persons who join the rescue party make a grab for the parrots. First aid should be extended to the canaries. They and other small birds are mighty soon overcome by the smoke. The parrot is no phoenix but unless he is actually reduced to ashes he can put up a pretty stiff fight against a fire and can hold his own until the rescuers make a second invasion."—New York Sun.

The Menu Card in Its First Form.

In its old fashioned form the menu was usually written large on cards of such imposing dimensions that room for one only could be found at each end of the board. In the medieval dinner this aid to selection must have been an absolute necessity, for the medieval dinner was a mine of surprises. It was divided into courses, as are our own dainty meals; but, whereas nowadays the diner has a general idea that fish will follow soup and that the entree is succeeded by releve and can conceive generally the sort of demand that each course will make upon his appetite and digestion, there was no possible arguing as to what was going to happen at an early English dinner, and close study fails to reveal the existence of any principle of arrangement.

The Site of the White House.

The site for the president's palace, as the first maps name it, was selected by President Washington and Major L'Enfant when they laid out the federal city in 1792. They purposed to have the president's house and the capitol reciprocally close to the long vista formed by Pennsylvania avenue, and they also laid out a parklike connection between the two great buildings. The plans for the house, selected by Washington and Jefferson as the result of a competition in which L'Enfant took part, were drawn by James Hoban, a native of Dublin and a medal man of the Society of Arts of that city.

The Music of the Nightingale.

But the nightingale, another of my airy creatures, breathes such sweet loud music out of her little instrumental throat that it might make mankind to think miracles are not ceased. He that at midnight, when the very laborer sleeps securely, should hear, as I often have, the clear airs, the sweet descants, the natural rising and falling, the doubling and redoubling of her voice, might well be lifted above earth and say, Lord, what music hast thou provided for the saints in heaven when thou affordest bad men such music on earth!—Walton's "The Complete Angler."

Real Tragedy.

"Mrs. Browne was very rude to an overdressed old woman she met on a car the other day."

"I know the story. The old woman turned out to be Matilda's very rich aunt, and now she's going to give all her money to a hospital for decrepit dogs."

"Nothing of the sort. In fact, it's worse. The old woman was the Browne's new cook, and now they haven't any."—Stray Stories.

They Didn't Help.

"Did the audience weep while I was singing?" asked the temperamental soprano.

"No," replied the music director; "you were making that noise all by yourself."—Washington Star.

Passports in Russia.

Every person arriving in Russia is required to surrender his passport to the owner or manager of the hotel or house he stops at and if married give all information as to the name and ages of his wife and children, so as to enable the house owner or hotel proprietor to complete the blank prescribed by law for submittance with the passport to the respective police district station for registration. The blanks are made out in duplicate, one copy being filled out at the police station and the other forwarded to the address bureau, at which place it is possible to learn the address of any one residing, temporarily or otherwise, in the city. A similar blank is filled out when the party moves into another house or leaves the city, notation being made as to the destination. The traveler in leaving need only inform the hotel management or house owner, provided he is living in private apartments, of his departure and give the name of the city or country he is bound for.

The Retort Legal.

"Sometimes the law seems unjust for the reason that it isn't comprehended," said a judge. "Take the case of the woman prisoner before Sir Edward Coke. This woman appeared in court with her hat on. The judge said sternly:

"'A woman may be covered in church, but not when arraigned in a court of justice.'

"To this the woman replied:

"'It seems singular that I may wear my hat in the presence of God, but not in the presence of man.'

"And she would appear, in her legal ignorance, to have got the better of the argument until Sir Edward Coke retorted:

"'It isn't singular at all. Man, with his weak intellect, cannot discover secrets known to God, and therefore in investigating truth the court must see all obstacles put aside. Accordingly it is fitting that the prisoner's hat be removed and with it the shadow that it casts on her face.'"

He Didn't Like Connecticut.

"I have always had a mild interest," said the lawyer, "in the origin of the Connecticut Yankee's reputation, but I had no idea that it extended so far back until I ran across in the surrogate's office the other day the will of Lewis Morris of Morrisania, made in 1760 and admitted to probate in 1762. It contains this paragraph:

"'It is my desire that my son, Gouverneur Morris, may have the best Education that is to be had in England or America but my Express Will and Directions are that he be never sent for that purpose to the Colony of Connecticut, least he should imbibe in his youth that low Craft and cunning so incident to the people of that Country, which is so interwoven in their constitutions that all their art cannot disguise it from the world, tho many of them under the Sanctifyed garb of Religion have Endeavoured to Impose themselves on the World for honest Men.'"—New York Sun.

"Beautiful as a Dachshund."

It is in the drawing rooms of the German diplomats and their friends that you meet occasionally the long haired, aesthetic masculine beings whom you have perhaps noticed skating in the Tiergarten, with their long coats flapping in the breeze, or hunched over a journal at Bauer's—artists and writers whose names every one knows, and there are dozens of young army officers, their cheeks scarred with the wounds of many duels. They talk Wagner and Schopenhauer with serious appreciation, and in the midst of the waltz as they are spinning fraulein giddily around and around like an animated top you may overhear them whispering in her ear, "You are as beautiful as a dachshund."

It is their supreme compliment.—Delineator.

A Grewsome Bequest.

What is probably the strangest and at the same time the most horrible bequest ever made is to be found in the will of Lieutenant de Pap, formerly an officer in a smart regiment of Austrian hussars, who was executed by strangling some years ago for the murder of his brother.

Previous to his execution the murderer requested that he might be photographed while hanging on the gallows and a copy of the ghastly picture sent to his father.

Scott's Emulsion

is a wonderful food-medicine for all ages of mankind. It will make the delicate, sickly baby strong and well—will give the pale, anemic girl rosy cheeks and rich, red blood. It will put flesh on the bones of the tired, overworked, thin man, and will keep the aged man or woman in condition to resist colds or pneumonia in the winter.

The Rates on Second-Class Matter.

It would seem highly unwise to attempt any changes of postal rates with so few facts available as to the relationship of one part of the business to another. For many years second-class matter has been carried by the Government at one cent a pound. Under existing rates the Post-Office would be earning large profits except for the franked matter carried free and the unprofitable free-delivery services. The parcels post will make the rural delivery self-sustaining. But even with these things as they are, the deficit is very small and with careful administration Mr. Hitchcock will have it all wiped out within six months. A proposal, therefore, arbitrarily to increase the rate on second-class matter would seem ill-advised. When such a proposal was first made by Mr. Taft, the newspapers protested vigorously and the proposition was changed to one that should distinguish between newspapers and periodicals. Mr. Taft proposed to increase the rates on periodicals without increasing those on newspapers. The postal committees of Congress, after careful study, could not recommend such a scheme. This year Mr. Taft changes the proposal entirely and suggests the possibility of weighing separately the advertising pages of magazines, leaving their reading matter to be circulated in the mails at one cent a pound while charging a higher rate for the advertising part. It is only fair to say Mr. Taft does not claim to have studied this subject, and he makes the suggestion to Congress as involving facts that are worthy of study by the Postal Committees. The truth is that from the business standpoint the Post-Office could ill-afford to discriminate against magazine advertising. No other one thing causes so many letters to be sent through the mails as the business publicity that makes use of general advertising. There are no facts in existence that would justify the placing of a higher postal rate that is paid by newspapers. Nor has any one as yet given us a definition by which to distinguish between the newspapers and the other periodicals. This REVIEW is in so-called "magazine" form; yet it claims to be a newspaper in the strictest sense of the word.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for January.

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer—who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—but with the help of the Review of Reviews, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little-known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

ARE YOU DEAF?

Catarrh is Probably the Cause Get Rid of the Cause

If you have catarrh and have constant ringing noises in your ears look into the matter at once.

It's a pretty sure sign that catarrh is spreading and is making its way through the Eustachian tubes that lead from the nose to the ears.

When catarrh gets to the ears partial deafness follows. If you have ringing noises in your ears go to C. A. Wright & Son to-day and get a HYOMEI outfit and drive out catarrh.

To cure catarrh HYOMEI should be breathed through a pocket inhaler for a few minutes, four or five times a day. Just poura few drops into the hard rubber inhaler and breathe it.

It kills the germs; soothes the irritation; heals the inflamation; stops hawking, spitting and snuffling.

HYOMEI keeps the throat free from mucus and prevents crusts in nose.

The complete HYOMEI outfit which includes the indestructible hard rubber inhaler, a bottle of HYOMEI and simple instructions for use, costs $1.00. Separate bottles of HYOMEI costs 50 cents at duggists every, or at C. A. & Son on money back plan.

JOHN H. COMBS HEARD FROM

CONCERNING NEW PLANT ESTABLISHED AT FREMONT, OHIO

Now Ready For Business--Bright Outlook

The Fremont Daily News publishes an Interview held with J. H. Combs, formerly of Tecumseh, now general manager and secretary of the Fremont Furnace Company. Other officers are:—President, T. C. Harris, Treasurer, W. R. Eberly. We give the interview as published by the Fremont paper, as it explains itself more fully to the many interested readers.

"We expect to begin active operation in a very short time, as soon as some extra machinery can be installed. We mean business and we are here to stay. We came here entirely unsolicited, did not expect a single penny of bonus and did not receive any. We located in Fremont because of your shipping facilities, because it is a factory town, and from its location has many natural advantages for the manufacture and sale of our product So far we all like Fremont very much, and we hope Fremont will like us. While we are small now, we trust we may grow and become some addition to the industrial side of this city. We have spent our money here.

"The entire work on this factory was done by Fremont workmen and we expect to employ Fremont labor, so far as is possible. in all the departments.

"With the single exception of the cupola and steel trusses in our foundry which we could not buy here, every dollar's worth of material in the entire plant was purchased in Fremont. We are glad to do this, as it is the policy of our company and the desire of every man in it, to boost the town we live in. We are for Fremont first and all the time.

"Because of these things and because our product is durable, substantial and has many advantages not found in other makes of furnace, we hope for our share of patronage from the citizens here, and trust we will at least merit the good will of everybody. With the development of our business, all the members of our company will locate here with their families as soon as possible.

"The business policy of this company is broad and liberal for good goods and square dealing. We have so far been treated splendidly in our business dealings with Fremont citizens and appreciate their uniform kindness and courtesy. Our latch string is always on the outside and you are welcome any time."

This company has certainly hustled things since its inception and the decision to locate in Fremont. Ground was first broken for the new plant October 1. 1910, and the building was completed within 90 days, being ready for occupancy January 1, 1911. The company has purchased from the Jackson Shear and Razor company, 100 feet frontage on Wolf avenue, extending back to the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R. R. siding, assuring perfect shipping facilities, and also secured an option on all the remaining property north to the front line of the Lincoln Stove and Range company land, intending as business develops to cover the entire ground, with factory buildings. The site is especially valuable for all factory purposes with every facility at hand, water, sewer and gas mains already installed on Wolf avenue, and the Lake Shore sidetracks within six feet of the rear end of the plant. The The company is very fortunate in securing so desirable and valuable location. The entire plant is a credit to the city as well as to the company, representing as it does, the hustle, energy and business enterprise of the gentlemen connected with the concern. The front portion of the plant is two stories high with office and display rooms on the lower floors and tin shop and stock rooms above. The lower floors are completed in natural wood colors, southern pine finish, oiled and varnished, and the entire plant is equipped with both natural gas and electricity for lighting and heating. The centre portion of the building is occupied by a large assembling room, with cement floor, and equipped with machinery and drill presses, power presses, steel cutters, dies, emery wheels, etc. In the rear is the foundry room 50 feet square with self-supporting roof of steel trusses with sky lights and ventilating windows, and is particularly well lighted and constructed. It is equipped with all tools and machinery to facilitate the work. Adjoining the foundry on the north is the cupola building 20 feet square and connected with the main building with a large archway. This building is two stories high with a commodous room at the charging floor which is connected with the shipping dock by a substantial bridge for the elevation of iron ore, coke and other material used in this department. This room is absolutely fire-proof, with heavy iron girders and steel plate floor, with ceiling lined with asbestos and sheet steel. Every danger from fire has been avoided as far as possible throughout the entire plant.

The receiving and shipping dock is wide and roomy, level with the car platforms. Here is also located the latest improved Howe scales with stationary platform for the weighing of ore and products. The coke shed fronts the car track and is conveniently arranged. The cupola used is the latest pattern of Collieu cupola with all modern improvements. It is 40 feet high with 49 inch shell and has a melting capacity of 5 tons per hour. It was purchased from the Bryam company, of Detroit, and with the inner brick lining weighs nearly thirty tons.

The company will manufacture every part of the furnace they make in their own plant, and have spared no expense in equipping and arranging the entire plant with every posible convenience.

The furnace which this company will place on the market is not an untried product. On the contrary it has been on the market for many years. and in Hamilton, Out., alone there are several hundred furnaces, similar in design and construction, in daily use, and each heater has given the utmost satisfaction. In fact the Fremont Furnace company states its furnace will use one-third less fuel than many other furnaces. The guarantee is backed up with many years of usage the furnace has had.

The Fremont concern has acquired the American rights for the United States and J. W. Bolton, superintendent of the Fremont plant, is the inventor and patentee, and previous to associating himself with the present company, had entire charge of the Hamilton factory. He is an experienced man in the business, having spent his entire life in the manufacture of furnaces.

The furnace is similar in designs to other furnaces, with the exception that it retains and controls all the heat, which in other furnaces is often times wasted. It is really a furnace within a furnace, and furnishes double radiation The additional heat is controlled in the inner hot air chamber, and can be forced into all the rooms of the building at will, or into any single room by the revolving elbow in the top of the dome, without changing the temperature in any room or taking away heat from other parts of the building. This revolving elbow is made of galvanized iron and revolves freely in either direction, so that the free end of the elbow can be brought directly opposite any hot air pipe, and all the hot air passing through the elbow may be directed in to one particular pipe for the purpose of especially heating the room to which the pipe leads.

This is one of the great improvments the company claims for the Fremont furnace, and this point is protected by patents.

The new plant was erected under the careful supervision of Mr. Combs, and is model in every detail, no expense being spared to make it a model factory,

John H. Combs, T. C. Harris and W. R. Eberly are all well known in Tecumseh, the former having resided here for eight years, previous to his removal to Fremont, last fall. Their many friends will be interested to hear of their good luck and are sure that with three such men at the head, the Fremont Furnace Company will prove a grands success.

What To Do
—FOR—
Sickly Children
Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

SLAYER ESCAPES CROWD

Mother Accused of Murdering Young Son Benefits by Ruse of Police.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 16.—A ruse of the Albany police disappointed several thousand persons who crowded the union station and streets outside to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Edith Melber, the young Scenectady, widow brought here from Rochester to answer the charge of murdering her 5-year-old son, George.

They had the express stopped at West Albany, three miles from the center of the city, and Mrs Melber and the detectives who brought her from Rochester got out there. There were a few shouts and hoots as several policemen hurried her away, but nothing like an organized movement. Though pale and trembling, the woman preserved her composure until she got inside, then she fainted.

Free Dyspepsia Sample

Sufferers from indigestion are waking up to the fact that peppermint lozenges, charcoal and "dyspepsia cures" are only makeshifts in the cure of so troublesome a complaint as chronic indigestion. What is required is something that will not only relieve but which will tone and train the digestive apparatus to again do its work normally, and this these simple remedies cannot do.

There is something more to the cure of indigestion than sweetening the breath, and yet a remedy that only contains digestive ingredients will not cure permanently, as the basis of indigestion is poor bowel circulation, and that requires a scientific laxative. We know of no remedy that combines these requirements better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which has been sold for a quarter of a century.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative tonic, a scientific blending of natural ingredients for the cure of constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sour stomach, sick headache and similar complaints. Its ingredients will so strengthen and tone the stomach and bowel muscles that they will again do their work naturally, and when that has been accomplished your trouble is over. Fannie Stuart, Staunton, Va., was a long-time sufferer, as was G. Tuck, Blackburn, Mo., and they both found their cure with this remedy. They became convinced that pills and tablets, salts, "dyspepsia cures," etc., were at best only temporary reliefs. They first accepted Dr. Caldwell's offer of a free sample bottle, which he willingly sends to anyone who forwards name and address. Later, having convinced themselves through the free sample, they bought Syrup Pepsin of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe backaches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

The Run of The Brindl Cat

"So you're goin' to pull out the Newton Special tonight, eh? Well, jest come over to the round-house with me an' I'll get the "Professor" ter tell yer a little somethin' about the run."

Prof. Lincoln is one of the oldest men that sits in the cab, and there isn't a more popular man on the whole payroll of the Central and Western Railroad company. His early life is shrouded in mystery. He has given evidence of coming from good stock, possessing a college education and a thorough knowledge of railroad matters. Promotion had frequently been offered him, and as frequently refused. He was living down something in his past, life—what it was no one knows, but he is content to spend the remainder of his life at the throttle.

"Say, Professor, Bill here is goin' to make the run to Newton tonight, and if yer got anything handy about the run jest jog your memory 'and let Bill hear it. He's not made the run since he's been promoted to senior partner of a cab,"

"Well," said the professor, "there's one or two things about the run, but the most important to me was my maiden trip."

"Bill here has never engineered the trip before, so that'll be pretty 'propriate."

The professor lit his pipe, crossed his legs and made himself comfortable. "It was about 10 years ago," he began, "when I first pulled the Hurley and Newton special out of that same depot that still stands at Hurley today. I was still a young man, though I had been 13 years in the company's employ. It was my first run as engineer. Fred Baker was my 'fire.' It was on Saturday night, the last night of the county fair at Hurley, and three 'extras' were put on to accommodate the crowd. It was one of those raw April days, with the wind blowing a gale and the rain coming down in buckets. It was rather unwelcome weather for a first trip, but I didn't mind it. I was as happy as a school boy when we'all stood at 'No. 13' that night.

"Now, every railroad man is superstitious, but not very anxious to concede that fact. The boys tried to scare me a little before starting, and Fred asked if I wasn't a little bit skeery, about the unlucky '13' on the engine's head plate. No, I wasn't, and I told him I was 13 years in the business and lucky enough to get promoted.

"'Say,' chimed in one of the boys, 'this is run No. 26, and that's '13 twice.'

"'And,' added the conductor, 'the run is 113 miles, and we're due in Newton at 3:13.'

"I tried to laugh at the unfortunate occurrence of thirteens, and said they couldn't count 13 stars in the sky, and I was right, for the rain continued to fall with no sign of abating.

"We left Hurley on time with instructions to go ahead at full speed. As we entered the north woods we could hear the rain coming through the foliage, rushing down the mountain side and running swiftly along the track drain.

"'Think there's any danger of a washout at Devil's Bend?' asked Fred.

"'If the trackwalkers do their duty there'll not be any danger.'

"We were nearing the block signal, which is the last one before the curve that leads to the straight stretch over Race river.

"'Did you hear that,' said Fred, and he turned sharply toward me, his eyes wide open, his face bearing evidence of fright.

"'I didn't hear anything.'

"'Maybe it's imagination,' said he, 'but I thought I heard a child's whine.'

"'You're a bit nervous, this is an awful night, but after we get over the Race trestle you'll feel a bit easier. Keep a sharp lookout on the block, we're near it.'

"'Both down,' said he.

"'Both down,' I replied, 'as the gallows-like block signal came into view, 'so the trestle must be all right.'

"'There, did you hear it again?'

"I did hear a distinct whine this time, but did not move from my seat. I'm not superstitious and that noise may not amount to anything, but you know the Race trestle was swept away years ago by a freshet. That noise, I thought, might be a bad sign.

"'There it is again; don't you hear it?' called Fred.

"I did hear it, and it seemed to come from in front of the cab. We listened anxiously but did not hear it repeated.

"We were nearing Sandstone curve; this is, as you know, the big curve before the straightaway which leads to the Race trestle. The high wall of white sandstone stood out visibly against the dark background of the woods, and appeared as a mighty phantom to overawe the superstitious. The headlight of No. 13 cast a brilliant glare on the white rock, leaving a dark halo outside the circle of light. Suddenly, in the center of the circle, there appeared a shadowy form resembling in shape a monstrous quadruped. Fred and I arose with a start.

"'Do you see it? What is it?' he cried, terrified.

"While the train was speeding onward, that terrible figure with massive legs, large head and tail, glided along the white wall following every turn and jar of the train, appearing as a warning spectacle. The whining noise, too, was again repeated at intervals.

"'The trestle is but half a mile,' called Fred.

In those words I read his thoughts—they corresponded with mine. 'I'm not going to try the trestle with the black phantom staring us in the face.'

"'I'm going to investigate,' said I, and quickly threw back the throttle and put down the brakes.

"The moving phantom on the rocks kept pace with the train, and with the slowing up of the engine the gloomy shadow also retarded. The Race trestle was but a hundred yards away.

"I left the train to investigate. A loud thunderous noise, a crashing of heavy timbers and steel trusses, an enormous splash and we realized what had happened. The trestle across Race river was swept away. No sign of danger, no warning signal from man had saved the Newton Special from an awful fate. The phantom had been my warning.

"When I returned from investigating the fallen structure, you can imagine my astonishment when, looking at the headlight of No. 13, I saw, perched upon the light-stand a brindle cat, its opaque body intercepting the rays of light, causing the shadowy phantom to be projected on the white sandstone.

"That cat was the quadruped specter which had aroused my fears. It saved hundreds of lives; for if I had not stopped to investigate that shadow, we would all have gone with the fallen structure."

Today in the superintendent's room at Newton occupying a [illegible] hearth is that same cat, and the superintendent never tires of telling of the important part played by that animal on a certain memorable run, which he calls the "Run of the Brindle Cat."—H. C. Bloomberg.

Wasn't It Awful?

The serious girl and the frivolous young man were discussing the insolence of salespeople, and the serious girl had expressed her opinion in severe terms. "You're right," said the frivolous young man. "Let me tell you about my aunt. She's a maiden lady, and likes to get herself up in a somewhat giddy way. To tell the truth, she's rather an antique. The other day she went into a drug store. "Have you any powder you can recommend for the face?" she asked.

"'Whose face?' demanded the clerk.

"'Mine,' said my aunt.

"'You don't want powder,' said the clerk. 'What you want is dynamite.'"

"Wasn't it awful!" exclaimed the serious girl.

"It was," agreed the frivolous young man, disappointed in not getting a rise. "But it wasn't a marker to what happened to her at the butcher's. My aunt, in common with most maiden ladies, has a pet cat. One day she went to the butcher shop and said: 'Have you any cat meat?' "The butcher said he had.

"'Give me five cents' worth, please,' said my aunt.

"'Yes, ma'am,' said the butcher. 'Will you take it with you or eat it here?'"

"Wasn't it awful!" reiterated the serious girl. "I should have slapped his face. So there!"

Sincere Courtesy.

At a dance given by a certain set in Philadelphia society there was one participant, a man from Wilmington, who met with a mishap on the floor due to his lack of skill in dancing.

The Wilmington person observed to one guest: "Sir, you are the only gentleman in the room."

"Thanks," was the dry response. "May I inquire what motive has led to this complimentary outburst on your part?"

"Why," explained the out-of-towner, "when I tripped in the dance just now and fell sprawling to the floor, incidentally ripping off a large section of my charming partner's gown, you were the only one in the place who did not laugh."

The guest smiled grimly. "The explanation lies in the fact that the lady is my wife, and that I have paid for the gown."—Harper's Weekly.

FIVE PERISH IN FIRE

Mother, Three Children and a Maid Are Victims.

Disaster Occurs in Toronto While the Husband and Father Is Away on a Business Trip.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 23.—Five persons were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the residence of Percy C. Brooks, manager and treasurer of the Canadian Fairbanks company and the Morse Canadian Manufacturing company. The house was at 435 Indian road, in the western part of the city, one of the fashionable residence districts.

The dead are Mrs. Brooks, her three children—Percy Jr., seven years old, George, four years old, and Wendell, three years old—and a maid, whose name is not known.

The only other occupant of the building, the second maid, saved her life by jumping, but was seriously burned and will probably die. She was unable to give the police any account of the tragedy.

The bodies were recovered after the fire had burned itself out. The husband and father is in Chicago on business.

San Francisco, Jan. 23.—Philip O. Parmlee, the Wright aviator, established a new record for duration here when he cruised in the upper air currents over Selfridge field for 3 hours and 39 minutes, 48 seconds before bringing his machine to the ground.

Parmlee's feat breaks the record of 3 hours and 17 minutes, made by Arch Hoxsey, shortly before his death. The record will stand as official, being made in the presence of Maj. Erneste V. Smith, accredited representative of the Natoinal Association of Aero Clubs of America.

QUIZ FOR SEE JURORS

Three Hundred Questions Will Be Put to the Talesmen.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—A list of 300 questions is being prepared by counsel for Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the "Absolute Life" cult, now under arrest, which will be exhausted on each prospective juror before he may qualify to sit in judgment of the "prophet," who is to be placed on trial before Judge Goins in the criminal branch of the municipal court on charges of a serious nature.

Because of the many questions to be asked, it is likely that several days will be required to get a jury.

JONES ADMITS HE BRIBED ELECTORS

WILL GO BEFORE GRAND JURY

One Hundred Subpoenas Issued for Vermilion County Politicians—Cannon's Son-in-Law Before Grand Jury.

Danville, Ill., Jan. 23.—City Attorney Frank W. Jones, who assisted in the campaign of John T. Shepard, sheriff, who defeated Hardy Whitlock for election, made a full confession to several newspaper men. He admitted that his election had cost him much money and that he had handled money for another candidate. He stated that up to a day or two ago he had poll books and lists of men to whom money was paid, but that they were destroyed.

Jones stated that he could not remember many of the names, but that if all other candidates and former candidates would go before the grand jury and tell what they knew, he believed that his memory would be refreshed.

During the day politicians and all who have had any part in the elections within recent years were excited and feared lest the investigation be deeper than was anticipated when the grand jury was called together. It was said that all efforts to throw cold water on the probe had failed and that there was only one thing to do, which was for all candidates and their henchmen who had anything to do with vote buying go before the grand jury and tell all they knew.

One hundred subpoenas for Vermilion county politicians were issued by the grand jury investigating alleged vote buying immediately after six of the wealthiest bankers of Danville had appeared before the inquisitorial body.

The subpoenas were placed in the hands of deputy sheriffs for service. According to reports politicians of both parties and of both high and low standing in the community are named in the huge list. Already a general exodus of ward workers and small fry politicians has begun.

E. X. Lesuere, son-in-law of Joseph Cannon and the speaker's local campaign manager, was before the grand jury. He remained in the room half an hour longer than the other banker witnesses. When he emerged he said to a friend:

"They seem much interested in my business. It must be because of my father-in-law. I couldn't give them any exclusive information."

As Lesuere is leader of the Cannon faction and one of the inner council of the Danville federal clique, the grand jury secured many leaders for the grueling of the "little fellows."

No one has charged that Banker Lesuere personally bought votes at $2, $3 and $5 a ballot, any more than it is charged that Uncle Joe handed out greenbacks to the hungry voting hordes at the Danville polls. There can be no doubt, however, that he is familiar with the vote-buying system and that his suggestions will help the grand jury. The other banker bondsmen who were before the grand jury were M. E. King, president Second National; M. J. Wolford, president Palmer National; C. L. English, president First National; C. V. McClenathan, cashier Danville National; L. D. Gass, cashier First National.

CLUB WILL GIVE KERN FEAST

Democrats Announce Celebration With Judge Adams as Toastmaster.

Indianapolis, Jan. 23.—The celebration of the Indiana Democratic club, in honor of the election of John W. Kern to the United States senate, will be held at the Denison hotel next Thursday. It will be in the nature of an informal dinner, according to E. E. Thompson, who is chairman of the committee in charge.

Jacob F. Hoke, president of the Indiana Democratic club, will act as chairman, and introduce the toastmaster, Judge Andrew M. Adams of the appellate court. The speakers of the evening will be Senator-Elect John W. Kern, Gov. Marshall, Thomas Taggart and J. Hamilton Lewis of Chicago. The banquet will be informal in every way and tickets will be sold by the members of the club.

FALLING TREE KILLS MAN

Charles Allen Has Neck Broken in Peculiar Woods Accident.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 23.—Charles Allen, a well known Washtenaw county farmer, was instantly killed in the woods near his farm, when a tree upon which he was working fell upon him and broke his neck.

The accident, which was witnessed by two men, was a most peculiar one. Mr. Allen was cutting down a small tree, and when he had nearly finished it, it fell over and its branches caught in another tree. With his last stroke Mr. Allen cut the smaller tree loose. The top formed a lever so that the base of the tree sprung up and struck Mr. Allen a blow on the side of the face sufficient to break his neck.

LIPTON'S LIFE IN PERIL BY MANIAC

Sir Thomas Is Threatened With Death In Own Home.

TEA MERCHANT'S RUSE FOILS

Pretends to Call Bank Messenger, but Summons Detectives Who Place Madman Under Arrest—Demanded $5,000.

London, Jan. 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton, the multimillionaire merchant and yachtsman, was threatened with death in his home by a lunatic with a razor, who demanded a large sum of money. Sir Thomas escaped through his own presence of mind, using the telephone under a subterfuge and calling the police, who placed the assailant under arrest after a battle.

The lunatic called at the Lipton residence, telling the butler he was a detective from Scotland Yard. "I must see Sir Thomas Lipton at once," declared the man. "His life has been threatened and it is necessary that I communicate with him without delay."

The supposed detective was admitted and Sir Thomas was ushered into the room. As soon as the millionaire merchant was in the room alone, the maniac dropped his disguise. He sprang between Sir Thomas and the door and drew a razor from his pocket. Flourishing this in the face of the yachtsman, he cried:

"I must have money. Give me one thousand pounds at once or I shall cut your throat."

Backing away, Sir Thomas said: "I havent the money with me now."

"Get it immediately or you are a dead man," exclaimed the lunatic.

Sir Thomas declared that if he could use the telephone he would summon a messenger from the bank with the money. The man consented to this and Lipton passed to another part of the room, where there was a telephone.

However, instead of calling up a bank he got into communication with Scotland Yard, asking that officers be sent at once. Then he offered his visitor a cigar, saying that the money would soon be at hand.

Detectives soon reached the house, accompanied by several policemen. As one of the men in civilian clothing entered the room, Sir Thomas exclaimed:

"Here is the messenger now."

The detective walked toward the maniac as though to hand him the tribute money. As he did so another of the officers entered the room and the lunatic became suspicious.

Springing back he again drew his razor, but before he could use it the officers pounced upon him and bore him to the floor. He struggled furiously, but soon was overcome by other policemen. He was locked up and will be remanded to an insane asylum.

BOY THIEVES ARE FOILED

Attempt to Rob Man in Home and Are Frightened Away.

Two Boys Are Arrested at Flint and One of Them Makes Clean Breast of the Whole Affair.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 23.—Harry Robinson, 17-year-old son of Fred Robinson, a farmer living south of Millington, and Earl Spain, aged 18, were arrested in connection with the attempted holdup of Philip Catsman, a coal dealer, at his home Saturday.

Robinson has made a clean breast of the affair. It is stated by Catsman that the boys went to his home, and when he opened the door one of them pointed a gun at his head and ordered him to throw up his hands. He put up a fight and they ran away. The police, armed with a description of the boys, had no trouble in locating them.

PASTORS TO AID MISSIONS

Chicago Ministers Adopt Self-Denial Plan to Raise Money.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Methodist Episcopal ministers of Chicago have joined to aid, by self-denial, in the raising of $300,000 as a quarter centennial jubilee fund for Corean missions. A week of abstinence soon is to be set.

By cutting out one meal a day, by eating round steak instead of the choicer cuts of beef, but walking instead of riding and by eliminating luxuries at every turn, the 210 pastors of Chicago and vicinity will cash the results of sacrifices to aid missions.

NARROWLY ESCAPES FUMES

Shelbyville Family Near-Victim of Baseburners in Home.

Shelbyville, Ind., Jan. 23.—The family of Wolf Adler had a narrow escape from being asphyxiated by poisonous fumes from two baseburners while they were asleep.

Mr. Adler arose at 6 o'clock, and as he got out of bed he fell to the floor on account of his weakened condition. He crawled to the door, opened it and let in fresh air. The members of the family also were affected by the gas.

BRYAN IS ACTIVE IN PARTY AFFAIRS

Peerless Leader Will Not Again Be a Candidate.

PROGRESSIVE MAN IS FAVORED

Brother of Famous Nebraskan Orator Writes Letter Urging Concerted Action on Progressive Man for U. S. Presidency.

Washington, Jan. 23.—William J. Bryan, three times candidate of the Democratic party for president, has again taken a hand in politics and engaged in an effort to insure the nomination of a progressive Democrat for the presidency in 1912. At the same time, it is indicated that Mr. Bryan himself will not again be a candidate for the nomination.

News of Bryan's renewed activity in party affairs was quietly imparted by his friends to Democrats who attended the Baltimore harmony conference, and has been the subject of discussion in inner party circles ever since. The campaign against the selection of a so-called reactionary Democrat for president is being conducted in the name of Charles W. Bryan, publisher of The Commoner, and a brother of the former nominee, but it is apparent that the movement eminates from the peerless leader.

Mr. Bryan's brother has written several letters to the former candidate's friends. Bryan's letter to the Bryan old guard is fairly constructive on the point that W. J. Bryan will not be a candidate for the presidency in 1912. "In considering available candidates for the presidency Mr. Bryan's name should not be included," says the letters that are sent out.

As viewed by many Democrats, the move is directed chiefly against the Judson Harmon boom. It is stated that the nomination of Woodrow Wilson or Champ Clark will be more acceptable to the sage of Lincoln. Gov. Harmon, when he was in Baltimore a fews days ago, was informed of the movement started at Lincoln. Democratic leaders generally have been concerned over the incident ever since they heard of the Bryan letter. All Democratic leaders still give Bryan credit for being a powerful factor in the party, and it is generally admitted that he will exercise great influence in the next national convention.

The Charles W. Bryan letter comments on the results of the November elections, and declares that in giving the Democrats a victory the voters had in mind the principles that were parmamount in 1908 and which were embodied in the Denver platform. A Democratic leader said:

"Victory in 1912 seems ours, but it is within the power of Mr. Bryan to accomplish the re-election of Mr. Taft. He has great influence, and it is to be hoped that he will not oppose the candidacy of any Democrat in the next Democratic national convention."

In view of the Bryan movement evidences of Champ Clark's aspirations is becoming daily more interesting to Democrats. Up to this time Mr. Clark has not indicated that he was out and out a candidate, but his friends believe that the buzz of the presidential bee is become more pleasing to him. Some Democrats regard Mr. Clark's self-sacrifice in the matter of urging the appointment of house committees by a committee instead of by the speaker as a clever move on his part to avoid stirring up the animosities that will arise through committee assignments.

LAST RITES FOR MORTON

Prominent Men Honor the Dead Insurance Chief.

Misleading Statements Said to Have Been Made by Attaches of the Hotel Where Morton Died.

New York, Jan. 23.—The funeral of Paul Morton, late president of the Equitable Assurance society, took place at St. Thomas' Episcopal church. Preceding public services there were brief private services at the Morton residence.

The honorary pallbearers were: Thomas F. Ryan, Theodore P. Shonts, E. J. Berwind, J. F. Harris, Thomas Spratt, E. B. Thomas, I. S. Withersbee, James McMahon, C. H. Zehnder and Valentine P. Snyder.

Misleading statements by the attaches of the Hotel Seymour, the coroner states, and a lack of explanation for Mr. Morton's presence in room 55, where his body was found, have made him determined to solve the puzzle, if possible, and inquest is pending.

Coroner Feinberg said that he believed that Mr. Morton knew neither Mr. Kiernan nor his wife, who had occupied room 55 until a short time before Mr. Morton's body was found.

The Morton family had no comment to make upon Mr. Morton's visit to the Seymour. They were as much in the dark about it as the coroner.

What Coroner Feinberg will try to determine now is how Mr. Morton got to room 55. Mr. Morton was fully dressed, the coroner said, when he saw the body.

GUNBOAT IS CAPTURED

U. S. Naval Officer Puts Men on Board Hornet to Detain Her.

Held Pending Decision as to Whether Neutrality Laws Were Violated—Armed for War at Sea.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The capture of the gunboat Hornet has been reported to the navy department by Commander George F. Cooper of the cruiser Tacoma. Commander Cooper's dispatch is short, and says only that it had been found absolutely necessary to place on board a force of men from the cruiser Tacoma in order to detain the Hornet.

The detention of the Hornet was requested by Secretary of State Knox several days ago, pending a decision by Attorney General Wickersham as to whether the Hornet violated the neutrality law of the United States before she sailed from New Orleans several weeks ago.

Before her departure her cargo was inspected and no evidence was found by federal officers that in their opinion would warrant in detaining her. Upon arriving on the north coast of Honduras, however, she was fully armed and the fact that she was engaged in a warlike expedition was not concealed.

CHAPTER I.

The Man With An Idea.

Go westward from Fifth Avenue along West Twelfth Street and you will find a row of pretty houses—some vine covered—all of them set far back from the sidewalk. They stand in mute, picturesque protest against an age of hustling against an era of fifty-family apartment buildings and grimy steel-ribbed sky scrapers. They are the last of their sort—a quaint reminder of the day when New York was not too busy to be a city of homes.

And one of these porched, front-lawned dwellings—never mind which one—was Jack Wright's house. Jack Wright's name was not on the door plate. And his name did not stand opposite the property's description on the city rolls. In fact, the only part of the four-story building he actually rented and occupied was a four-room suite in the basement. Nevertheless, to dozens of newspapermen, artists, writers and good fellows in general, the whole edifice was known as "Jack Wright's" house.

Here dwelt Jack—traveler, dreamer, journalist, hack-writer. Here, with ready pen and readier wit, he first managed to shoo the wolf from the door.

Here, too, lived his mother—a dainty little wisp of a woman who "kept house" in tabloid fashion for the big son she adored, entertained his host of friends and delighted them by her constant if unconscious use of slang she had picked up from Jack. As fragile and pretty as a bit of Dresden china was little Mrs. Wright, and the chosen chum and confidential adviser of her son's chums.

It was one of these chums who stood ankle deep in the dooryard snow, about 11 o'clock one January evening, hammering at the frosted basement window. A passing policeman halted, leaned over the yard railing and peered curiously at the tall, fur-coated figure in the snow yard. A beam from a street lamp fell athwart the face of the man in the fur coat. The policeman looked again, then slouched on, muttering:

"Foxhall Peyton, the man that owns the Examiner! A millionaire and a clubman—and knocking at a basement window this time of night! Gee, but some folks has queer tastes!"

Meantime a light had been turned up in the front room of the basement. A woman's slim figure was silhouetted against the shade, and the window opened a few inches.

"Is that you, Jack?" asked a light little voice. "Have you lost your key again? You'll find—"

"No, Mrs. Wright," answered the man in the snow. "It's Foxey. May I come in?"

"Of course. You'll find the key under the mat. No. on the left-hand side. Unless Jack has—"

"Here it is," reported Peyton, after much fumbling. "Just waiting for some burglar to give it a comfortable home."

He unlocked the door and passed from the darkness and keen chill of the outer night into a cozy living room. The apartment was furnished with an almost meager simplicity. Yet a warmth and brightness and general air of homelike comfort seemed to radiate from every corner toward the graceful little black-eyed woman who stood with outstretched hands to welcome the guest.

"This is a barbarous hour to call," apologized Peyton, out of his heavy coat. "But Jack told me to come at eleven. He isn't in yet, of course? He's never on time at an appointment. He says he makes it a rule not to be. He has figured out that he saves hours and hours every year by letting the other man do the waiting. But don't let me keep you up, Mrs. Wright. I can—"

"I never go to sleep till Jack comes home. Is it very cold, Foxey?"

"Glorious weather—for the Iceberg Trust. What a lucky chap Jack is? You've got his smoking jacket and slippers warming in front of the fire for him. And a hot supper, too? What wouldn't I give if I had a mother like you!"

"Well, I like that! What's the matter with your own mother?"

"'What's the matter with her?'" echoes Foxhall.

"A new ailment each week, and then a new cure. And, to fill up the spare time, a weird course of beauty cultures. That leaves her mighty little chance to get acquainted with her son. I just left her and the rest of them at a dance around the corner on Fifth Avenue and slipped over here to see Jack. He told me to meet him here at eleven and get a crackerjack story for our Sunday edition."

"At 11 o'clock Saturday night? Isn't that a bit late?"

"Not if the story's worth it. Maguire, my managing editor, would turn the office upside down for the right sort of beat."

"But if Jack has a story of that sort," protested Mrs. Wright, "I can't see why he should give it to the Examiner after the way Mr. Maguire's treated him. To think of his firing my boy and—"

"He had to. Jack got the paper into one glorious libel suit after another. And the climax came when he was left in charge and ran a scare head across the first page—'Inhuman Case of Kidnapping in the Bronx'—over a story of a baby goat that went to sleep on the railroad tracks."

"Just the same," insisted Mrs. Wright, "if I were Jack I wouldn't be so easy as to give the Examiner a big story after—"

"He isn't giving it to us. I've bought it. I lent him $1,000 this morning to play some mysterious stock market tip he had. He said if the tip won he'd pay me to-night. If it lost, he promised not only to drop speculating forever, but to give me a three-time winner story for the Sunday paper."

"It was white of you to lend Jack the money, Foxey. You've always been the best sort of friend to him, even when he was working his way through college and you—with all your money—"

"Nonsense! That obligation's all been on the other side. I—"

"Hello, people!" broke in a voice from the doorway.

Like an amateur whirlwind Jack Wright dashed into the room, bodily picking up his laughingly protesting little mother, kissing her, turning to hail Peyton, cordially, then hurrying over to the grate to warm his numbed hands.

"The night that Washington crossed the Delaware," he observed, "would feel like a prairie fire compared to this weather. How far—"

"How about that story, Jack?" interrupted Peyton. "Come across. It's late."

"Oh, yes," assented Jack. "The story. Of course."

"Yes," chimed in Mrs. Wright, seating herself in a rocker by the fire, "I want to hear it, too. Let me in on it."

"It isn't fit for your young ears mother," laughed Jack. "Any more than your awful slang is fit for mine."

"That means it is something I wouldn't approve," retorted Mrs. Wright. "I shall stay and hear it."

Tenderly picking up his mother and her chair together in one swoop, Jack carried both to another room, deposited them on the floor, came back and shut the door.

"Well," asked Foxhall, anxiously, "what luck?"

"On that Wall Street tip? Rotten They cleaned me out. And now I've got to keep my promise never to speculate again."

"You've got to keep still another promise," reminded Peyton. "The story."

"Oh, yes; the story," agreed Jack. "Well, I'm going to be married."

"Married? Who's the—the other lunatic?"

"I haven't an idea—yet. That's the story."

"The story!" snorted Peyton. "Do you suppose the Examiner's readers are interested in—"

"They will be," asserted Jack. "Listen to my idea; I've worked all my life for other people. I've turned in stories and schemes and suggestions that have coined money. But for other people. Not for me. I've traveled from the Arctic Circle to the Equator, but never could I pick up one dollar above my salary. My bank account is a circle with the rim rubbed off. If I should drop out to-morrow the little mother would have nothing to live on but a measly paid-up life insurance policy I bought with a stock market 'killing' two years ago. It's time I changed. And I'm going to make a barrel of money. That's where the story comes in. Want to hear it?"

"Fire away."

"To begin with, I believe that there are fully 50,000 unmarried women—young and old and neither—in this country who would gladly take a dollar chance on a fairly good looking, well-bred, well-educated young man. In other words, a dollar chance for a husband."

"Well, what of that?" queried the puzzled Foxhall.

"Just this: I'm going to put myself up for lottery."

"If it's meant for a joke, I don't think it's up to your average."

"It isn't a joke. I've been all over the world. I've had adventures, hair-breadth escapes, and, in short, I've been through all the sorts of experiences that appeal to women. I'm more or less presentable—and I'm under thirty."

"When you're quite through reciting the catalogue of your charms I—"

"Listen. To-morrow morning let the Examiner announce something like this: 'Young man, well educated, traveler, writer, etc., tired of adventurous existence, wants to settle down and marry; offers himself a $1 a chance to the women of America, and—'"

"Jack!" interposed Peyton, sadly, "if you had just a little more sense you'd be half-witted."

"I tell you its a great idea!" insisted Jack Wright. "I offer myself in a lottery. And I'll marry the holder of the lucky number."

"And your 'idea'—if any paper were silly enough to adopt it—would soon have you peeping out from behind the bars. There happens to be a pretty stiff law against lotteries."

"I've figured all that out," explained Jack, easily. "I can beat that law to a frazzle. Or, rather, my case won't come under the Lottery Law's provisions."

"Oh, you talk like a man in a cave. Can't you see?—"

"I can see I have the biggest newspaper idea of the century. The Lottery law forbids the giving away of prizes. But it does not say a word about prizes that give themselves away. See? I'll make a contract with the Examiner, buying the space that is to be used to advertise the lottery. And I'll pay for it when the money begins rolling in. I offer, through the paper, to give myself away at $1 a chance. The government can't interfere with a man for making a present of himself to some lucky woman, can it? Anyhow, I'll take that chance. You take no risks. And you get a corking good feature for the Examiner. Can't you see what a sensation it will make?"

"I can see that your brain is in need of a few local repairs. —I"

"Here's an 'added feature,'" pursued Jack. "Each week I'll write an exciting chapter of my life for the Examiner. Under each chapter you are to print a blank coupon, numbered, which is to be cut out and sent, with one dollar, in a sealed envelope, with the sender's name and address; the numbered coupon to be returned to the sender. Then watch the dollars pour in. Every unmarried woman in America will be buying Examiners by the thousand and cutting out the coupons. It'll become a national joke. It'll wipe the Affinity Wheeze off the map. It'll—"

"And," put in Foxhall, excited in spite of himself, "you would actually [illegible]

LOCAL NEWS

TIDES

AT LONG BEACH, CALIF.

Well, Tides is the subject of my story. Tides high, tides low, tides destructive and tides harmless.

I understood but little about the tides until I came to live close to them. Since coming here I have learned much about them that I did not know. One thing for instance, I thought they ebbed and flowed at regular intervals each day through the year. The following table of tides for six days shows my mistake on that point.

	High	Low
Wed., Nov. 23	9:23 a. m.	4:19 a. m.
	9:56 p. m.	2:34 p. m.
Thur., Nov. 24	5:18 a. m.	10:30 a. m.
	4:20 p. m.	10:43 p. m.
Fri., Nov. 25	6:00 a. m.	11:53 a. m.
	5:38 p. m.	11:29 p. m.
Sat., Nov. 26	6:18 a. m.	12:41 a. m.
	6:30 p. m.
Sun., Nov. 27	6:48 a. m.	10:15 a. m.
	7:29 p. m.	1:20 p. m.
Mon., Nov. 28	7:16 a. m.	10:50 a. m.
	8:12 p. m.	1:55 p. m.
Tues. Nov. 29	7:40 a. m.	1:17 a. m.
	8:53 p. m.	2:27 p. m.

Again I supposed that high tides were distructive, here I was again mistaken, for often the most damage is done when tides are only moderately high, for instance, a five-foot tide accompanied with a high wind from over the ocean will do more damage than a seven or eight foot tide with a calm sea. Since the third of last July we have had several tides which did considerable damage to property encroaching too close upon the ordinary tide line—a fit washing to the greedy getters and land grabbers—but we not had any "tidal waves" as has been reported in some eastern papers.

During the third, fourth and fifth of July the tides swept shoreward with such force as to carry out several feet of our $100,000 pier, tearing down a few fish markets at the outer or ocean end of the pier. At Sea Side Park a few miles west of here considerable damage was to cottages of considerable value, built by the "foolish" men of our time, who built on this sand with very insufficient foundations and when the great waves came farther shoreward than the boundry which mere man had fixed for them and beat with fury against those foundations they were washed away, as a child's "cob-house" by a tiny rivulet and the superstructions fell and were partly submerged by the sea. A few were entirely wrecked, others were raised up and pulled back onto higher ground and repaired. Some were occupied, other were not, though furnished for occupancy.

During parts of August, September, October and November we had other destructive tides, doing more damage along the Strand, east of the pier than those in July did Hundreds of feet of solid cement bulk-head were dug under by the waves and toppled over into the sea, allowing the waves to undermine hundreds of feet of cement walk, letting great blocks of it fall into the sea, to be beaten against by the furious breakers, which threw great sheets of water up on the remaining walk several feet above the fallen pieces. As soon as the tide receded, scores of men were put to work filling gunney sacks with sand and stacking them up in front of the threatened end weakened portions of the walks. Thousands of these sacks of sand have been used to form a temporary bulk-heads and they make a very effective protection against the fury of the breakers, which rush against them with terrible force, but they resist them very effectively and saves property from further damage

During low tides a very substantial bulk-head has been built outside of these sand-bags and the space between it and the walk has been filled full of the sand-bags to the level of the walk.

The highest tides of the season are expected the last of this month, but no one can tell whether they will be destructive or not, as that depends on the storms far out at sea and the prevailing winds.

While there have been several thousands of dollars damage to property, the most of it can be repaired and no lives were lost and no one severely injured. One man claims that his cottage was saved through prayer. It stood in a very dangerous position and cottages on both sides of it were injured but his remained uninjured. Here is what he says about it: "I never left the house I merely had faith. I knew that house would not go down. I prayed. My faith was there and I saved the house. I refused to do anything else. Yes, it was Christian Science that did it." This man, whose name is Jones, owns the house in questson and the one next to it. He said, "I used my faith cure on both of them." He advised his neighbors to do the same. I wish I had the faculty of portraying such scenes to make them very realistic to our readers I will do the best I can to stir your imagination to aid me in my effort to show those of our readers who have never seen anything of the kind how those great breakers looked as they came rolling, thundering in with such force as to pound to pieces much property which had a substantial appearance but which went down under their merciless beating.

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by that photographer—who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—with the help of the Review of Reviews, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little-known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

Newlow Spreaders

are 18 in lower than other spreaders, making it the easiest loading spreader on the market. All bearings are rollers of the new pattern. There is a gather to the wheels like all high grade wagons. Other spreader wheels are straight like drill wheels, the result is the Newlow has less draft than other machines.

The frame is all of steel which makes a more rigid frame. There is only one wheel in front which allows you to back into places where it would be impossible with a four wheel machine.

For you to fully appreciate the machine you will have to see one, our best advertisement are the satisfied customers.

PRICES WILL BE HIGHER

It is not the question of selling these spreaders but in getting them that worries us, owing to the demand in other states where they have been selling them for some time. This machine has revolutionized the spreader business. Get in on the ground floor and obtain one while you can at a reasonable price.

HAS RIGHT TO THRASH PUPILS

CAN PUNISH UNRULY SCHOLARS IF NECESSARY

School Laws Explained by State Supt. Wright

At the county meeting of school officers at Jackson Saturday, several points were developed in regard to school laws that do not seem to be generally understood. State Supt. Wright gave a long talk on the corporal punishment of school children.

While the best results are to be accomplished through the co-operation of teacher school board and parents, in matters of discipline the teacher is absolutely independent of the others as to manner or method. Neither the school board nor the parent has a right to dictate to the teacher what the discipline of the school shall be. "The right to thrash a pupil is an undoubted right. It is recognized by the courts everywhere It is a sort of Teutonic principle that has come down through the ages, for the Germans and English have always recognized it."

In matter of school goverment the teacher has the almost unlimited authority of the parent. It may be of enlightment to scholars and patents to know that in all matters that in any way reflect discredit to the school the teacher's authority is complete. It makes no difference if the scholar is off the school premises or even if he is on his own premises.

A case is cited by Supt. Wright where some boys who had been home after school met the teacher, one of them making a disrespectful remark to him. Next day the boy was not too carefully thrashed when he appeared at school. An irate father doubted the teacher's authority and took the case through various courts. The supreme court sustained the teacher, including in its opinion that the teacher had every right to uphold the dignity of the school and to punish derogatory reflections from a scholar no matter where uttered.

Totten and "The Devotional Life" by Mrs. Herbert King, which was followed by an open discussion, participated in by Dr. Reed of Granville, Ohio.

In the evening two addresses were given, "The New Demand in the Kingdom" by Dr. Reed; and "An Interesting B. Y. P. U. Service" by Rev. Davis of Morenci. Music for the evening service was furnished by the Quartet.

INDIGESTION

Relief in Five Minutes and Permanent Cure or Money Back

When C. A. Wright & Son states that they have a remedy that only costs 50 cents and is guaranteed to cure any man or woman who suffers from food fermentation, or money back, what are the poor stomach sufferers in Tecumseh and vicinity going to do about it?

Food fermentation causes belching, sour stomach, gas eructation, heartburn and that lump of lead feeling as you know.

The name of this most remarkable stomach prescription is MI-O-NA. Most people call them MI-O-NA stomach tablets because they know that there is no remedy so good for indigestion or stomach disorders. Here is one opinion:

"I have been troubled with indigestion for more than a year. I bought one box of MI-O-NA and it cured me Now I would not be without a box in the house for $5.00. It saves a lot of doctor bills when you can be cured for 50 cents.—Arthur Sederquest, 6 Nichols St., Wakefield, Mass.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets cost 50 cents a box at C. A. Wright & Son and druggists everywhere and money back if they don't cure.

Monster Banquets.

At the wedding feast of Richard, brother of Henry III., there were no fewer than 30,000 dishes, and scarcely less imposing must have been the banquet given on the occasion of the enthronement of Archbishop Neville in the fifteenth century, for mention is made, among other comestibles, of 3,000 dishes of jelly, 2,000 hot custards, 400 swans, 6 wild bulls and 100 pigs. At the noted feasts of the gay and hospitable Prince Hal a favorite dish was what the "epicurean cooks" called "pondorrage." It was a savory jumble of partridge, pork and the yolks of eggs boiled first and afterward baked in batter. But the most hospitable entertainer on record was surely Richard II. Ten thousand of his subjects were daily bid to the banquet. In order to cater adequately for such a vast assembly of guests never were there less than 28 oxen supplied, 300 sheep, besides innumerable fowls and choice game. These were handed over each morning at daybreak to the 2,000 cooks employed in the king's kitchen and the prodigious preparations for this huge medieval banquet began.—London Globe.

What To Do
—FOR—
Sickly Children
Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

Treading on your neighbor's corns is very likely to raise you in their estimation, but not in the manner in which you expected.

A man and a women going on a wedding trip try hard not to look happy, and on their return try just as hard to look happy.

In recent times the parlor is light for so many occasions that it is no longer a signal to the neighbors that daughter has a beau.

Obviate worry and men would be forced to seek profitable occupation for one-fourth of their time and women for one-half of their time.

If you pay attention to a baby and it acts cross and mean, the mother is pretty apt to say: "Baby does not feel good; he has not had his nap."

If the women are to be credited, every married woman finally dies of a broken heart, and every old bachelor has had his heart buried in a grave for years.

As soon as a man becomes thoroughly skilled in certain work he begins to use words common people don't understand, and they lose all interest in him.

We may congratulate ourselves that no matter how greatly the price of lemons may be increased, our sons and daughters need not on that account be deprived of circus lemonade.

Providing your children with an ancestor of whom they may justly be proud is a great deal more important service than digging into ancient history in search of worthy ancestors of your own.

Free Dyspepsia Sample

Sufferers from indigestion are waking up to the fact that peppermint lozenges, charcoal and "dyspepsia cures" are only makeshifts in the cure of so troublesome a complaint as chronic indigestion. What is required is something that will not only relieve but which will tone and train the digestive apparatus to again do its work normally, and this these simple remedies cannot do.

There is something more to the cure of indigestion than sweetening the breath, and yet a remedy that only contains digestive ingredients will not cure permanently, as the basis of indigestion is poor bowel circulation, and that requires a scientific laxative. We know of no remedy that combines these requirements better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which has been sold for a quarter of a century.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative tonic, a scientific blending of natural ingredients for the cure of constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sour stomach, sick headache and similar complaints. Its ingredients will so strengthen and tone the stomach and bowel muscles that they will again do their work naturally, and when that has been accomplished your trouble is over. Fannie Stuart, Staunton, Va., was a long-time sufferer, as was O. Tuck, Blackburn, Mo., and they both found their cure with this remedy. They became convinced that pills and tablets, salts, "dyspepsia cures," etc., were at best only temporary reliefs. They first accepted Dr. Caldwell's offer of a free sample bottle, which he willingly sends to anyone who forwards name and address. Later, having convinced themselves through the free sample, they bought Syrup Pepsin of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe backaches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

THE CONVICT'S REWARD

"Well, this is the last time I will see your smiling face here, I hope," said the good natured guard as he unlocked the door, and No. 18000 stepped out into the dim corridor of the dingy state prison of a western state.

That was not his exact number but because this is a true story, it will serve.

"You have been a model prisoner, Watson, and I have watched you closely during the years you have been here, and today you go free. I welcome you now to freedom, as man to man, not as guard to prisoner."

This was a long speech for Guard Johnson to make, but his kindly Irish face beamed as he walked with the man who was to go free.

"This way to the office," he said. "I am to have a holiday, and if you have no friends, we will spend it together."

The prison pallor was on the face of the younger man, and the cheap suit which he wore was so painfully new, and the five dollar bill in his pocket seemed to rustle its protest against the proceedings. "Thank you, Johnson, you have done all you can for me, and I shall remember it," he replied with a slow, southern accent which the years in prison had not changed, and he bowed gracefully, his attitude showing that an inmate of refinement of other days had not been effaced by years of toil.

To the casual observer there was nothing unusual in the sight of two men walking down the lawn from the grim old prison. The ruddy faced guard carried a suitcase and the younger man walked erectly at his side, save for the pale face, not unlike hundreds of his fellows.

"You see, I got a few little traps here for you and I thought you might need 'em." Then seeing the haughty expression on the face of the ex-convict, the guard continued: "You can repay me as soon as you find work, but I hope you will excuse me, sir, but I got your measurements and had a swell tailor make you a suit, for that one—excuse me for saying so—but that one looks too much like a hand-me-down for a fellow to start out with."

Considering his recent authority, the guard was very humble in his attitude to the released prisoner, for during those months and years of constant contact he had learned to pick out "real gentlemen" as he expressed it.

"Now, that you are no longer my guard, I will tell you something, Mr. Johnson. I never committed the crime for which I served. The reason I was happy in that cursed place was because I was serving the sentence of another man, whose presence is the great outside world was necessary to the happiness of the girl I loved. He was my childhood friend and we were inseparable until we loved the same girl.

"Then we quarreled and our friendship came to an end. One night the bank in which we both worked was robbed—suspicion fell on me, for the robber left behind him a handkerchief and a notebook belonging to me. I didn't deny my property, neither did I explain my presence near the bank at midnight hour, for when returning late that night from a long walk in the country, I saw my rival John Stewart, leave the bank, carrying a heavy suitcase. I supposed he had been working over the books, as he sometimes did. I went home and went to bed, and when the [illegible] wakened me with cries, 'All about the robbery,' I had forgotten the incident. I raised the window and called to the boy.

"There was the whole story, with covert reference to the articles found and a reference to me so plain that there was no doubt left in my mind but that I was suspected of the crime.

"On the next page was a glowing account, in the society department, of the engagement of John Stewart to Agnes Forest, and the statement that, owing to business interests the marriage would take place within a week and that the honeymoon would be spent abroad.

"Then I resolved to make no plea, for I could not endure the thought of the humiliation of Agnes when she should learn of the duplicity of her lover.

"Yes, I know how they call me the 'happy prisoner,' and I appreciate the fact that my good behavior has brought about this Christmas pardon. No, I have never heard from her; in fact, as I was an orphan, no one took any especial interest in me, and in all the weary years I have passed here, no one has visited me or have I had [illegible] from the outside world.

"I am going to see her before I leave the city forever, but she will not know that the man who seeks to interest her in the latest discoveries in photography is the man who saved her and hers from disgrace."

The guard looked in the face of the prisoner as he recited this story, a great pity swelling in his heart.

"You did this thing for John Stewart and his wife? And you have never heard of her unhappy life—of his cruelty to her and final desertion for a woman who was unfit to untie her shoes?"

Then the guard and his friend entered the park and the latter listened, with white face, to the wrongs suffered by the girl he had given the best years of his life to shield.

"Thank you," he said. "I shall go at once to see Agnes and I shall tell her all," he continued.

An hour later, clad in the garments furnished by his faithful friend, Paul Watson rang the bell at the home of Judge Forest, where Agnes had retreated after her husband had forsaken her. A tall, slender woman with a piquant, girlish face, in spite of the wealth of silver hair, came to the door—Agnes, herself, pale and haggard from suffering, but beautiful still to the hungry-eyed man, who stood, hat in hand, waiting—

"Paul Watson—you here?" she gasped.

"I have just heard," he said, forgetting for an instant the fact that he was an ex-convict—forgetting everything save that he was free again to protect this frail woman who was infinitely dearer to him after years of cruel separation.

She extended her hand and bid him enter. Hurriedly and without reserve Paul told the story of the crime and why he had taken the burden of the sin upon himself. "I was all alone in the world, and John Stewart had his old family ties; he had your promise and he had everything; I had nothing but my life, which I wished to devote to you. Now, I am here to ask you to tell me all you know of the man who has again wronged you after he had his chance—of the woman who has brought this sorrow to your heart and the silver to your hair. Tell me, for I must see them."

Briefly Agnes told him all she knew of the guilty pair, scarcely realizing why she did so, and why she did not stop to question the strange story this man, who has just stepped from the living tomb of the prison walls told to her.

One look into his face and into his sad eyes convinced her that he spoke the truth.

"I am penniless and friendless, but I have learned a trade and I will not stop until I have found them," he said, as he turned away. Then he came back and leaned against the chair.

"Agnes," he said, "for the old days and for the long, long days of toil in prison, may I claim one favor?"

She did not reply, neither did she lift her drooping eyes. Tenderly he placed his toil-worn hand under her chin and lifted her face toward his On her lips he printed one long, lingering kiss, and turned hastily and left the room.

Two years later, Guard Johnson went to escort a new prisoner to his cell. "You, Watson? You here again?" he cried.

"Yes, for life, this time." He smiled faintly as he said it. "I found the guilty pair, and now they are dead," he said. "It took me a long time, and I shall never leave this place again—but I have had my reward."—Millicent Easter.

"I tell you," said the man who likes to wrangle, "that woman is on a different plane. She's given special privileges. She doesn't have to toil and venture, and dare, and starve The woman of today is never called upon to suffer any martyrdom."

"Then what," inquired the suffragette mildly, "do you call living with a man?"

Gratified.

"The Roosevelt party didn't take a stenographer."

"Perhaps the colonel expects to capture a kangaroo?"

"Why a kangaroo?"

"Because the kangaroo is the shorthand expert of the animal kingdom."

"Got that shorthand idea from Tom Hood, didn't you?"

"What of that? I'll bet he'd be gratified if he knew it."

marry the holder of the lucky number?"

"Sure. The offer's open to all comers. If I should refuse I agree to give up the whole sum—every dollar received—to the woman who wins. If she should chance to refuse me we split the purse, she and I. Each will take half the money. And, by the way, here's another detail: You aren't to publish my name at first. Just one letter of it each week, and one little slice of my photograph. Sort of Missing-Name-Puzzle Picture plan. Gee, how they'll buy the paper!"

"Jack, if you weren't a friend of mine I'd do it! It's a crazy idea, of course, but it's the sort to bring big results. It would catch the town—the whole nation. Maguire would go wild over it."

"And I'll clean up a full $50,000 out of it. Then for a glorious easy life for mother. It can't fail. Here's a written agreement that I won't back out. You can get the number drawing inspected by a committee of men who are known as straight. That will prove it's no fake. And remember to say that if I refuse to marry the winner, she can have all the money. And if she refuses to marry me, we'll each take half."

"I won't do it!" faltered Peyton, as a final defense.

"If you don't I'll sell the idea to another paper and—"

"Oh, all right!" growled Foxhall, "I agree. It'll be the biggest sensation of the year. But—" he hesitated, "suppose you meet a girl some day—the right sort of girl—and fall in love with her?"

"I never will. No girl has ever been able to make my battered old heart quicken its beat. I size them all up alongside of mother. And they lose out. By the way, don't mention this idea to mother. Not yet, anyhow. She'll be furious."

"All right. I'm off now to start the ball rolling. Good-night."

"Good-night!" called back Jack after his hurrying friend. Then he came back into the room and stood silently in troubled thought. At last, with a shrug of the shoulders, he shook off the foreboding that had seized him.

"I'm in for it!" he muttered, "and I'm not going to welsh!"

CHAPTER II.
The One Girl.

"Has Foxey gone?" asked Mrs. Wright, breaking in on Jack's gloomy reverie.

"Yes," answered Wright, "he's gone—with the story I promised him. I thought you'd gone to bed. It must be midnight."

"I didn't want to go to bed without seeing you again. Something is troubling you, dear boy. What is it?"

"Oh, only the same old grouch that gets me every now and then."

"Money?"

"No, the lack of it."

"What an ungrateful youngster you are! Have you ever been in actual want for anything?"

"You bet I have. I've wanted to buy you a brown silk dress, and some of those fluffy, frowsy furs with heads and tails on them. And a—"

"Nothing for yourself?"

"Why should I? I've got you. As long as I can keep a roof over your head—"

"But you do keep a roof over my head, you silly boy."

"Yes. Four stories over it. I let you live in a measly basement when I ought to be earning enough to buy you one of those suburban mansions with Queen Anne fronts and Mary Ann backs."

"What does it matter where we live, as long as we can be together? We're chums. I only wish I weren't such a handicap to you."

"A handicap!" echoed Jack, catching up the fragile little figure in his strong young arms. "A handicap? Why you're the one thing that's worth while. Your faith in me has been like a candle in a window on a dark night. I've zigzagged a bit, now and then. But with that light to guide me I couldn't stray far out of the path. There! Now I've gratified your love of flattery quite enough. And—"

A crash, the splintering of metal, the grinding of a heavy body, the sharp tinkle of falling glass, and an icy breath of air poured through the room's smashed window, mingled with a chorus of feminine screams.

Mrs. Wright started to her feet in alarm.

"The place is pulled!" announced Jack, in a sepulchral voice.

"Do go and see what the matter is," begged the mother. "Perhaps—"

Jack strode to the window, crunching broken glass under his heels, and peered out. "Hello!" he exclaimed. "An auto's skidded clean through the fence and up against our wall!"

He leaned further out to view the wrecked machine, from which several fur-muffled figures were squirming.

"Anybody hurt?" he asked. Then with quick recognition, "why, it's Foxey Peyton's chauffeur! And Mrs. Peyton's in the car! Wait a minute, mother, and I'll bring them in. They'll freeze out there."

He bolted from the room. Mrs. Wright could hear a buzz of voices in the dooryard. Then Jack reappeared ushering in three excitedly talking women. One of the trio advanced with both hands outstretched to greet Mrs. Wright. The newcomer was a large, somewhat overdressed woman in whose naturally kind face worry and selfishness had worn odd lines.

"You remember me, Mrs. Wright?" she queried, "I am Mrs. Peyton. Foxhall's mother, you know. How awkward of us to upset just outside your home! We were on our way from a dance. I've sent our chauffeur for another machine. It was all his fault. He nearly ran over a poor innocent baby that was being pushed along in a perambulator by its dear, tired mother and—"

"In the middle of Twelfth Street—at midnight—with the thermometer below zero?" gasped Mrs. Wright. "The poor child! What was its mother thinking of to allow—?"

"Why, Aunt Fanny!" broke in a girlish voice at Mrs. Peyton's elbow. "It wasn't a baby carriage we turned out for! It was a man with a pushcart, who—"

"All this excitement for a miserable peddler!" exclaimed Mrs. Peyton, crestfallen. "Anyhow, it has given us the chance of seeing you again, Mrs. Wright. Have you met my niece, Helene? Miss Heyer!" indicating the tall, slender girl who had interrupted the tale of the mythical baby carriage.

Miss Heyer moved forward to acknowledge the introduction.

"I'm so sorry," said she, "for the damage we've done to your house. It was—"

"It was all right!" interposed Jack. "Come and do it every night. We like it. You must be frozen, though. Mother, I'm going to make some punch. You remember the punch I used to make for you in the Adirondacks, Mrs. Peyton? It's so strong it would put Marcel waves into an Indian's hair."

"Oh, I mustn't drink anything!" declared Mrs. Peyton. "It would be certain to make me ill. But if you put it before me I'm so afraid I shan't be able to refuse. It's a very strange case, Mrs. Wright, and my doctor doesn't quite know how to classify it, but I have a morbid craving to eat and drink everything I hear mentioned or catch sight of. You wouldn't believe how I have to deny myself. Why, Lizzie and I once lived for a whole week on crackers and apples."

"Lizzie?" queried Mrs. Wright, puzzled.

"Yes. Lizzie Roberts—my companion, you know. Why, where is Lizzie? She's always getting mislaid!"

From a corner near the door emerged a black clad woman of so amazing an aspect that Mrs. Wright's keen sense of humor battled fiercely with hospitality before an unbidden smile could be driven from her face. The woman was lean as a living skeleton. Her expressionless black eyes popped forth like twin gooseberries from an equally expressionless yellow face. Her scant hair was strained back into a knob, giving her whole head an unfortunate resemblance to a peeled onion.

"Oh, there you are, Lizzie," remarked Mrs. Peyton, carelessly. "I was telling Mrs. Wright about the time you and I took the apple-cracker cure for—"

"Miss Roberts has the same malady as yours, then?" asked Mrs. Wright.

"Oh, dear, no! But if she had eaten other things I would have wanted to eat them, too. So she always diets with me. And I let her try all my cures before I try them myself. For instance, she is taking an anti-obesity course now that was recommended to me. If it works well on her," with a glance at Lizzie's emaciated form. "I shall use it. Next week she takes a face bleach treatment for me that has been very favorably mentioned in several advertisements. Helene laughs at me, the heartless girl. She says I am—but where is Helene? She can't have gone out."

"She must be in the kitchen," replied Mrs. Wright, "helping Jack with the punch."

As a matter of fact, the two young people, their heads very close together, were very busy mixing the punch's various ingredients in an ancient berry bowl in the tiny cubby hole that served as the Wright's culinary department.

"What a jolly little kitchen this is," Helene was saying, "or is it a kitchenette?"

"It's a kitchen nit," answered Jack. "Thank you for not laughing," he added. "I can see now that the joke wasn't really worth a hand."

"Do you know, Mr. Wright," said Helene, "ever since I came to live with Aunt Fannie, six weeks ago, Foxey has been promising to bring me here. He has told me so much about you both."

"He has told me all about you, too," chimed in Jack.

CHICAGOAN DIES IN PARIS

Friends of Dr. Evans Fear Death Will Lose Chicago Costly Painting.

Paris, Jan. 30. — If, as his friends fear, Dr. John Evans, Marquis d'Oyley, who died here, left no will, his illness being very short and his death unexpected, the Chicago museum will lose a painting by Titian, which Dr. Evans always said he intended to leave to his native town's gallery.

The Titian came from the Palais Royal collection. It was cut from its frame during the commune and sent to London, where Dr. Evans bought it. The Louvre was always desirous of acquiring the picture, but the prize, 500,000 francs, was prohibitive.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S TRAVEL SCHEDULE

First Big Trip Starts Second Week in February.

ITINERARY OF SOUTHERN TRIP

Plans to Move to Beverly in June, from Which Point Mr. Taft Will Visit State Fair at Hutchinson, Kansas.

Washington, Jan. 30.—White House officials are preparing President Taft's spring travel schedule. While the schedule will not be so long as that of last year, the president has accepted engagements that will take him over thousands of miles of territory and keep him away from Washington for many days at a time. The first big trip on the president's travel book will begin the second week in February. The president will go to Springfield, Ill., to attend the Lincoln memorial celebration.

On the way he will stop for a few hours at Columbus, O., after which he will make a quick trip over some of the trolley lines in Central Illinois owned by Representative William B. McKinley. Mr. Taft is expected back in the White House by Feb. 12.

A trip which will be a little longer in point of time will begin March 8, when the president will leave Washington for Atlanta, where he will speak before the Southern Commercial congress. From Atlanta the president will go northwestward through Tennessee to Cincinnati, his native city. He will stop at Nashville and Chattanooga, and possibly at other southern cities. The president will remain in Cincinnati three or four days and will than make a short trip to Cleveland. From Cleveland he is expected to return to Washington. He will be gone at least one week on this trip.

While no definite arrangements have been made for other trips in the spring, it is quite probable that the president will make brief visits to New York and other eastern cities.

Between March and June no long trips have been planned so far. In June the president will move to Beverly and from there is likely to make excursions into the east and middle west. He has accepted an invitation to be the guest of honor at the Kansas State Fair at Hutchinson late in September. That trip will add close to 3,000 miles to Mr. Taft's travels.

Their cases were the first to originate in the south and the prosecution was pushed vigorously by the department of justice. The case twice was taken before President Taft in the hope that he would grant pardons.

STALLION ATTACKS MAN

Life of Barney Kent Saved by Sneezing Powder.

Animal Was Biting, Kicking and Injuring Kent When Unique Method to Save Life Was Tried.

Fort Plain, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Barney Kent, a local horseman, is in a dangerous condition as the result of a battle with a vicious stallion. He is much bruised and battered from being dashed to a cement floor and trampled upon and his left hand was frightfully mutilated by the animal's teeth. Only by resorting to a novel method was the man's life saved.

He was alone in the box stall with the enraged stallion and nobody dared go to his rescue. Directly across the store Gifford Wood has a novelty store and was selling a customer powder to cause general sneezing and coughing to all who inhale it. With others Wood rushed to the scene of the stallion-man battle and when he realized the helpless and dangerous predicament of Kent, Wood having brought with him in his haste a quantity of the sneezing powder quickly scattered it in the stall. The stallion inhaled liberally through his widely distended nostrils and was attacked by a fit of tremendous sneezing that occupied all of his attention and enabled the onlookers to drag Kent from his perilous position.

MRS. SCHENK FREED

Action Begun by Husband for Divorce —Papers Served.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 30. — Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Shenk, who has been on trial on the charge of poisoning her husband, John O. Schenk, and in whose case the jurymen failed to reach a verdict, was released from jail on her own recognizance. Divorce papers were served on her in court.

A counter suit for divorce is being prepared by Mrs. Schenk's attorneys and the papers, it is said, will be served early this week. Since John O. Schenk neglected to announce that he would not be responsible for the debts contracted by his wife, it is held that he will be called upon to pay the costs of the late trial, about $100,000.

DOG SAVES CHILDREN

David Wilson's Son and Daughter Rescued from Watery Grave.

New York, Jan. 30.—Rex, an overgrown St. Bernard puppy, owned by David Wilson, a farmer of Bogota, N. J., saved the lives of Wilson's two children. Harry Wilson, 12 years old, and Grace, 9 years old, fell through the ice on a small pond back of the Wilson barn. Rex jumped in and pulled first the boy and then the girl ashore.

Both children had swallowed a quantity of water and were helpless for a time. As soon as he had them ashore, the dog ran to the farmhouse and brought their father.

CLARK WORRIED BY HOUSE TANGLE

Trouble Brewing in House Over Committee Appointments.

CLARK FAVORS TRIAL OF PLAN

New Speaker Said to View With Alarm Work of Ways and Means Committee—Feeling Bitter in State Delegations.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Champ Clark, of Missouri, speaker-to-be of the house of representatives, although committed to the plan that the speaker must be shorn of the power to appoint committees, does not believe in the reform. He is emphatic, however, in the declaration that the plan of having the ways and means Democrats apportion the committee places among the members of their own party, must be tried. It is his idea that the Democratic party, having made an issue of Cannonism, which reduced to its elements, means simply the exercise of power by the speaker, must keep its implied promise of reform and go the limit.

It was for this reason that Mr. Clark made a plea for the committee on committees idea. The caucus which named Mr. Clark was willing to leave the power to appoint committees in the hands of Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark, the Missourian, is a practical man and he insisted before the caucus that the effect upon the country of the creation of a Democratic czar in the house after all the bellowing against Cannon during the past few years would be deplorable. And the caucus listening to his voice, worked his will.

Whatever Mr. Clark may have thought at that time about the unwisdom of leaving the distribution of committee places in the hands of the ways and means committee, his views are even stronger now.

With the convening of the Sixty-Second congress, eleven months in the future, the Democrats of the ways and means committee have been trying to make up a tentative committee slate. The most extravagant promises are being made. Trades are a matter of daily occurrence. Feuds are starting up in various state delegations. Individuals are bitter and relations are strained it is rumored.

Three men—Representative Pou, of North Carolina; Johnson, of Kentucky, and Rothermel, of Pennsylvania, have been promised the chairmanship of the committee on the District of Columbia. Both Representative Fitzgerald and Burleson have been assured of the chairmanship of the important committee on appropriations and these are only two examples out of others of the same sort.

HUSBAND AND WIFE DYING

Assailant and Victim of Bullets at Logansport Near Death.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. [illegible]—Mrs. John Alfrey, who was shot by her husband in her home, is dying at a hospital here. At first her injuries were pronounced not serious, but she suffered from an internal hemorrhage of the brain.

On investigation physicians discovered that her husband shot her twice, the first bullet entering at the jaw and coming out at the mouth, the second entering at the same point but, ranging upward to the brain. The man, who shot himself after shooting his wife, is still alive, with a bullet in his brain. Physicians say he has only a few hours to live. He was placed under arrest on the charge of shooting with attempt to murder.

Bill Offered in House Appropriates $250,000 for Meet.

Cleveland Will Also Raise a Like Sum If It Gets Games—To Be Decided on May 20.

Washington, Jan. 30. — A plan for bringing the Olympian games to the United States in 1916 has been unfolded in the house through a bill introduced by Representative Paul Howland, of Cleveland, O. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $250,000 to be expended in prizes and to meet the expense of holding the games at Cleveland. It is expected that the municipality of Cleveland will raise another $250,000 to be devoted to the same purpose.

If the bill is passed the money will be disbursed by a joint commission composed of the Cleveland Olympic Games committee and a federal commission to be appointed by President Taft. The international committee to select the next location of the Olympia will meet in Budapest, May 20. Representative Rodenburg, of Illinois, is chairman of the committee is heartily in favor of the plan and will work to pass the measure.

A commission has already been created by the Cleveland Olympic Games association, with Mayor Baehr, ex-Gov. Herrick, Father Moran and a number of other prominent citizens of Cleveland as the leading members.

GILLETT AFFAIRS SETTLED

Late Banker's Mortgaged Estate Will Be Distributed Among Creditors.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 30.—By a decision in the federal circuit court at Chicago, the contest between the Citizens' Bank here and creditors of the late Capt. S. P. Gillett, former president of the bank, regarding a $40,000 mortgage, given by Capt. Gillett to indemnify the bank, is settled finally.

The mortgaged estate will be distributed to the creditors generally, as originally held by Referee in Bankruptcy Darby. The bank appealed first to Judge Anderson's court at Indianapolis and then to the federal circuit court. The case was dismissed by the latter court on the technical ground that it had not been filed in time.

PROBE PLOT TO WRECK TRAIN

Detectives Hunt Men Who Put Giant Powder Into Coal in Tender.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 30.—Railway detectives of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis railway are investigating a dastardly attempt to wreck the fast train at Hobart, en route to Chicago. Fireman H. Werkley, while shoveling coal into the firebox, struck a dusty object with his shovel. He discovered it was a twenty-five pound can of blasting powder.

As the train was under way, had the can gone into the firebox the engine would have been blown to pieces. The company has had considerable trouble lately with foreigners employed on construction work and numerous discharges have resulted.

JACK, scarlet with mortification, scooped the coupons together and stuck them into his coat again. Foxey did not offer to help, but stood, mouth agape, staring at his friend.

"Jack Wright!" he gasped when he could get his breath. "So that's the trouble, is it? There must be fully fifty of those coupons in all. That means $50. How'll you ever raise so much cash?"

"My lunch money for a couple of months ought to do it. That and a few car-fares saved. But keep mum, wont you, old man?"

"Why yes. But—"

"But the fact is that I've gone in on a crazy scheme to make money and to sell myself like a prize ox in a measly lottery. And, ten minutes after I promised to do it, I—I met the one girl who was worth while. Just my luck! The sort of luck that's followed me from the start. Till last night I never knew that love and marriage and all that sort of thing amounted to much. Then, all at once, when it was too late, I met—Her. Oh, I can't talk about it! Just forget what I've said. I'm in on this punk game and I'll see it to a finish. No one's going to nail me for welshing."

"But there's a way out, I tell you," protested Foxey.

"What is it?" asked Jack. "If there's a square way, I—"

"The scheme is bound to be a frost. No one will send in any coupons or dollars. And the Examiner, then, will have to withdraw its offer—and you'll be free."

"No such luck! I'm wise enough to know that. 'The Idea,' as the Examiner says, 'is due to be the Sensation of the Year.' And, as usual, I'm the goat!"

"I warned you last night that sometime you'd meet the right girl—"

"Oh, don't rub it in! How was I to know there was such a glorious girl in all this wide world as Helene Heyer? Tell me that. But maybe you're right after all. The Idea may be a fizzle. No one may compete and—where are you going?"

"Into this drug store. I forgot to call up Maguire, as I promised, about his trust busting scheme. I'll only be a moment."

Peyton entered a telephone booth. Jack, standing at the open door, heard him call up the Examiner's office and ask for the managing editor.

"This is Mr. Peyton," began Foxhall as the wires were connected. "I wanted to tell you about—"

He paused. The man at the other end was talking excitedly. The indistinct buzz of his voice reached Jack at the door of the booth. Peyton whistled long and low. Then he turned to Jack, professional delight and personal sympathy struggling for expression on his face.

"It's all off, old man!" said he. "Maguire tells me that since 9 o'clock this morning, no less than 20,000 coupons and dollars have been sent by hand to the office. And they're coming in at the rate of a thousand an hour. The scheme's the biggest success we ever—"

"And my life's the biggest failure!" growled Jack Wright. "I'm the original born loser!"

CHAPTER V.

An Explosion.

More than a month had gone by. The Lottery Man scheme was the talk of New York and of the whole country. Its fame had crossed the Atlantic, and English and French papers were quoting it as the arch-instance of Yankee enterprise.

At the Examiner office an extra staff of accountants had to be hired to handle the daily avalanche of dollar bills and to tabulate the coupons. Letters poured in from every quarter of the continent. From New York to Seattle, from Ottawa to Palm Beach, hordes of spinsters were buying up Sunday editions of the Examiner, cutting out coupons and impoverishing themselves by the output of dollar bills. The Examiner's circulation soared to dizzy heights. Its owner began to growl at the terms of the agreement, which gave all the lottery dollars to Jack and none to the paper.

"There are an ungodly number of women in this country," observed Jack, who are either horribly anxious to get married or who are still more anxious to possess the hard-earned cash their sisters have poured into this lottery. I don't know which is the answer. But, in either case, I'm the goat."

And he kept on writing lurid weekly stories of his travel adventures to go on the Lottery Feature page of the Sunday paper. Incidentally he begun to go without luncheon, without rides in "L" or subway, and could raise went to buy coupons. And every coupon bore the name "Helene Heyer." Weekly, according to arrangement, an extra letter of his name appeared in the Examiner, along with an added section of his photograph.

During the weeks that followed the first appearance of the Lottery Man scheme Jack managed to spend more time at Peyton's home than before in as many years. He developed a most amazing fondness of his chum's society, even to the extent of calling on him often when Foxey was pretty certain not to be at home. On such occasions Jack, oddly enough, managed to see more of Helene than of any other member of the household.

And, apart from his usual charming self-confidence, it soon became apparent to him as to every one else that the girl looked forward eagerly to those calls of his. Jack Wright was unlike any other man she had met. His wealth of experience, his boyishness, his open admiration for herself—all these alike puzzled and strangely attracted her. Little by little a subtle yet powerful bond seemed drawing the two more and more closely together.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Peyton alike beheld with secret joy the turn affairs were taking.

And the lovers—as has ever been the way of lovers since the days of Cain's courtship—remained blissfully ignorant that any one on earth suspected their unspoken secret.

Affairs had reached this delightfully uncertain stage when late one Saturday afternoon Helene dropped in for a few minutes to see Mrs. Wright, on her way home from a matinee. The little woman in black warmly greeted Helene.

"Jack isn't home yet," said she, "and I was getting so lonely, sitting here in the twilight, waiting for him. You must wait till he comes and let him take you home. It grows dark so early."

"I'm always especially anxious for Jack to get home early on Saturdays," she went on, "because he always brings me a proof of the Examiner's Sunday 'Lottery Man' page. Foxey gives it to him every week for me."

"And you are actually interested in that vulgar scheme?" queried Helene.

"Of course I am! I think it is one of the funniest things I ever heard of. I read every word of it. Don't you?"

"I don't read one syllable of it," denied Helene. "It seems to me horrible that a man should debase so wonderful a thing as love by offering himself as a husband to some unknown woman."

"But think how rich he'll be," suggested Mrs. Wright. "Foxey tells me nearly $200,000 has been received already in dollar bills from spinsters. He says it will go up to almost $300,000 before the contest closes. Do you wonder there are plenty of poor women so eager to marry a man who will have all that money?"

"I wasn't thinking of the women. I was thinking of the man himself. To coin matrimony into a matter of money! It is the vilest device I ever heard of. Suppose it were some man you knew. Wouldn't you feel differently then?"

"Perhaps I should," admitted Mrs. Wright, "but the men we know couldn't do that sort of thing, thank goodness. So I can laugh at it without having any personal feeling."

"You are right," assented Helene; "the sort of men whom one knows don't stoop to such tricks."

"I wonder who the Lottery Man can be?" mused Mrs. Wright. "There are all sorts of conjectures, of course. But outside the Examiner office no one really knows. Not even Jack. I asked him and he said Foxey hadn't told him. Foxey wouldn't tell me, either. Some people say the Lottery Man is a City Hall Park loafer. Some say he is a famous actor. A hundred different men in public and private life, this past month, have been identified as the Lottery Man."

"I don't wonder he tries to remain anonymous as long as he can."

"But he can't do it much longer. Five letters of his name and half of his face have already been published. The face looks somehow familiar to me, the half of it that has appeared in the paper. I suppose it's some actor I've seen. No one can recognize just half of a face in little sections, of course. But to-morrow's paper will print another section of it. And then I may be able to tell better. The letters of the name so far are 'J-O-H-N-W.' The first name is John. And 'W' is probably the initial. John W.—"

WASHINGTON LETTER

International Exposition boomers for the celebration of the completion of the Panama Canal are at work in Washington. San Francisco and New Orleans are the contending cities. The capital of the United States, where the exposition should really be held, is not saying much. San Francisco is flourishing seventeen million dollars as her claim, while New Orleans with ten millions insists that this amount will go farther owing to the proximity of that city to the rest of the world, than will seventeen millions on the Pacific slope.

An advocate for New Orleans puts it that Congress will be responsible in saying which city is most accessible to all the people of the United States, claiming that New Orleans is two thousand miles closer to the center of population and two thousand miles nearer to Panama than San Francisco and that the latter city is more than three thousand miles farther from the principal nations which are likely to send exhibits. It is claimed that the center of population of the United States is near Cincinnati and five hundred miles from New Orleans, while San Francisco is two thousand five hundred miles from this center. Within nine hundred miles of New Orleans, it is said there are seventy cities with a combined population of twenty millions while within nine hundred miles of San Francisco are only eight cities and their combined population is one million. With Washington as a starting point, it is said that it takes four days to reach San Francisco and only a little more than one day to reach New Orleans, while the cost including sleeping berth to San Francisco is $93, and to New Orleans $33. All these arguments to the pocket are important but apply with still greater force to the selection of Washington, which is closer to the population of the United States and to the world than either New Orleans or San Francisco. To those who have followed the social, industrial and political tendencies of the Pacific slope for the last five years, a serious objectin to holding an international exposition in San Francisco is that, that city is rantankerously opposed to the Japanese, Chinese and other Orientals who necessarily make such a large part of every international exposition and that, should the exposition be held there, there would be perpetual danger of artificial earthquakes more serious in their ultimate effects than the catastrophe which destroyed San Francisco a few years ago.

Statistics show that our exports to China have declined from fifty eight millions five years ago to fifteen and one-half millions in 1910. The Chinaman is frequently referred to as an enigmatical creature, but those who have studied him in his own habit at realize that there is a great deal of human nature in him and that he has abundant shrewd common sense. The Chinaman is not a first-class fighting man, but he is not unresentful of worng. He has been outrageously treated in this country and especially on the Pacific coast and organized into unions as a Europern army is into regiments, the word has gone forth to boycott American wares. It is as nothing to the average Chinaman or to the Chinaman much above the average, that this country remitted some millions of the Boxer indennity. That was a state affair, and the average Chinaman knows nothing of state affairs, and there is no word in the Chinese language for patriotism because the idea is totally non-existent in the Celestial Kingpom

It is beginning to be realized that we are building the Panama Canal for Germany, Great Britain, Japan and other nations that carry freight by sea. It is evident that the trading ships of other nations will use the waterway to a much greater extent than will the people of this country. Our sailors cost twice as much as those of any European country and five time as much as the wonderfully seasoned and competent sailors of Japan and China. We ceased suddenly to be a maritime country fifty years ago and we will never again be a maritime country until we can compete on a financial basis in ships and men with European and Asiatic peoples.

The President has sent a message to Congress urging fortification of the Panama Canal. He wants five millions of dollars to start the work. Nothing will more quickly enlist sentiment in favor of earthworks and guns for the Canal than the opposition which is appearing in the British and Japanese papers.

SHUBERT'S "LOTTERY MAN."

New Comedy by Rida Johnson Young. It's a Newspaper Play.

New York, Dec., 7. (Special to the Billboard.)

The Lottery Man, a new three act comedy by Rida Johnson Young, Author of "Brown of Howard" was seen for the first time at the Bijou Theatre, New York on Monday evening Dec. 6, under the management of the Shuberts.

Though The Lottery Man is a reporter and the plot of the play hinges on a scheme to increase the circulation of a metropolitan daily, the comedy is radically different from the so called "Newspaper plays" with which the public is familiar. In fact it is the best comedy in years.

It was one of the most social evenings the club has ever known Every one present seemed to be in a visiting spirit and the charming refreshments added much to the pleasure of the occasion.

BIGGEST BUDGET

IN THE HISTORY OF STATE

It Is Said $12,500,000 Will Be Asked For

Lansing, January 27.—The legislature of 1911 will be obliged to develop the biggest budget in the history of the state. Two years ago the legislative budget for all purposes amounted to $10,658,790, which was $637,675 less than was asked for, the Warner administration being anxious to cover up the treasury shortage as much as possible.

While the figures are not yet complete and the grand total will depend somewhat on the special appropriations allowed by the legislature, it is estimated by the state accountant that the present legislature will have to appropriate about $12,500,000. By many this is believed to be a conservative estimate.

Two years ago the legislature faced a depleted treasury and this year the condition is more acute than ever, for the reason that in the 1909 budget everything was shaved down to rock bottom to make a good showing and absolutely no attention was paid to the fact that the state institutions have a natural growth of about 10 per cent a year and that consequently the expenses increase proportionately. As an illustration the appropriation was $948,000, while the expenditure amounted to $1,[illegible],227.04 This alone for two years gives a shortage of over $750,000. Two years ago the legislature cost $181,000 and the present one will at least equal this amount which must be provided.

The University is asking for $575,000 for needed new buildings and improvements and fully $100,000 will be needed for new institution for feeble-minded children, the home at Lapeer being crowded to its capacity, with as many more on the waiting list.

Up to six years ago there was always a surplus in the treasury which easily took care of unlooked-for expenses which crop up every year, but since then the deficit has been steadily growing.

INDIGESTION

Relief in Five Minutes and Permanent Cure or Money Back

When C. A. Wright & Son states that they have a remedy that only costs 50 cents and is guaranteed to cure any man or woman who suffers from food fermentation, or money back, what are the poor stomach sufferers in Tecumseh and vicinity going to do about it?

Food fermentation causes belching, sour stomach, gas eructation, heartburn and that lump of lead feeling as you know.

The name of this most remarkable stomach prescription is MI-O-NA. Most people call them MI-O-NA stomach tablets because they know that there is no remedy so good for indigestion or stomach disorders. Here is one opinion:

"I have been troubled with indigestion for more than a year. I bought one box of MI-O-NA and it cured me Now I would not be without a box in the house for $5 00. It saves a lot of doctor bills when you can be cured for 50 cents.—Arthur Sederquest, 6 Nichols St., Wakefield, Mass.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets cost 50 cents a box at C. A. Wright & Son and druggists everywhere and money back if they don't cure.

SLAYER ESCAPES CROWD

Mother Accused of Murdering Young Son Benefits by Ruse of Police.

Albany, N. Y., Jan 16.—A ruse of the Albany police disappointed several thousand persons who crowded the union station and streets outside to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Edith Melber, the young Scenectady, widow brought here from Rochester to answer the charge of murdering her 5-year-old son, George.

They had the express stopped at West Albany, three miles from the center of the city, and Mrs. Melber and the detectives who brought her from Rochester got out there. There were a few shouts and hoots as several policemen hurried her away, but nothing like an organized movement. Though pale and trembling, the woman preserved her composure until she got inside, then she fainted.

What To Do
—FOR—
Sickly Children

Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

RAG RUGS POPULAR FOR THE BEDROOM

They May Be Washed If Fast Colors Are Used.

THE simple rag rug for the bedroom is becoming more and more popular. Those of today who are interested in the work consider carefully the artistic effect in color and weave and if the rugs are to be washed it is well to use fast colors.

Instead of using the discarded clothing, old sheets, etc., which constituted the "hit-or-miss" rag carpet used generations ago, we buy new materials, ginghams, ticking, denim, cotton flannels, etc.

In preparing materials for the weaving care should be taken. The strips may be cut straight or on the bias and they should be nearly an inch wide. These must be sewed together very smoothly and firmly, and a better looking rug will be the result of keeping the different colors in separate balls.

Figured Materials Give Good Effect.

Striped or figured materials give good results, with borders of a plain color, while quite as effective rugs are made with the plain center and figured border. It is well to remember that it takes about one and one-half pounds of cotton rags for one square yard of weaving, and that when the rags are furnished the weaver his charge is from 50 to 60 cents a square yard, which includes the warp and his labor.

These rugs are indispensable in the colonial bedroom, and as they can easily be made to match the color scheme of the room, they are really the most tasteful and appropriate floor covering that can be chosen.

Cleaning Bird Seed

All seed should be carefully cleaned of dust and chaff before it is given to the birds. Many people simply blow the dust away with their breath. This method is both tiresome and unsanitary.

A good plan is to take a cigar box, remove the bottom and insert in its place a piece of perforated zinc. Then when the box is shaken with a circular movement the dust falls through the holes and leaves the seeds perfectly clean.

Free Dyspepsia Sample

Sufferers from indigestion are waking up to the fact that peppermint lozenges, charcoal and "dyspepsia cures" are only makeshifts in the cure of so troublesome a complaint as chronic indigestion. What is required is something that will not only relieve but which will tone and train the digestive apparatus to again do its work normally, and this these simple remedies cannot do.

There is something more to the cure of indigestion than sweetening the breath, and yet a remedy that only contains digestive ingredients will not cure permanently, as the basis of indigestion is poor bowel circulation, and that requires a scientific laxative. We know of no remedy that combines these requirements better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which has been sold for a quarter of a century.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative tonic, a scientific blending of natural ingredients for the cure of constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sour stomach, sick headache and similar complaints. Its ingredients will so strengthen and tone the stomach and bowel muscles that they will again do their work naturally, and when that has been accomplished your trouble is over. Fannie Stuart, Staunton, Va., was a long-time sufferer, as was O. Tuck, Blackburn, Mo., and they both found their cure with this remedy. They became convinced that pills and tablets, salts, "dyspepsia cures," etc., were at best only temporary reliefs. They first accepted Dr. Caldwell's offer of a free sample bottle, which he willingly sends to anyone who forwards name and address. Later, having convinced themselves through the free sample, they bought Syrup Pepsin of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE

Tecumseh People Should Learn to Detect the Approach of Kidney Disease

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistable that they leave no room for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

Elias C. Brisbin, N. Democrat St, Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney trouble twenty years ago and all my efforts for relief were unsuccessful. I had severe backaches and the kidney secretions were highly colored and irregular in passage. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Wright & Son's Drug Store and they relieved me. I have since kept this remedy in the house and whenever I have taken it, good results have followed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

REINFORCEMENTS TO RESCUE

Federal Soldiers and Insurrectos Engage in a Three Days' Battle—Details As to Casualties Not Given Out.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 30.—A continuous battle between the remnants of Colonel Rabago's federal command and insurrectos under Castillas has been going on for three days at Galanea, according to reports received here.

No details as to casualties are contained in the reports. The information says the federals are making a last stand in adobe houses at Galanea, which they have loop holed

Four hundred cavalrymen were rushed to Gallago station from Chihuahua and are marching westward across country to the rescue.

Rabago has 300 men left and two machine guns. Castillas is reported to have 400 men. Other insurrectos under Castillas are encamped within a few miles of Casas Grande awaiting the result of the battle to complete the investment of the town and take it before advancing on Ciudad Juarez.

The federal authorities at Ciudad Juarez arrested two brakemen and five Pullman car employes at the Mexican Central railway station, just as the regular passenger train for the south was about to leave.

The authorities found four cases of rifle ammunition containing 2,400 rounds, fastened to the trucks of the Pullman car. All the men arrested were Mexicans except the negro porter, who is an American.

BOMB BLAST TERRIFIC

Another Chicago Explosion Laid to the Black Hand.

Attempt to Slay a Wealthy Italian Grocer Who Paid No Attention to Threats Received.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Another bomb was thrown in the merciless Black Hand war in an effort to slay Guiseppe Matalone, a wealthy Italian importer of groceries, at 832 Austin avenue.

Almost every window in the building was demolished by the force of the explosion, many families in the block were thrown from their beds, and fled panic-stricken from their homes. So powerful was the bomb that heavy iron plates were ripped up and hurled fifty feet. The entire front fo the Matalone establishment was wrecked.

Many lives were endangered and the police are convinced it was a determined attempt to murder Matalone because he failed to pay attention to several Black Hand letters received by him.

The latest outrage followed close on the heels of the announcement by the police that they now had the ringleaders of the Black Hand in custody and that there would be no further bomb explosions.

E. A. [illegible] of Springfield Predicts Stringent County Option Law Will Be [illegible] This Is Di[illegible] Wet Leaders.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 30.—The issue of county option with a 25 per cent pet[illegible] submit the question to [illegible] to the fore in [illegible] this week. [illegible] of the Anti- [illegible] that the great- [illegible] the "wets" [illegible] cut to be precipitated [illegible], who is at the [illegible] campaign for the [illegible], a statement of [illegible] he says a bill will [illegible] all except [illegible] absolutely [illegible] as any- [illegible] said. "We are no[illegible] announcement [illegible] committees by Speaker [illegible] the bill, which [illegible] and is ready [illegible]. "We [illegible] votes to make [illegible] certain the bill will [illegible] the house and the senate."

This [illegible] from the "dry" headquarters is received with ridicule by the leaders of the "wet" lobby, which has been in evidence in Springfield ever since the first arrivals came to the capital for the opening session.

"There is not a chance for a county option law," said one of them in response to the word which came from Mr. Scre[illegible]n. "Let 'em make an attempt at anything like that and we will show enough votes to kill be present township option bill. We may repeal that anyhow, but the understanding has been pretty general there would be nothing doing in local option legislation."

The speaker has announced his determination to name a committee to consider this option bill which will be altogether friendly to the measure and which will amend it in committee on sympathetic lines.

This is in accord with an arrangement made between the "wets" and the "drys" at the organization of the house, whereby bills originating in the "wet" ranks will go to a committee controlled by the damp contingent, and will be reported to the floor of the house for record recalls.

The anti-saloon people admit frankly they do not expect to get a law which would work practically in Cook from the standpoint of the saloon opponents. They eliminate from the list of counties which would vote dry under a co-operation law Cook, including Chicago and its suburbs; Peoria, including the city of Peoria; St. Clair, including East St. Louis and Belleville; Madison, including Alton and the heavily settled German section of the state; and Monroe county, just south of St. Clair.

FLAMES ROUT GUESTS

Scantily Clad Men and Women Crowd the Lobbies.

Flames Break Out in the Majestic Hotel, Chicago, Cause Panic in Two Large Hotels.

Chicago, Jan. 30. — Hundreds of guests of two big downtown hotels, the Great Northern and the Majestic were driven from their rooms, thinly clad and panic stricken, and a loss estimated at $50,000 was caused at 1 a. m. when fire, believed to have been started by crossed electric wires, damaged the interior of St. Hubert's grill on the eighteenth floor of the Majestic building, at Quincy and Dearborn and imperiled the entire building.

The guests of the two hotels, which were near each other, were notified of the fire by the girl operators, who telephoned to the various rooms telling the occupants there was no danger. Within a few minutes the lobby of the Majestic hotel was crowded with frightened men and women, who did not stop to dress in their rooms, but carried their clothing in their arms and donned in the lobby.

The fire started in the kitchen of the grill room and was discovered by a scrub woman. She reported the fire to Night Clerk Kennedy and the latter ordered the telephone operators to notify the guests.

THE LOTTERY MAN

"Hello, people!" cried Jack from the doorway. "Why, Helene! It's like getting money in a letter to find you here. Is all the tea gone, mother? Or—"

"I was just going to the kitchen to fill the teapot," answered Mrs. Wright, promptly.

She left the room in most palpable haste, stopping only to pull from the side pocket of Jack's overcoat a rolled-up proof-sheet.

"The proof of the 'Lottery Man' story, isn't it?" she asked as she hurried out. "Thanks for remembering—"

"Oh, hold on!" called Jack, in sudden embarrassment. "I didn't mean to give you that this week. It has something that—"

But the kitchen door had closed behind Mrs. Wright. Jack, with a shrug of his shoulders, resigned himself to the inevitable.

"You looked tired," said Helene, peering up at him through the twilight, "is anything worrying you?"

He laughed. But his laughter held a forced note that she was quick to detect.

"Nothing's worrying me," he returned. "Why should it?"

"That isn't true," she answered quietly. "Why do you always feel bound to be jolly when you're with me? I'm not a child. Something is worrying you. Won't you tell me what it is? Perhaps I might help."

"And perhaps, on the other hand," he said lightly, "you might give me the frozen face. Girls are that way."

"This girl isn't," she contradicted.

"Not if the worry was all my own fault?" he queried.

"That would only make it the harder for you to bear. Won't you please tell me all about it?"

"I can't! I haven't the nerve. You'll know all about it by to-morrow. And then good-by to the gorgeous times I've had with you this past month."

"Jack, I don't understand you at all!" protested the girl. "Do you mean you've gotten into some sort of trouble that will become known tomorrow and that will end our friendship? Some trouble that—"

"Trouble?" echoed Jack. "Why, Helene, trouble is a Labor Day Outing and Games compared to what I'm up against."

"Whatever it is," she said, softly, "you are wrong in thinking it will turn me against you. It is when one is in trouble that he most needs his friends. And we are friends, aren't we?"

"Friends?" he repeated, hoarsely, "I—Helene!—I—oh, why in blue blazes didn't I meet you one hour earlier?"

"An hour ago?" she asked, perplexed.

"No. I mean, why didn't Mrs. Peyton's automobile smash into our front wall, that night, one hour earlier than it did?"

"If it's a conundrum—"

"It is!" he replied, in grim irony, "And I'm the answer."

"You aren't one bit like yourself to-night, Jack," began Helene, in despair.

The sudden opening of the kitchen door broke in upon her words. A flood of light from across the threshold illuminated the little living-room. In the doorway, stood Mrs. Wright. Every line of her slim little figure was tense. She seemed fairly to bristle with uncontrolled excitement. In one outstretched hand she clutched the page-proof.

"Jack Wright!" she gasped, almost voiceless with dismay. "Jack Wright! What on earth does this mean?"

"It means," began Jack, miserably, taking in the situation at a glance and squaring his broad shoulders to face the music, "it—it means, mother—that—"

"As soon as I saw this extra section of the photograph," sputtered Mrs. Wright, too excited to be silent, "I recognized that little triangular scar on the nose—the one from the fragment of a shell at San Juan Hill. Then the extra letter of the name. It spells now, 'JOHN WR—' Oh, there can't be any mistake! You're the Lottery Man! You!"

There was an instant of utter stillness. Then the spell was broken by a stifled, sobbing gasp from Helene. And Jack answered slowly.

"Yes, I am—the Lottery Man."

Mrs. Wright burst into a fit of uncontrollable weeping. Full of contrition, Jack sprang to her side, catching her close in his arms and murmuring over and over;

"Oh, mother, darling, I'm so sorry! So sorry! Don't take it like that! You'll break me all up. Don't I—"

"I'm afraid I must go," said Helene, rising and moving toward the outer door. "Good-evening, Mrs. Wright."

"No, no," sobbed Mrs. Wright, "you mustn't go. I didn't mean to behave so foolishly about it. Don't go, Helene."

"I must, I'm afraid," repeated Helene. "It is growing dark and I don't like to be out of doors so late —alone."

"But Jack is going to take you home," protested Mrs. Wright "He always does."

"He always did," gently corrected Helene. "I shall not trouble him again."

"Helene!" cried Jack, in utter desperation, "you can't mean that! I—"

"I am sorry if I did not make my meaning perfectly clear," she retorted, her sweet voice cold and hard as ice, "I intended to. Good-night."

"Helene!" he exclaimed, "you said—not ten minutes ago—that no matter what trouble I might be in you wouldn't turn your back on me. And now—"

"And now," answered Helene, "I must decline to share your attentions with three hundred thousand other women. I wanted to help Jack Wright, the man I thought was worthy of my friendship. I did not undertake to help the—Lottery Man."

At the last words she was gone. Jack made no effort to stop or follow her. He turned upon his mother a face from which the gay boyishness had been suddenly wiped as by a sponge.

"I'm—I'm up against it, mother," he muttered unsteadily. "I guess that's about the last chapter. It was going to be a love story. And—and now it's to be a romance with 300,000 heroines and no hero."

"Don't you care, dear heart!" cried Mrs. Wright, in quick loyalty. "It'll come out all right. I'm your chum—and I'm not going back on you. She'll marry you yet—see if she doesn't."

CHAPTER VI.

The "Beauty Culture" Girl.

It was the most miserable hour of the whole day in the Peyton household. In other words, it was Mrs. Peyton's "physical culture" hour. Hedwig Jansen, an expert masseuse and trainer from the nearest Turkish baths, was in charge of the said proceedings. Lizzie Roberts was dragged, a shrieking victim into the work, and Foxey's spacious den on the top floor was pressed into service for a gymnasium.

Here, one day a month after Helene's discovery that Jack was the much-despised lottery man, Hedwig and Lizzie were hard at work shoving furniture aside and making ready for the daily exercises.

Hedwig toiled with business-like speed and precision. Lizzie feebly moved furniture with the air of a martyr on the way to the stake. A sleazy black gymnasium suit and white stockings gave her lank form the look of a thin packet of laths.

In the course of pushing the various articles in the room back against the wall, Hedwig tipped a study table so far to one side that its contents cascaded to the floor. She picked them up one by one. The last was

"To-day's the day!" she chuckled.

"I beg your pardon," said Lizzie, in lofty inquiry.

"I said 'today's the day.' It's today that the lucky number's to be drawn. In the Lottery Man Contest, you know. Just listen to this: 'At 3 P. M. to-day a member of the committee appointed to oversee the competition will draw one number from the ten-by-ten box in which the coupon vouchers are kept. The result will be at once announced.' How's that? Oh, if I just had a pull with that committee! Maybe I wouldn't use it!"

Lizzie sniffed in proud contempt at such abaseness, but deigned to make no reply.

"And see here again," prattled the irresponsible Hedwig, still scanning the paper, "see what it says: 'No less than 300,000 coupons have been sent to the Examiner office in this most remarkable competition. That means a fortune of $300,000. According to the terms of the contest, should the winner refuse to marry Mr. Wright, he and she will each receive one-half of this sum. Should he be so ungallant as to refuse to lead her to the altar' (don't them newspapers use grand language, Lizzie?) 'the entire $300,000 will revert to her.'"

"I don't see why you read that sort of thing to me," said Lizzie, in disapproval. "Like Miss Helene, I consider it most vulgar."

"Miss Helene, indeed!" scoffed Hedwig. "Why should she be bothering her pretty head with it? Hasn't she all the money that's fit to coin? Does she ever have to worry over where the next meal's coming from? Not she. But if she was poor, and had to work all day for the privilege of keeping alive, it's a different tune she'd be saying. I think that's why so many women are crazy to marry. A husband is a perpetual Human Meal Ticket. An the chance of getting a husband worth $300,000, as this Lottery Man will be, is something no poor woman should sneeze at. Us girls at the Baths have spent every cent we could get hold of for coupons. I've got more'n seventy myself. And—"

"And you would actually marry him if—if you won?" queried Lizzie, as though interrogating some strange, lowly creature from another world.

"Would I? Would I?" laughed Hedwig. "For $300,000 I would marry a cross-eyed, humpbacked gorilla with two game legs. And so would you. You've got men on the brain as much as any of us, Lizzie Roberts. Only you try to hide your feelings. That's foolish. It's better to speak it out than keep it rattling around in your head."

"You will please leave me out of the discussion," coldly reproved Lizzie, a faint red straining the sallow yellow of her cheeks.

"H'm!" sniffed Hedda. "For all your high and mighty airs, I've caught you reading those Examiner contest pages on the sly. Before I'd be a hypocrite—"

"I am not a hypocrite!" snorted Lizzie, in virtuous indignation. "If I've ever stooped to read such stuff it's because I happen to know the gentleman—the Lottery Man. He mixed me some punch once. And if it comes to a talk of hypocrites, how about you? You call yourself 'Hedda Jansen' and say you're a Swede. But you have a brogue sometimes that—"

"That shows I came from County Galway? I did. And I'm proud of it. 'Hedda Jansen' is my professional name. My nomdy ploom, as it were. For folks seems to think massage is no good unless it has a Svensk trademark. As for being a hypocrit—"

Foxhall Peyton and Jack Wright burst into the room.

"I tell you I won't!" Jack was declaring. "I—hello, we've butted into the Beauty Parlors. Good-morning, Miss Lizzie!"

Giving him a look of icy disdain, Lizzie swept from the room with all the majestic dignity of a walking toothpick. Hedwig, in one corner, was staring in wide-eyed admiration at the famous Lottery Man. Without noting her presence there, Jack turned again on Peyton with the exclamation:

"Don't look so confoundedly calm and smug! Have a little sympathy for me, can't you? I haven't slept a wink all night. I've cornered the Anxiety and Suspense market. Just think! Three hundred thousand dollars right within my reach! And it's a hundred to one I'll have to pass it up!"

"I'm going down to the office," said Foxey, rising. "Come along."

"The office? Haven't you been there to-day? Maguire was yelling for you."

"Why? What's up?"

"What isn't up?" growled Jack. "The contest closed at midnight. But coupons have ben pouring in all day, just the same. And there's a big crowd collecting in front of the Examiner Building. Oh, laugh if you want to! But there's no jovial ha-ha in it for me! Why, I haven't been able to look at a woman on the cars or in the streets for two months without wondering if I mightn't have to marry her. Three hundred thousand possible wives! Good Lord! I make old Brigham Young look like a piker."

"Say, young man," observed Hedwig, striding forward and twisting Jack around bodily, so that he faced her. "I've got twenty chances on [illegible]"

TREATY MAY CUT COST OF LIVING

Reciprocity Agreement Calls For Reduction of Import Duties.

TAFT EXPECTS OPPOSITION

Agreement Will Have Hard Sledding In Congress, President Fears. Makes Appeal For Measure In Address at McKinley Memorial Banquet—Food Products on Free List.

Washington (Special).—That the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada, the terms of which were announced by President Taft in a special message to congress, will operate to reduce the cost of living is the confident expectation of federal authorities.

Secretary Knox, who had charge of the negotiations on behalf of this country, was inspired by a determination to greatly enlarge the free list so far as it relates to food products from Canada. In return, he obtained a notable abatement of duties on a number of American products consumed in Canada. Prominent among these is bituminous coal, which is now exported to Canada to the value of several million dollars annually. There is also a much better opening for American farm machinery and implements.

It is a notable fact that 91 per cent of the Canadian goods imported into the United States will benefit by considerable reductions of duty, and only 9 per cent of our Canadian imports will remain unaffected.

President Taft expects to witness a hard fight in congress before legislation putting his reciprocity agreement with Canada into effect finally is passed.

President Taft, in the presence of 300 members of the Ohio Society of Washington and their guests at a McKinley memorial dinner Monday, avowed himself legatee of McKinley's policy of reciprocity expressed in the martyrd president's last public speech at Buffalo. He also pleaded eloquently for the passage of the measure.

Three justices of the supreme court, several senators and representatives in congress and many others prominent in official life heard and vigorously applauded the president's appeal for Canadian reciprocity.

COMMISSION FOR PONTIAC

New Form of Government Approved by Large Majority.

CHARTER EFFECTIVE FEB. 16

Initiative and Referendum and Recall Provision Are Features, and Political Lines and Ward Boundaries Are Entirely Wiped Out—Commission Election April 6.

Pontiac, Mich., Jan. 30.—Pontiac adopted a commission form of government by voting for the adoption of the new charter submitted to the electors at a special election Monday. Only about half the normal vote was polled, but the odds were heavily in favor of the new system, the vote standing 824 yeas to 494 nays.

The First ward was the only one to register a majority against the charter.

By the terms of the charter three commissioners will be elected at the April election for one, two and three year terms respectively. The salary of each will be $2,000 per year. Features of the charter are the initiative and referendum and the recall provision.

The charter will take effect on February 16, and from that date until April 6 the present common council will have charge of affairs sitting as a commission. Candidates for the position of commissioners will be nominated at a primary election, the charter providing that the six receiving the highest vote shall be the candidates for the election.

Political lines and ward boundaries are entirely wiped out so far as city affairs are concerned.

Governor Osborn Makes Statement Regarding Progressive League.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 28.—Governor Osborn has given out a statement relative to the Republican Progressive league movement in which he said:

"I indorse heartily the program of the Republican Progressive league. I believe that the purposes for which it proclaims support is absolutely righteous. Its purposes are entirely in line with proper popular activity in affairs of government.

"But I deny that any such movement must of necessity be anti-Taft in character and purpose. I will not be a party to any movement which at the present hour seeks either directly or indirectly to discredit Mr. Taft."

WOMEN'S MEASURE KILLED IN HOUSE

Suffrage Bill Defeated by Vote of 55 to 44.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 1.—The measure introduced in the house, to submit to the people of Michigan as a whole the question as to whether the women should have the ballot or not, was defeated by a vote of 55 to 44.

Representative Flowers of Wayne introduced the bill, and much oratory, for and against, followed.

Many women prominent in the state were present during the session.

Commission to Study Taxation.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 1.—That Governor Osborn realizes the acuteness of the taxation situation is shown by the fact that Attorney General Kuhn is drafting a bill for a joint commission, to be composed of legislators and outsiders, to study existing problems and make recommendations to the legislature as soon as possible this session.

The Lottery Man

By Rida Johnson Young

Novelized from the acting version of the play by ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Copyright 1910, by The Story-Press Corporation

"The Lottery Man" has been one of the few "big hits" of the year in New York, where it was produced by the Messrs. Shubert, with whose permission the story of the play is here given.—EDITOR.

Jack Wright collapsed limply into the nearest chair

"Don't look at me like that!" he yelled in alarm, as Hedwig beamed proudly down upon him. "Foxey, get me a drink!"

"Better cut out the booze to-day," warned Peyton. "You'll need a cool head."

"Then give me an anaesthetic," implored Jack. "Oh, take her away, can't you? She's grinning at me again!"

"Come to the office," advised Foxey. "Maybe you'll be safer there."

"Going so soon?" cooed Hedwig, fetchingly.

"So soon?" panted Jack. "Yes! Sooner! And then some!"

a copy of that morning's Examiner.

He was gone before she could answer. With a ponderous sigh Hedwig turned to greet Mrs. Peyton, who, with the luckless Lizzie at her heels, came in.

"Well, I'm ready," announced Mrs. Peyton. "Though somehow I don't feel much like working this morning."

"No more do I, ma'am!" said Hedwig. "I've seen the Lottery Man! Saint Anthony be with me this day! Will you try the medicine ball first, ma'am?"

"Not yet. Throw it to Lizzie first She needs the exercise."

Through the air bounded the big ball. Lizzie made a futile effort to catch it. It struck her, and with a squall of dismay she fell to the floor grappling helplessly with the bag.

"I don't see what makes Lizzie so awkward!" said Mrs. Peyton, plaintively. "I let her do nearly all my exercising for me. And she looks so dismal, too."

Lizzie meekly got to her feet and for a few minutes the calisthenics went on without more than the usual interruption. Then Mrs. Wright was announced and Mrs. Peyton gleefully seized the excuse to end exercise for the day. As Hedwig and Lizzie withdrew, Mrs. Wright came into the room, bringing as she did, an atmosphere of sunshine with her.

"You'll be here to-morrow at the same hour, Hedwig?" called Mrs. Peyton after the departing trainer.

"Yes'm," replied Hedwig, leaning in the doorway, "unless I win the Lottery Man. If I win him, I'll work no more."

"That awful lottery!" cried Mrs. Wright, in comic despair. "It was sweet of Helene to ask me to spend the day here. She knew how nervous I'd be when the time came to draw the number."

"No," said Mrs. Peyton, "that wasn't why she asked you. She did it because she loves to have you here. As we all do. You have such a knack of seeming young. How do you do it?"

"By not letting myself grow old, I suppose."

"I'm sure no one tries to keep young harder than I do," complained Mrs. Peyton, "and yet—for all your gray hair and the trouble you've been through—you seem younger than I do. Tell me the secret."

"Why, there's no 'secret' about it. I keep interested in other people and try not to think about myself. That's all. I think we get from people just what we give them. If we give out good humor and affection, we get it back from others. If we give out peevishness and suspicion and selfishness, it's only natural we should get them back—with interest. And if we are on the lookout for anything we are pretty apt to get it. So why should not one be always on the lookout for love and happiness and friendship? It's just as easy as watching for hate or snubs. But I'm preaching and—"

"No, no. It interests me. Go on, please."

"I discovered something to-day," said Mrs. Wright, confidentially, as she turned to a more personal theme. "We aren't the only ones who have been buying up coupons in Helene's name."

"Oh, Foxey has a big stack of them, too. And—"

"I don't mean Foxey; I mean Jack. I found a whole pile of them in his top chiffonier drawer yesterday. He never cared for any other girl. And for two months he has been doing extra work to make money for buying coupons."

"Helene would be awfully angry with us if she knew."

"Does she seem excited over the

'No one could refuse my boy!" declared Mrs. Wright, proudly. "He—"

"Good-morning, Mrs. Wright!" came Helene's voice from the door "It was dear of you to come to us to-day."

She came in, gaily, to greet her guest. Yet a close observer might have noted weariness and pathos behind the bright smile. The girl had aged during the past few weeks.

"I couldn't have stayed at home," said Mrs. Wright. "I was so excited. And Jack didn't sleep any last night."

"He was looking forward, I suppose," said Helene, coldly, "to meeting the future Mrs. Jack?"

"Oh," protested Mrs. Wright. "I'm sure—perfectly sure—he'll never marry any strange woman just because she happens to win him in a lottery, no matter how big a fortune there might be in it."

"You see," explained Mrs. Peyton, for Helene's benefit, "Jack went into this impulsively, to pay Foxey $1,000 he owed him. He is the soul of honor. So, of course, he couldn't back out. Foxey is as much to blame as Jack."

"Neither of them seems to think there is any blame in it," observed Helene. "They both are delighted over the newspaper sensation the whole thing has created."

"It was certainly clever and original," mused Mrs. Wright. "No one but Jack would have had the brains to think it up. Can't you see, Helene, how brilliant—"

She broke off in alarm. All three women sprang up excitedly. There was a wild clamor of voices below stairs. Then the sound of swift running feet on the stairs. The door burst open and a truly horrible figure reeled into the room.

CHAPTER VII.

"Rough Work."

Into the room staggered a man. His derby hat was smashed to flinders and its torn brim was jammed down over his eyes. His coat was in ribbons, his gay waistcoat a tattered wreck.

He swayed dizzily, and panted sheer exhaustion as he tumbled into a chair. Even Mrs. Wright looked at him a second time before she recognized him. But Helene, with the eyes of love, had known him at a glance.

"Jack Wright!" she gasped, incredulous.

"All that's left of him," answered Foxey Peyton, who had followed the disheveled Jack into the room.

"Oh, my boy! My boy!" cried Mrs. Wright, in pain, rushing to her son's side and kneeling in front of him. "Are you hurt? Where? Tell me!"

"Where?" echoed Jack, hoarsely. "Everywhere. And I'm not hurt. I'm slaughtered. Butchered to make an Examiner holiday. I—

"But where are you injured?" pleaded his mother. "Oh, isn't there anything I can do for you, dear lad?"

"Yes. Send me to a hospital! Don't worry, mother. I'm not injured anywhere. I'm just down and out."

"Foxey!" commanded Mrs. Peyton, "will you explain? What has happened?"

"We've been mobbed," returned Foxey, readjusting his own rumpled clothing. "Jack got most of it. Here's the tale of woe:

"Women, women, women, women, women!" groaned Jack.

"That's it," assented Peyton. "Women! Three hundred thousand of them. The street in front of the Examiner office was chockful of women waiting for the drawing of the lucky number. When we were pushing our way through the crowd, somebody recognized Jack and set up a yell: 'That's the Lottery Man!' They made one wild, horrible rush for us—"

"Oh, Jack!" exclaimed Mrs Wright, "and—"

"And," went on Foxey, "before we could get away they—"

"Talk about the 'Weaker Sex!'" put in Jack; "you don't know anything about it until you face a mob of rabid brides-to-be! An army of souvenir hunters! They cleaned out my pockets, pinched my watch and pin as relics, fought for scraps of the cloth. One old girl with sunset hair had the nerve to haul out a pair of poket-shears and clip off a lock of my hair. The rest of them hadn't any scissors, but they seemed to like the idea of hair collecting. So they were just starting in on my head with their bare fingers when—"

"When all at once," Foxey caught up the story, "some one yelled, 'The lucky number is drawn!' There was a general rush for the Examiner Building. I dragged Jack, half-dead, into a taxicab. And here we are."

"Oh, it's perfectly disgusting and disgraceful!" cried Helene, finding her voice as the recital of the adventure ended.

"It wasn't my fault," grumbled Jack. "I didn't ask them to—"

"It was your fault," she contradicted. "And you have yourself to thank for it. Any one who makes such mockery of a sacred thing like marriage must not complain if he is dragged to the level of those—creatures."

"But, Helene!" protested Mrs. Wright, fighting back a laugh, "how was Jack to know this would happen?"

"Oh, well," agreed Helene, coldly, "as all the rest of you seem to think it a beautiful joke perhaps I'm too particular."

"It was an icy winter's day!" murmured Jack, dreamily. "And the cold, cold winds—"

"But why did the women want your coat buttons?" asked Mrs. Peyton, in bewilderment.

"Because I'm a hero," growled Jack. "Why did they kiss Hobson?"

"They are the sort of women who send flowers to criminals," sneered Helene.

"Bless you, Miss, for them kind words!" replied Jack, warmly.

"I've got to get back to the office," announced Foxey. "There's all sorts of trouble down there. Good-by, Jack."

"Mrs. Peyton," said Mrs. Wright, "would you mind telling me where I can find some buttons and a needle and thread? I want to patch my boy up so he can get home."

The two older women set off on their search for sewing materials. Helene was about to follow, but Jack barred the way.

"Haven't you punished me long enough?" he demanded. "You've turned the cold shoulder on me all the time lately. Yet we got along so beautifully—at first."

"That was before I knew," she

SHUBERT'S "LOTTERY MAN."

New Comedy by Rida Johnson Young. It's a Newspaper Play.

Several weeks ago some of us predicted a season for farce comedy. At least one manager followed the theory with a result of as near a record breaker as anything can be so-called in New York. We want to laugh, and we don't want to do it behind programs, we are sick and tired of salacity, nudity and a lot of punk revamped editions of a Boccacio or something to make us think we were seeing something that we weren't.

Once more the prediction—farce comedy—it is clean, wholesome and all that the name implies will be the reigning sucess of New York for a few seasons to come. And if New York, why not the country ones? Melodrama is a dead sssue, musical comedies with big casts and long jumps do not always fare on profit diet—burlesque is fair, smutty plays are dead—vaudeville and moving pictures are the only staple attractions and so the cycle rounds out to a point of farce.

In THE LOTTERY MAN, an almost thrilling success is achieved; it is almost a positive recordbreaker—it is almost one of the funniest things we've had in years. Leaving out that qualifying word, it's a hit a great big good-natured sucess. The idea is good and is well worked out. Simple, too. A young newspaperman decides to raffle himself off to the highest bidder The idea is not new as a budding playwright of a few ago had in mind the same thing, only then it was a young dentist. Be that as it may, the chap now in question is a reporter—better said a "journalist" for two reasons: First, he is very fresh, and no one who knows the reporter can believe this; secondly he borrows one thousand dollars, conclusive that he's not a newspaperman. Anyone with that much credit would select a decent job. The money must be paid back, and the only way he can see is to raffle himself off. A thousand dollars without a love affair would be incongruous—so we have the maiden fair, and of course, she appears just in time to see the scramble for the ragle tickets. Incidently the hero buys up a few chances on himself in the girl's name, straightway becomes indignant and—but edough.

One must see the play for the finale. Unjust to spoil a good thing by the disclosure. Of course it's real farce so all ends happily in the finale. Of course, that's why it's a farce.

This excellent production exactly as produced in New York, with a first class and all special scenery at the Bradley Opera House Saturday February 4.

There's nothing so good for a sore throat as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Cures it in a few hours. Relieves any pain in any part.

Successful Sunday Journalism.

For several years the newspaper readers of the West have watched with interest the unique experiment embodied in the Sunday Magazine of The Chicago Record Herald The time has now come when it is no longer an experiment, but a sound and prospering success. Nothing else of the kind in newspaperdom can compare for a moment with this remarkable supplement.

The Sunday Magazine of The Record Herald is a real magazine, full of stories and articles by the best living writers illustrated by eminent artists and carrying on its cover each week a masterpiece of color work. Its prestige is now such that it can complete with the big monthlies for the most costly fiction in the market, sometimes paying as high as $25,000 for a single serial, as it did for Conan Doyle's "Sophy of Kravonia" when every other magazine in the country wanted the story. The most popular talos of humor now appearing in the United States—those of the inimitable Shorty McCabe—have been published exclusively in the Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald from the start.

Its high literary quality has been steadily maintained and has "won out." You will find one of the best novels of the day running serially in its columns at the present moment. It is not strange that hundreds of thousands of readers prefer The Sunday Record-Herald to all other papers.

Defeat of Woman's Suffrage

When the question of Womans' suffrage came up before the House a discussion followed and when the vote was taken it stood 53 to 44 against the measure.

One prominent worker Mrs. Huntley Russell remarked that she never had men lie to her before; as many who had promised their support failed to make good. Altogether it was an unpleasant experience for the women who had worked so faithfully for the cause.

WHAT THE FEBRUARY WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION CONTAINS

The February number of Woman's Home Companion is a delightful St. Valentine number. There is a special valentine song, valentine ideas, and a valentine book-list.

The fiction includes another part of "The Admiral's Niece," a story by Kate Douglas Wiggins and her collaborators, which is making a big hit; "In the Land of To-morrow," by Maude Radford Warren is now in its second part and is proving most exciting. Short stories in this number are contributed by such well known authors as Alice Brown, Hulbert Footner, Owen Oliver and Mary Heaton Vorse.

The third part of "Spain's Royal Love Story," by Kellogg Durland is devoted entirely to the story of the three little children of the King and Queen of Spain and is a charming and homelike tale. Frank A. Waugh opens our eyes to the beauty of the winter forest in an article entitled "My Tree Friends in Winter," Kate V. Saint-Maur in a short article entitled "The Care of Cage Birds," gives us valuable information concenin rg our feathered pets. "American Portrait-Painters" by J. Nilsen Laurvik is the first of a new series on art in America, and love scenes from the most popular plays of the season are shown.

The Home Decoration and Handicraft Department is even more comprehensive than usual, taking up the questions of the small apartment and the country house "Dotty Darling and the Kewpies" still make fun for the children, and "The Adventures of Jack and Betty" form one of the most enthralling of little folks' features. Miss Gould's Fashion Department is excellent with modish and useful suggestions.

DOCTOR PRAISES D. D. D.

Although an M. D.' I acknowlege to my patients and patrons that your remedy, D. D. D., reaches case of Eczema and permanently cures them:—Dr. Ira T. Gabbert, Caldwell, Kan.

These are just samples of letters we are receiving every day from grateful patients all over the country.

"Worth its weight in gold," "All my pimples washed away by D. D. D.," "I found instant relief," "D. D. D is little short of miraculous." These are the words of others in describing the great skin remedy, D. D. D.

A TRIP TO EUROPE, AT THE PARISH HOUSE

The doors of the Parish House were again thrown open to the public when on Wednesday evening the Alter Guild of St Peters church gave a "Trip through Europe" supper. The guests first entered the waiting room, where various time tables and railroad guides were to be found, which would be beneficial to them while on their journey. When on board the train they were at once taken to Ireland where "Biddy Bedott" awaited them and with much Irish blarney served them with escalloped potatoes They left there in good spirits and reached Germany in time to be served to frank-furts, sauer kraut, bread and butter and coffee, many beautiful steins were in sight but much to the displeasure of the guests none were offered them. The tourists next visited sunny Italy where many lovely signoritas and one gallant signor graciously gave them macaroni and sauce, olive pickles and wafers. Bidding this foreign country adieu they next visited Iceland, where its white clad inhabitants served jello with whipped cream and white cake. In this northern land Perry and Cook were to be found disputing over the North Pole. The tourists tickets having expired they were obliged to return to Tecumseh.

There were about 85 tickets sold all were much pleased with the affair.

What To Do
—FOR—
Sickly Children
Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

FOREIGN.

Berlin—It has been officially announced here that in view of the plague epidemic in the far east, the tour of Crown Prince Frederick William will be terminated in Calcutta, from which city he will return home.

London—With a view to restoring London's lost importance as a shipping port, the recently constituted "port of London authority" is considering a vast scheme for improvements in the river Thames. Docking facilities involving an expenditure of nearly $75,000,000 are contemplated.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Washington—Determined that the territory of the United States shall not be used as a base of revolutionary expeditions against Mexico, the Washington government has taken steps to increase materially the American military and customs forces guarding the frontier.

Washington — President Taft is standing firmly by his determination to use every weapon at his command to force reciprocity with Canada through a hesitating congress. It develops, too, that he believes the masses of the American people are with him, and he is relying on quick popular pressure on the congress from the people as one mighty means of compelling action.

"No one could refuse my boy!" declared Mrs. Wright, proudly. "He—"

"Good-morning, Mrs. Wright!" came Helene's voice from the door. "It was dear of you to come to us to-day."

She came in, gaily, to greet her guest. Yet a close observer might have noted weariness and pathos behind the bright smile. The girl had aged during the past few weeks.

"I couldn't have stayed at home," said Mrs. Wright. "I was so excited. And Jack didn't sleep any last night."

"He was looking forward, I suppose," said Helene, coldly, "to meeting the future Mrs. Jack?"

"Oh," protested Mrs. Wright. "I'm sure perfectly sure—he'll never marry any strange woman just because he happens to win him in a lottery. No matter how big a fortune there might be in it."

"You see," explained Mrs. Peyton, for Helene's benefit, "Jack went into this impulsively, to pay Foxey $1,000 he owed him. He is the soul of honor. So, of course, he couldn't back out. Foxey is as much to blame as Jack."

"Neither of them seems to think there is any blame in it," observed Helene. "They both are delighted over the newspaper sensation the whole thing has created."

"It was certainly clever and original," mused Mrs. Wright. "No one but Jack would have had the brains to think it up. Can't you see, Helene, how brilliant—"

She broke off in alarm. All three women sprang up excitedly. There was a wild clamor of voices below stairs. Then the sound of swift running feet on the stairs. The door burst open and a truly horrible figure reeled into the room.

CHAPTER VII.
"Rough Work."

Into the room staggered a man. His derby hat was smashed to flinders and its torn brim was jammed down over his eyes. His coat was in ribbons, his gay waistcoat a tattered wreck.

He swayed dizzily, and panted for exhaustion as he tumbled into a chair. Even Mrs. Wright looked at him a second time before she recognized him. But Helene, with the eyes of love, had known him at a glance.

"Jack Wright!" she gasped, incredulous.

"All that's left of him," answered Billy Peyton, who had followed the disheveled Jack into the room.

"Oh, my boy! My boy!" cried Mrs. Wright, in pain, rushing to her son's side and kneeling in front of him. "Are you hurt? Where? Tell me!"

"Where?" echoed Jack, hoarsely. "Everywhere. And I'm not hurt. I'm slaughtered. Butchered to make an Examiner holiday. I—"

"But where are you injured?" pleaded his mother. "Oh, isn't there anything I can do for you, dear lad?"

"Yes. Send me to a hospital! Don't worry, mother. I'm not injured anywhere. I'm just down and out."

"Foxey!" commanded Mrs. Peyton, "can you explain? What has happened?"

"We've been mobbed," returned Foxey, readjusting his own rumpled clothing. "Jack got most of it. That's the tale of woe: Women, women, women, women, women!" groaned Jack.

"That's it," assented Peyton. "Wom-

THE LOTTERY MAN

plied. "One of the first things you ever said to me was to warn me against a marriage for money. And now you are—the Lottery Man. Selling yourself for $300,000."

"I'm not selling myself," he urged. "It'll be my money—not hers."

"So you really intend to marry the winner of this horrible Lottery?"

"I'm the victim of circumstances," he evaded, sulkily.

"A 'victim'?" she scoffed, "and with $300,000!"

"You've never known what it means to want for money. To have to have it. To be broke. Just the same, I'd never have gone on in this deal if I'd met you first. And you know I wouldn't."

"I can't see what difference that would have made," she said, willfully refusing to understand.

"Here are some buttons," announced Mrs. Wright, coming in, "and the needle and thread. I'm afraid there aren't enough buttons though. I'm going to look for more."

She set down the sewing things and a cardboard box of buttons and bustled out.

"Here!" said Helene, with the air of a martyr. "I'll heap coals of fire on your head by sewing those buttons on. Take off your coat."

Delightedly he obeyed, seating himself at her side and watching her busy fingers at work among the buttons.

"Let me see," she said, sorting out the various hued buttons. "They're brown, aren't they?"

"No," he answered, his gaze on her flushed face. "They are blue. Blue as violets under spring skies."

"Violet blue buttons?" she cried. "Are you crazy?"

"I—I meant your eyes," he faltered.

"Silly!" she rebuked, snatching up the coat to hide her embarrassment.

Her sudden gesture dislodged a mass of coupons from the garment's inner pocket.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" she began, bending to pick them up.

"Don't!" he cried, in alarm, swooping down in a vain attempt to snatch away the coupons from her. "Please don't!"

But he was too late. Already her glance had fallen upon the coupons, and from each one her own name stood forth in glaring distinctness. She sprang to her feet and faced the woefully embarrassed youth.

"Why, Jack Wright!" she flared; "they're every one of them in my name! Every one of them. You dared? You dared do such a thing?"

Before he could reply or interfere she was down upon the fallen coupons, angrily tearing them to fragments.

"Don't, Helene! Don't!" he entreated.

"Good Lord! There go all my lunches for the last two months."

"Lunches?" she echoed, amazement momentarily overcoming wrath. "Do you eat them?"

"No, I don't eat anything but my own words for lunch nowadays. Oh," he added, bitterly, "I might have known I was buying coupons for a girl who would not marry me, even if she got the lucky number."

"Marry you? You dared to think it for one moment. You placed me on a level with those horrible button-women—those souvenir fiends! Oh I'll never forgive you! Don't speak to me again. I cannot—"

Her half-tearful tirade was drowned by a fearful noise in the street below. A window smashed. Then another. A roaring chorus of high-pitched cries filled the air.

Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Peyton, Lizzie Roberts, Foxey, and one or two scared-looking servants dashed excitedly into the room.

"What's up?" queried Jack, in amaze.

Without replying, Foxey jumped to the telephone and called up police headquarters.

"Send the reserves—the mounted cops—anything you can spare—" he ordered, "to clear the street in front of my house."

From outside the noise was redoubling. Another window pane on the ground floor smashed.

"Jack!" almost wept Mrs. Peyton; "I do wish you'd stay home when you're going to do a thing like this. There are thousands and thousands of crazy women filling the whole street. They're trying to break in. They're the Lottery competitors and somehow they have learned you are here."

"Go to the window, Jack, and make a speech!" urged Foxey. "That may hold them till the police come. Go ahead! They'll be in here in another minute if you don't."

He half dragged, half shoved Jack to the long window overlooking the street. At sight of the Lottery Man, the mob outside set up a rapturous roar. The falsetto cries mingled with the tinkle of broken glass.

"Ladies!" shouted Jack, hoarsely, leaning far out, "Ladies—be gentlemen, I beg. No, no! I don't mean that! I—"

"Brace up, you idiot!" urged Foxey.

"Brace up, you idiots," orated Jack, in dull obedience. "When I gaze down upon this sea of upfaced turns—upturned faces—er, of so distinguished a—Ladies, in fact I may say—I am a believer in the rights of man, but I think no women should get off. I—"

The ring of the telephone broke off his idiotic words. He turned back into the room. Foxey had picked up the receiver.

"That you, Maguire?" Peyton was saying. "What's that? The lottery number's drawn? What is it? Say it again. Oh, 1323?"

"The Jonah number coupled with the getaway sign," growled Jack, glancing surreptitiously at such coupons as he had saved from Helene. His mother and Foxey and Mrs. Peyton were also busily consulting their own heaps of coupons. One by one they laid down the bits of paper with hopeless shakes of the head.

"What did you say the lucky number was?" asked Lizzie Roberts.

"Thirteen twenty-three," answered Foxey. "And I haven't got it! I wonder who—"

"I have!" cried Lizzie, in wheezy triumph, waving a solitary coupon. "The Lottery Man is mine! Oh, Jack, this is so sudden! I always knew I'd be married one of these days."

CHAPTER VIII.
The Winner and—A Loser.

No one, afterward, could remember just what happened when Lizzie threw that verbal bombshell into Jack Wright's air castles. There was some dim memory of her dry voice raised in an account of how she had "bought just one coupon, because she couldn't resist the temptation of trying to make dear Mr. Wright happy." There was also a horrible recollection of an attempt on her part to sink gracefully into Jack's protecting arms.

Then Helene had suddenly vanished from the room and had been seen no more that day. Mrs. Wright had dragged the dazed Jack home, and Mrs. Peyton and Foxey had exhausted their combined efforts on keeping Lizzie from following the dizzily retreating form of the man she had won.

Next morning Mrs. Peyton descended to the drawing-room to find Lizzie seated majestically in the center of the apartment, glancing over the contents of a wastepaper basketful of letters. It was Lizzie's custom to wake her employer each morning and to read the papers aloud, as Mrs. Peyton dressed. This morning, the once obsequious companion had not been at her post.

"Why, Lizzie!" exclaimed Mrs. Peyton, in surprise, "what are you doing?"

"I am glancing through my correspondence," said Lizzie, with lofty aloofness. "This morning I have received no less than 700 offers of marriage through the mail. If I refuse to marry Jack, you know, I will still have half his $300,000."

"And you will refuse him?" begged Mrs. Peyton, eagerly.

"Oh, no!" simpered Lizzie, with an air of coquetry that suited her queer personality about as well as a diamond tiara would adorn a moulting hen. "I shall follow the dictates of my innocent young heart." Then, in calm dignity: "May I trouble you to close that door behind you, Mrs Peyton? The draught distresses me."

The utter change in her recently cringing companion robbed poor Mrs. Peyton of speech and of will power alike. Meekly she closed the door as she was commanded and sat down staring at Lizzie. The latter was again opening envelopes.

"Some of these proposals are very ardent," she purred; "but I am not surprised. My personality has ever held a subtle charm for men. I shall keep the best of them and print them in my autobiography."

"In your what?" gasped Mrs. Peyton.

"My autobiography. The Examiner has offered me $1,500 to write it. I think I shall entitle it 'Up from Bondage!'"

Mrs. Peyton could only gasp in horrified fascination. Foxey broke the spell by hurrying noisily into the room.

"Oh, here you are, mother!" he began, "I was looking for you to—"

"Mr. Foxhall," interrupted Lizzie, plaintively, "may I trouble you to close doors more gently? The effect on my nerves—"

"Why, little Bright Eyes!" chuckled Foxey. "There was a match on the floor between us, and I never saw you. How is the heiress this morning?"

"I have just enjoyed a five-course breakfast," answered Lizzie, "and I never felt better. In view of my coming marriage—"

"Your approaching marriage!" echoed Mrs. Peyton, in despair. "Oh, Lizzie, you'll surely never hold Jack Wright to such an absurd bargain! The prospect of so much money has gone to your head. Refuse him, and be content with the $150,000. After being penniless all your life, such a fortune would—"

"That's just it," retorted Lizzie; "I've been wanting a lot of things all these years."

"A woman of your age!"

"That's just it! Look at all the years I've wasted. From now on, I'm going to live. And I don't really think a temperamental woman like myself can live without love!"

"Murder!" groaned Foxhall. "Mother, can't you—"

"I can't do a thing with her!" lamented Mrs. Peyton.

"Well," said Foxey, "the thing's got to be decided to-day. You know that was the condition. Both parties were to decide by noon to-day whether it should be marriage or an equal division of the $300,000."

"You may think it bold of me," smirked Lizzie, "but I am quite content to abide by the terms of the contract."

"You're determined to marry Jack?"

"Certainly. No half-rates for me! I intend to accept his proposal. Should he be so bashful as to refuse to marry me, the condition of the contest gives me the whole $300,000 for consolation."

"And poor Jack will be dead broke?"

"Not if he marries me. And I can see he wants to."

"I can see his finish!" muttered Foxey. "The poor old chap! And with that $150,000 he needn't have been afraid of Helene's wealth any longer. That's your final decision, Lizzie?"

"Yes. You may tell him so if he is worrying for fear I may reject him. I will now go to my room and begin my autobiography."

She swept out with a grand duchess air that would at any other time have convulsed Foxey. But now he only looked after her in dumb perplexity.

THIEVES ROB RECTOR'S

Robbers Get Between $3,500 and $4,000 in Chicago Cafe.

Cashier Adams, Waiter and Scrub Woman Were Only Inmates When Daring Robbery Occurred.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Four armed men held up and robbed Rector's restaurant at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. The restaurant is at Clark and Monroe streets, in the heart of the business section. The robbers got between $3,500 and $4,000 and had no trouble in making their escape. Cashier J. P. Adams, a waiter and a scrub woman, were the only persons in the restaurant. Four men entered by the Monroe street door and went directly to the cashier's deck. They they drew revolvers and "Hands up" was ordered.

The waiter and the woman were forced to stand with their faces to a wall with their hands above their heads while Adams was ordered to open the safe and hand out its contents. He opened the money box of the safe and handed over receipts, estimated at between $3,500 and $4,000. Adams was then ordered to join his companions standing face to the wall and the four men backed out of the place and made their escape.

TWO DIE IN N. Y. FIRE

General Window Ledge Rescues in Tenement Blaze.

Lodger Attempts to Rescue Missing Girl and Is Found Dead—Girl Also Lost Life Is Belief.

New York, Feb. 6.—The cries of a man who leaned from a fourth-story window holding with one arm a baby, and with the other his wife, was the first warning persons in Sixty-Eighth street had of a fire that burned out the building at No. 105, cost the life of a man and perhaps of a girl, and was the occasion of a series of window ledge rescues by volunteers that was the talk of every fire house in the city.

Gruenech, his wife, baby and mother, were at the dinner table when flames that had started in the basement and sneaked up the dumb waiter shaft burst upon them by way of the kitchen. The startled family turned toward the fire escape at the rear, to find themselves facing a howling blaze. Then Grunech, holding the baby and pushing his wife and mother ahead of him, made for a parlor window and there did the shouting that aroused the neighborhood. They were rescued, but Mrs. Gruenech may die as the result of burns.

On the top floor meanwhile the family of Charles O'Connor were in straits. There were O'Connor, his wife, four daughters, three sons and a lodger. O'Connor marshalled his household on the fire escape and descended, but at the last minute the boy, Charley O'Connor discovered his sister Florence was missing and ran screaming back to get her. He was rescued later.

The lodger, Schimmel, safe on the fire escape, also saw that Florence O'Connor was missing and went back. They found Schimmel's body later stretched across the bed in the room where he had hoped to find the little girl. The girl is still missing. Damage, $20,000.

DANVILLE GRAND JURY VERY BUSY

New Prosecutor May Be Asked In Vote Buying Cases.

EXPECT PERJURY INDICTMENTS

Foreman Woodyard Said to Be In Communication With Adams County, Ohio, Officials Who Unearthed Gross Vote Frauds.

Danville, Ill., Feb. 5. — Vermilion county vote dealers rapidly are approaching hysteria and nervous breakdown. The reasonable and logical "dope" with which they have been consoling each other is going to smash before the illogical, unreasonable pugnacity and determination of Foreman Isaac Woodyard and his farmer grand jury.

Here are some of the things which are spoiling digestions in Danville political circles:

The grand jury again is considering the appointment of a special prosecutor. Foreman Woodyard is in direct communication with the Adams county, Ohio, officials who wrought such destruction to electoral corruption. Detectives hired by the grand jury are seen by the nervous ones in every stranger. Indictments of prominent citizens for perjury and subordination of perjury are known to be under consideration by the relentless jurors.

Negroes are panic-stricken over the common rumor that they only will be indicted for vote selling and many would be glad to go in and "squeal" on white fellow corruptionists in order to get immunity.

The grand jury now has the poll lists for all recent elections and further witnesses must "come down to cases." Factional passions, in spite of all efforts to subdue them, threaten to break out with disastrous results.

Ernest X. Leseure, president of the Danville Natoinal bank, son-in-law and campaign manager of Speaker Cannon, and generalissimo of "the federal crowd," remains unaccountably absent.

The grand jury has no charge to make against State's Attorney Lewman for his work with that body, but feels that more progress could be made with a legal adviser who would take an aggressive part in the fight. Mr. Lewman's attitude has been within the strict letter of the law.

He does not feel it his duty to suggest possible lines of investigation. When the time comes to vote indictments he leaves the grand jury room, but is ready to draw to the best of his ability any indictment the jury may declare true bills.

Mr. Lewman's own election and primary fight comes within the eighteen months' limit prescribed by Judge Kimbrough. The jury wants to ask him some questions regarding campaign expenditures and agrees that it would be embarrassing to ask them while acting as their legal adviser.

Unless the grand jurors change their minds there will be several indictments for subordination of perjury. In the examination of witnesses it has developed that several political leaders have been active in training prospective grand jury witnesses to evade questions as to the votes they bought. The temper of the jury has been aroused at this interference and punishment is demanded.

ILLINOIS TO HONOR LINCOLN'S BIRTH

President Taft to Attend Memorial Services.

DENEEN TO HOLD RECEPTION

Many Notables in State and Nation to Pay Homage at Bier of Honored Martyred President—Program Is Completed.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 6. — Lincoln's birthday will be celebrated next Saturday in Springfield as Illinois never before has honored the memory of her greatest son.

The final touches upon the exceptional arrangements which have been made for the arrival and reception of the president of the United States, who comes direct from Washington as the representative of the nation, were placed upon the program by the joint committee representing the Lincoln Centennial association and the general assembly of the state. The indications are that the most distinguished body of men which has assembled in Illinois for many years will join in the proceedings of the day.

Official in part and civic in part, the events of next Saturday cover a wide field. Gov. Deneen, representing the commonwealth, is to be the official host of President Taft and his party. The military service of the state will be represented by the First infantry from Chicago; the state supreme court will join in the functions of the day, and the senate and house of representatives will meet in special joint session at the suggestion of United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom to receive the president officially.

Socially the day's program will have as its feature a reception to the president by Gov. and Mrs. Deneen at the executive mansion, to which have been invited the best known people of Springfield, Chicago, and the state at large.

Everything culminates in the great banquet to be given by the Lincoln Centennial association. Eight hundred places are to be provided at the tables in the state arsenal. It is at this banquet that President Taft will deliver his address in the evening, paying the tribute of the nation to the life and public service of Lincoln.

Congressman-Elect Martin W. Littleton of New York city is the only other speaker besides President Taft. Federal Judge J. Otis Humphrey of Springfield is to be the toastmaster.

Robert T. Lincoln comes from Chicago, bringing with him a party of especially invited guests, who will have seats at one of the honor tables. Mr. Lincoln is to be a conspicuous figure in the day and, with the presidential party, will visit the old Lincoln home on South Eighth street and then proceed to the Lincoln tomb in the crypt of the monument in Oak Ridge cemetery.

From the tomb the president will go to the state capitol, where the general assembly will be convened in joint session awaiting his arrival where he will make an address.

BATTLE IS RAGING AT BAUCHE, MEX.

Federal Troops Trapped and Escape Cut Off, Is Report.

FIRE SHOTS AT RED CROSS FLAG

Fight Is First in General Assault of Juarez and Has Been in Progress for Some Time—Troop Train Repels an Attack.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 6.—The battle of Bauche, the first fighting attending the fight attending the assault on Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, is being fought. The federal forces are trapped at the base of a series of small hills, twelve miles from Juarez, surrounded by insurrectos, and unless a miracle occurs, they cannot escape. The insurrectos number 800 men with 300 or more coming up from the south. The exact number of the federals is not known.

Jasqual Orozoco, commander of the insurrectos, was not seen himself. He is said to be a mile and a half west, but Capt. F. J. Casavantes, in command of the eastern detachment of insurgents, said the assault would be made by the rebels at night. He declared that a train would be attacked and bombs used. They were composed of dynamite wrapped with small pieces of steel. These, he said were to be thrown against the train and he expected federals to be blown up. The federals carry a Gating gun, and are said to have fired four times upon a Red Cross flag carried by doctors operating in insurgent ranks.

A Red Cross train under command of Dr. J. A. Samaniego of El Paso, left Juarez with a number of volunteer nurses on board and carrying hospital supplies, but turned back for some reason before reaching the scene of the fighting. This train was intended to care for the federal wounded, but inasmuch as insurrectos were between the federals and town, the train did not go far. Reaching the vicinity of the battle they picked up Francisca Arevala, a woman who had been wounded by insurrecto fire. When the fighting started they tried to escape. Her companion was killed and she herself shot in the hip.

The battle did not open until daylight, although the federals coming to reinforce Juarez from Casas Grande, ran into tornup track on the Mexico Northwestern road. The insurrectos did not attack the train waiting to ascertain whether train carried rebels or federal troops. Finding it was federals, the attack was made, but the rebels found that the federals during the night had dug intrenchments around the train and set up a Gatling gun. Then followed the all day fight from behind hills waiting the cover of darkness to rush the federals. Not until this fight is over will there be an attack on Juarez. The federals are said to have 600 men. Juarez looks like a congress of nations. Flags of every color are floating from all the housetops and doors, showing the foreign residents. The Mexican national emblem floats from every official building, except the custom house.

100 CARLOADS OF OIL BURN IN FIRE

Erie Warehouse in New York Is Mass of Ruins.

LOSS IS PLACED AT $250,000

Large Amount of Oil Pourned Into River Without Igniting—Smoke Retards Movements of the Ferry Boats on River.

New York, Feb. 6.—When 100 carloads of heavy lubricating oil, stored in an Erie railroad company's warehouse on the Weehawken riverside, caught fire, a black plume of smoke, as wide as the river itself waved over the Manhattan shore, and as far east as Coney Island all day and late into the night. At times the river was so obscured that ferry boats had to sound their whistles and grope blindly through it as if through a fog.

The oil house, as the railroad company called the big two-story brick warehouse near the docks at Eighteenth street, Weehawken, was a brick structure, 700 by 200 feet in dimensions, which stood between the network of the Erie and West Shore tracks at the base of the Palisades and the docks constituting a portion of the Erie company's marine yard. When the last flicker of flame was quenched the oil warehouse and its contents had been destroyed.

A strange freak of the fire manifested itself shortly after, the fire boats got to work. From the burned doorway on the dock side of the building two thick streams of black oil, each almost as thick as one of the garden hose lines of pipe which the Weehawken volunteers were trying to string, ran out and over the dock to the edge. There they bent like a lead pipe would be bent, without break, and dropped down into the water. The streams poured out from the cauldron of fire thus for half an hour without igniting.

The smoke by this time had mounted a thousand feet and more into the heavens and was being piled in cumulus heaps by the stiff western wind. For a part of the time it drove straight against the Metropolitan tower in Manhattan as if it would daub the white monolith with oily soot from tip to roof. Whenever the wind died down the smoke bulged out over the river, completely obscuring the Manhattan shore from the view of those on the Weehawken side. The money loss is placed at $250,000.

THOUSANDS STARVING

London, Feb. 6. — Shanghai dispatches to a news agency here set forth the situation due to famine in the provinces of Ngai-Hwei and Kiang-Si are most serious. Information received at Shanghai indicates that thousands are perishing from starvation, the dead remaining unburied.

Fears are entertained for the safety of many American missionaries. It is stated that nearly 2,000,000 people are in danger of death unless prompt relief is forthcoming.

Loses Foot Under Train.

Monroe, Mich., Jan. 31.—Albert Pick, who gives Detroit as his home, was struck by Detroit-Toledo Shore line freight train at Stoney Creek, five miles north of here. One foot was badly crushed. He was taken to the home of a farmer nearby, where the injured foot was amputated. It is said he slipped in trying to board the train.

Cadillac—Missing a bale of hay as he struck at it with a steel hook in his hand, M. Shaw, drayman, accidentally drove the weapon into the throat of W. G. Watson, his partner in the draying business. The steel point entered the right side of the jaw, well toward the chin. Mr. Watson pulled the hook from the wound and walked unaided to a physician's office for medical treatment.

"Can you beat it?" he murmured.

"It's all my fault," answered his mother, contritely. "I'm a selfish old woman. I can see that now. I've thought of nobody but myself. And now that I really want to help people, I can't. If only I could arrange it for Helene and Jack to—"

"Why, mother!" exclaimed Peyton. "I never heard you speak like that before!"

"You never hear me speak as other mothers do to their sons. We aren't close together, you and I, Foxey, as—as Jack and Mrs. Wright are, I—I wish we might be chums like—"

"We, can!" he insisted. "I never knew you cared. Or I—"

"I care more for your love and comradeship than anything else in the world. And if you'll be chums with me, I'll try to forget all my silly 'cures' and 'treatments' and selfishness. Will you, Foxey?"

"Will I?" he laughed, stooping to kiss her. "It's a bargain. We're chums, henceforth and forever."

Scarcely had Mrs. Peyton left the room by one door than Jack came furtively in by another.

"Foxey!" called Wright, in a guarded voice. "Has she softened up at all, yet?"

"Softened up!" repeated Foxey, his voice unwontedly tender. "You can bet she has. Why, Jack, she's a real mother, after all."

"A mother?" gasped Jack, in blank dismay. "Lizzie?"

"Oh, to blazes with Lizzie! I was speaking of—"

"To blazes with Lizzie, by all means," cheerfully assented Jack: "but will she let us out of the bargain?"

"Not she. It's marry or stay poor, as far as you're concerned. She hasn't the heart to refuse you!"

"The heart? Lizzie? Why, Lizzie has no more heart than a gas trust. She'd make old Shylock with his pound of flesh look like the president of a humane society. To think of my having to marry that human handicap! Everybody'd think I was paying an election bet. And if I've money I don't ask—"

Helene came in from the breakfast room, checking Jack's wail of hard luck. Foxey tastefully took himself out of the way. Catching sight of Jack, the girl halted. Then, making the best of an embarrassing situation, she came forward and said with forced gaiety:

"How is the man who woke up to find himself famous?"

"I didn't," gloomily contradicted Jack; "I found myself famous, and then—I woke up."

"That is a sorrowful pose for a man to take on his wedding day," she commented, cruelly.

"My wedding day! Why, I—oh, well, why should I blame you? Even mother thought I might be going to marry Lizzie."

"And aren't you?" she asked, with charming innocence.

"You ought to know I'm not."

"Then why are you so unhappy?"

"Because, if I don't marry her, I'm still penniless. And—"

"But no worse off than before?"

"A thousand times worse off. Because I love a girl who has money to burn. And I'm not cur enough to ask her to marry me when I haven't a dollar to my name."

"Jack!"

"I'm not going to tell you how I love you," went on Jack, miserably. "I'm not going to tell you you're the star of my soul and the one girl on earth for me, and that I shall always be the better for having known and loved you. I'm not going to tell you any of these things. I'm going to be strong and leave you and never, never see you again."

Before either of them realized it, their lips had met in a long kiss. Then, with a little cry, Helene ran from the room.

"Yes," muttered Jack, sternly, as he flung himself into a chair, "I'm going to be strong. I'll never see her again. Never again. I—I wonder—if—"

A pair of hands closed over his eyes. Someone had tiptoed into the room and crept up behind him unobserved. With an exclamation of delight, all his good wishes hurled to the winds, Jack sprang to his feet, to face the newcomer.

"Helene!" he cried, utterly happy.

Then, he stopped short, and stared down with amazed disgust at—Lizzie Roberts.

"I wanted to see you,' she began, coyly.

"So you had to see me first," he agreed, finding his voice and his temper at the same time.

"Do you know," giggled Lizzie, "I fancied you were attracted to me the very first time we met. I—I came here to tell you I'm ready."

"To call it off and split the purse?" he cried, eagerly.

"No, no, you foolish, timid boy! To marry you!"

"I can't let you sacrifice yourself like that," said Jack, virtuously. I'm unworthy of you. You should marry some big, curly-haired fellow with long, lovely black whiskers."

"No!" she replied, coquettishly. "I'd rather have you. And I've picked out a dear little nest to live in. It's in the Bronx."

"At the Zoo! Just the thing. With a lot of creepy, crawly, slimy, slithery snakes and a few grizzly bears thrown in for good measure."

"I told the decorators to come this afternoon," pursued Lizzie, unheeding, "and select the color scheme for the furniture. I've thought of a lovely color scheme—"

"Black," suggested he. "Jet black. With crape on the door."

"Crape?" she echoed, shocked. "What for?"

"For dead hopes," he returned. "It's a solemn thing to marry."

"It's a good deal solemner not to," she declared. "I know you've never been a companion to a woman who went in for beauty culture. This is my last chance of escape."

"Couldn't you escape as well on $150,000?"

"Then you refuse me?" moaned Lizzie.

"I do—not," he muttered, in an agony irresolution.

"Oh!" she squealed. "This is a proposal. An actual proposal from you. How heavenly!"

Before he could guess her intent, she had thrown herself bodily upon him in an adoring embrace. The door behind them was suddenly flung open.

CHAPTER IX.

The Winner.

"I beg everybody's pardon," remarked Foxhall Peyton, looking amusedly at Jack's wild struggle to free himself from Lizzie's clinging embrace. "I didn't mean to butt in on a lovers' tryst."

"Cut it out!" snapped Jack. "You're a life saver."

For Lizzie had sidled coyly to the door and was vanishing. Peyton watched her out of sight. Then he turned on Jack in scarce suppressed excitement.

"I've got news," said he.

"I'm tired of news," protested Jack. "But let it go. It can't be any worse than the news that I've either got to marry that living skeleton or else go broke. Fire away!"

"How would you like to get out of the match and still have half the cash?" queried Foxey.

"How would I like to have the United States Sub-Treasury handed me as a birthday present," retorted Jack. "The one is about as likely to happen as the other. Don't pile on the agony, old man."

"I'm not piling it on. I'm trying to lift it off, if only you'll shut up and give me a chance. My man Hamilton's been talking to me."

"Deuced bad form to let one's valet talk to one," commented Jack. "What does he want? To take Lizzie off my hands?"

"Yes. Exactly that."

"But you told me once he was engaged to your mother's maid, Norah."

"Will you let me explain?" ejaculated Foxey, impatiently. "Here's the idea: The servants, it seems, hate Lizzie. While my mother was taking that apple-and-cracker diet Lizzie got into the habit of sneaking into the pantry for secret lunches. The grocer's boy had been giving Nora bunches of Lottery Man coupons. Hamilton declares Nora saw Lizzie pick up and pocket one of those coupons. Nora had dropped it on the pantry floor. And that's the 'Lucky Number' coupon! The coupon she won you with."

"But—but—can Hamilton and Nora prove this?" asked Jack, fearing to hope.

"No. They can't. That's just the trouble. It's only Nora's hunch.'"

"Then," observed Jack, "as a last resort we'll have to give Lizzie the third degree. Lizzie," he called, raising his voice.

From the next room, where she was waiting for Foxey to depart and leave the field clear to her, Lizzie sidled playfully through the doorway.

"You called me, dearie?" she cooed, coming up to Jack.

"Lizzie!" began Peyton, with cold, judicial sternness; "Lizzie, I—I—oh, I can't say it, Jack! You break it to her!"

"No!" sighed Jack, "I haven't the heart."

"Why, whatever is the matter?" piped Lizzie, anxiously.

"Be gentle with her!" Jack was imploring Peyton. "Don't let the police come up here—just yet!"

"The police!" squealed Lizzie. "Why, what on earth—"

"I fear it is my duty," meditated Foxey. "And yet—I suppose it is her first offense. You've never been arrested before, have you, Lizzie?"

"Me? Good gracious! Never! What—"

"How about that coupon of Nora's that you swiped off the pantry floor?" thundered Jack.

"Hush, Jack!" commanded Peyton. "We've no legal right to question her. Let the policemen downstairs do that. I'll send for them to come up."

"Very well!" snapped Lizzie, with quite an unexpected show of spirit. "Let them come up. I'm perfectly innocent. I never stole that coupon."

"We have a witness that can prove it," accused Foxey; "a witness who saw you take the coupon from Nora's pocket."

"I never took it from her pocket!" cried Lizzie, forgetting caution, in her eagerness at self-defense; "I found it on the floor of the pantry. I—"

She caught herself up. But it was too late. Jack sighed rapturously, as though the weight of the universe had been lifted from his shoulders. Lizzie looked at him in tearful despair.

"I didn't steal it," she quavered, "I just happened to find it. And when it proved to be the winning number, it—it seemed just providential."

"It's Norah's," asserted Peyton. "You have admitted that in the presence of witnesses."

"Come," urged Jack. "Give it up, Lizzie. And I'll stake you to that little house in the Bronx and throw in a little something every month to keep the wolf from the door."

"But—" whimpered Lizzie; "I'll be so lonely, there!"

"Not when it's known you've got a house of your own and a bit of income," soothed Jack. "You'll get a husband quickly enough then. The kind I told you about, perhaps. A nice plump man with lovely oiled hair and beautiful black whiskers And you can go out every morning and tame the wild flowers."

"Oh, well," agreed Lizzie, with a sniff of renunciation; "here's the old coupon then. I'll just run up to the Bronx and close the bargain on that little house. Perhaps it is just as well, after all. So flippant a man as yourself could never wholly have satisfied my temperamental dreams."

Jack looked after her. Then he glanced down at the coupon in his hand.

"I don't see, after all," said he, "that I'm so much better off than I was before. Norah may insist on marrying me."

"Not she," Foxey denied. "She and Hamilton were married secretly this morning. And I've got a written release from her. She gets half the $300,000. You get the other half and—where are you going?"

"To find Helene!" yelled Jack.

In the little morning-room downstairs he found her. The girl's eyes were suspiciously moist. Yet she forced a smile as he came toward her. Jack, on the contrary, looked woefully solemn.

"I've come to confess," he said, sheepishly. "You were right in your judgment of me. When it came to the pinch, I decided not to give up all that money. The temptation of wealth was too great."

"What?" she gasped, shocked, incredulous. "You mean you are actually going to keep the [illegible] marrying?"

"Exactly that!" he confessed. "I am going to marry."

"Oh!" she exclaimed, in utter contempt, "and you are the man I allowed to speak to me and—and to kiss me!"

"Quite right," he admitted. "And, lest there should be any doubt in your mind about it I am going to kiss you again."

"How dare you!" she panted, springing back—an instant too late.

"Oh, I am naturally brave," he said, complacently. "By the way, see the pretty wedding present Lizzie just gave me."

He handed her the coupon. Helene gazed at it in scorn—then—in wonder—then in dawning understanding.

"It's a booby prize, at best," he said, holding out his arms. "But—won't you make it precious by taking it?"

SONG SERVICE

M. E. CHURCH 5 O'CLOCK P. M.

Sunday February 5th.

The Song Service at the M. E. church on Sunday evening was listened to by a crowded house, and was one of great interest.

The theme of the evening was "The Shepherd Psalm." Singing the processional hymn the singers, who had met in the rooms below marched to their places. Responsive service, reading of the twenty third psalm, after which all joined in singing the Gloria.

The King of Love by the choir was followed by a fine solo, Meditation by Mrs. Kenrick.

Responsive reading on the parable of the sheep was made most impressive by the singing of "The Ninety and Nine" by Miss Edith Wilson, who sang verse by verse as the story was presented.

The Solo, Calvery given by Miss Cavanaugh of Alpena whose voice was a clear sweet high soprano and well adapted to the composition gave great pleasure to the audience.

B. J. Pulver, and Mrs. Ruthruff always favorites in the musical circle of Tecumseh sang "Hark, Hark My Soul" in their usual happy manner. One of the most beautiful numbers was "Seeking the Lost" by a quartette composed of Messrs Kennedy, Tansley, Rogers and Camburn. The chorus being chanted by the whole chorus.

A recitation by Miss Marjorie Rosacrans on "My Shadow" was given in a very charming manner. The organ solo, an adaptation from Departed Days, by Mrs. Ella Hodges deserves special mention and added much to the evenings enjoyment. This selection has been used by the Army at their memorial services as the flag is lowered to half mast.

The responsive song service given the first Sunday in each month is of interest as the large audience, which attends each time testifies When Rev. Kennedy rose to deliver his short sermon he could scarce find standing room, as the platform and every available place was occupied.

Mr. Kennedy deserves much credit and praise for carrying through so many successful services, and he promises something good for the future along this line.

"GRAUSTARK"

The mere announcement that "GRAUSTARK" is coming should arouse an exceptional interest in all lovers of the theatre, for as a rule they are also readers of fiction, and if they have not seen the play, have read the novel. Mr. George Barr McCutcheon, the author, is a product of that greater center of agriculture and literature, Indiana. James Whitcomb Riley, Booth Tarkington, George Ade and General Lew Wallace have all contributed to the state's fame, but no "best sellers" ever came out of Indiana and achieved greater fame and popularity than the works of McCutcheon and the greatest of these is "GRAUSTARK." It has had a larger output than the combined sale of all his other books and the demand for it still continues. Mr. Geo. D. Baker, who dramatized the novel, realized that the public would wish to see as much of McCutcheon as possible; and therefore, kept as closely to the story as the dramatic unities would allow. A guarantee of the correctness and beauty of the production is the name of James W. Castle, who staged Mme. Schuman-Heink's production of "Love's Lottery;" "Quo Vadis;" "When Jonny Comes Marching Home;" and other plays for Mr. F. C. Whitney, Mr. Edwin Knowles and Mr. Alfred E. Aarons. His staging of "GRAUSTARK," has been a labor of love, and he has given all that thought, care, patience and skill can contribute to a sumptuous production.

"GRAUSTARK'S" engagement at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 15, will be looked forward to by theatre-goers and book readers of TECUMSEH

LENAWEE CO. TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Adrian Feb. 2-3 1911

The Teachers' Institute opened Thursday with a large attendance of teachers All parts of the county were well represented. As the school law is such that a teacher can have the two days and attend the institute, nearly every teacher was in attendance

Mr. Hensel acted as chairman and introduced the speakers. Mr. Wm. McCracken an instructor in the Western State Normal school, spoke in place of Prof Waldo, who was unable to be present.

The high school orchestra under direction of Prof. Largerquist furnished the music. Dr. Bryan of Colgate University was the next speaker who was listened to with deep interest.

Friday's session was a continuation of that of Thursday. Prof. McAlpine and Dr. McCracken gave fine addresses and a discussion led by R. G. Crane were the morning features. The closing address by Dr. McCracken on "Taking Stock" was most interesting A business meeting then followed. Mrs H. V C Hart representing the Adrian Womans' Club, visited the meeting and made some suggestions relative to beautifying of school property and said that the clubs were ready to help the teachers in every way possible to the end.

At the business meeting on the afternoon a committee presenting resolutions, endorsing the work of M. W. Hensel and recommending his re-nomination and election Later in the day Mr. Hensel took the platform and asked those who were his friends to support him in the coming election. Principal H. E. Gallup gave an address on the proper foundation for high school work.

Miss Alice Wimple and Miss Mary Morden were on the discussion "What of the standard of English, and how shall it be reached" which was discussed by a number of teachers in 1½ minute talks, that brought out many fine ideas.

A general talk on school work in answer to questions closed this session of the institute.

The teachers seemed to take a deep interest in the speeches and discussions, and the institute has been a great success.

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Some of the Astronomers now declare that there are huge monsters on Venus and that there may be a state of life there comparable to that on this globe in the days of the antediluvian mammals. Taking into account the proximity of the holiday season, we should feel inclined to attribute these discoveries, more to the fruit cake and the plum pudding, not to speak of the eggnog and the doughnuts.

U. OF M. HAS PROUD RECORD

Twenty-seven Ann Arbor Alumni in Halls of Congress.

University of Michigan alumni of the eastern states will give a national dinner on February 4 at the Hotel Astor in honor of the university's alumni in the highest divisions of the national government. Michigan has a larger alumni delegation in congress than any other university in the country. Twenty-seven Michigan alumni, four of whom are senators, are members of the present congress. This number is almost twice as large as any other university in the country, for Havard has 16 of its alumni in congress, Yale and University of Virginia 15 each, University of Iowa 10, University Wisconsin and Cumberland university 9 each, Georgetown 8, Columbia and University of Georgia 7 each, Washington and Lee university 6, University of Pennsylvania, Vanderbilt university, University of Missouri and Cincinnati Law school 5 each, Princeton, Amherst, Trinity, University of South Carolina, Dartmouth, University of the South, University of Arkansas, Tulane university, Bowdoin, Albany Law school and University of Texas 4 each.

The alumni of the University of Michigan are so proud of this record that they will have the following delegation of Michigan men from Washington as their guests of honor at the national dinner: United States Senators Shively of Indiana, Warner of Missouri, McCumber of North Dakota, Sutherland of Utah, and the following members of the house of representatives: Needham of California, Taylor of Colorado, Cox of Indiana, Good of Iowa, Anthony of Kansas, Denby, Townsend, Diekema, McLaughlin, Smith (S. W.) and Dodds of Michigan, Borland of Missouri, Hitchcock and Kinkaid of Nebraska, Conry of New York, Gardner of New Jersey, Johnson and Sharp of Ohio, Barclay, Cooper, and Burke of Pennsylvania, Martin of South Dakota, and Plumley of Vermont.

NEWS OF THE U. of M.

Fifty members of the University of Michigan faculty took the 2:30 special leaving Ann Arbor Friday afternoon for New York city, to attend the national dinner given to Justice Day, of the class of '70, and the Michigan alumni members who are now in congress. The dinner was given Saturday night by the New York city alumni, and nearly a thousand sat down to the big feed.

President Hutchins left Thursday, to be there when the Michigan faculty got there, and President Emeritus Angell left on Wednesday, going by the way of Boston, where he attended the banquet of Brown alumni Friday evening. Among the special tables at the big Michigan dinner was one presided over Prof. Stanley, at which sat the glee club members, and another at which Prof. Trueblood presided, at which sat the old Michigan debators. Each of the faculty members presided over tables at which their special alumni was seated.

WASHINGTON LETTER

An extra session of Congress after the 4th of March is more than probable. Congress is pulling in several different directions. Certain Senators and members of the lower House are kicking over the traces because the lesson of the last congressional election is unheeded or misunderstood. Such a self-evident proposition as the desirability of reciprocity with Canada is opposed by a Senator from Texas and the Speaker of the House from Ill, and by a recently elected Senator from Massachusetts; all of the Senators from Nebraska have both given the Senate to understand that they are fighting to filibuster, and it is evident that within the three short weeks remaining the appropriation bills can not be passed without making concessions to recalcitrant elements in congress.

The President wants a tariff commission. The Democratic majority that will control the House after March 4th wants no tariff commission but does want to pass a tariff bill of their own. Between the two, the Senate and White House in opposition, no man knows and not even any woman an knowest.

Judge Lamar owes his appointment to the Supreme Court to the fact that Augusta, Ga, has a good tourist hotel and excellent golf links.

Three Ohio men say that they took money for their votes to obtain food. In other words, they sold their birthright for a mess of pottage.

NEWLOW SPREADERS.

About two years ago we noticed in an I. H. C. Guide a cut and discription of a lower spreader the company building. We made inquiries of different travelers regarding the same. Those who had seen it could not say enought in its favor.

We tried to secure the agency but were turned down repeatedly, as the capacity of the factory where they were being built was strained to the limit, owing to the great demand in the States where they had been introduced.

Last fall we were allowed one car of these spreaders. As soon as they were tried out under the most severe tests we, as well as every farmer who saw one work, realized that this spreader would revolutionize the spreader trade.

We sold the first car readily and have had no end of trouble in securing more, and have just recently made a contract for what we will want for the year.

These spreaders are 18 in. lower than all others. Have a steel frame—one wheel in front instead of two. For you to fully appreciate what they are, call and see them or talk with a farmer who has used one and hear what he says about how much easier they run than any other kind.

WIT AND WISDOM

An informal meeting of the Wit and Wisdom club was held Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Waring in Brownville. Mr. Waring came over with his sleigh and carried the crowd over and also brought them back at the close of the evening.

One item of interest was the fact that the house where they met was one, if not the oldest in town, being built in 1831.

A pot luck supper was the first thing on the program and was heartily enjoyed by each one present.

There was no regular program but various stunts were presented, among them a guessing contest which was pronounced one of the best ever, and caused much merriment. At a late hour the guests departed for their homes and decided that their entertainers had given them a most delightful evening.

TWO NOTED WILLS

BLAKEMAN AND CLARK TESTAMENTS GO TO PROBATE WITH NO CONTEST

Clinton, Mich., Feb. 1,—David Woodward of this village and Wesley Keysor of Tecumseh went to Adrian Monday to probate the will of the late Elizabeth Blakeman, which was made twenty years ago and all but forgotten. The property was left to the heirs of Ella Barnes. Mr. Keyser was appointed administrator. On Tuesday the will of the late Alonzo Clark was probated. E. A. Clark, a son from Chicago and his lawyer from that city, also Mrs. Mary Baker of Chicago and her lawyer from Detroit were present. This will has caused much interest since its contents were known, as it was rumored that Mrs. Baker, daughter of the deceased, intended to break it. But upon its probation however, all matters were settled. E. A. Clark was appointed administrator. Alonzo Clark was a rated millionaire. Some of the property is situated here, but it consists principally of apartment houses and hotels in Chicago.

INDIGESTION

Relief in Five Minutes and Permanent Cure or Money Back

When C. A. Wright & Son states that they have a remedy that only costs 50 cents and is guaranteed to cure any man or woman who suffers from food fermentation, or money back, what are the poor stomach sufferers in Tecumseh and vicinity going to do about it?

Food fermentation causes belching, sour stomach, gas eructation, heartburn and that lump of lead feeling as you know.

The name of this most remarkable stomach prescription is MI-O-NA. Most people call them MI-O-NA stomach tablets because they know that there is no remedy so good for indigestion or stomach disorders. Here is one opinion:

"I have been troubled with indigestion for more than a year. I bought one box of MI-O-NA and it cured me. Now I would not be without a box in the house for $5.00. It saves a lot of doctor bills when you can be cured for 50 cents.—Arthur Sederquest, 6 Nichols St., Wakefield, Mass.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets cost 50 cents a box at C. A. Wright & Son and druggists everywhere and money back if they don't cure.

Cows brought from $300 to $385, heifers from $140 to $225, and calves brought up to $100. E. H. Stiles, Fenton's veteran auctioneer, thinks this is a record for the state, and as he has cried more than 1,700 sales in Michigan he ought to be an authority.

What To Do
—FOR—
Sickly Children
Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

"OLD GUARD" IS ROUTED

Vote on Popular Election of Senator Before Adjournment.

Borah of Idaho Succeeds in Having Resolution Made Unfinished Business of Senate.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The senate of the United States now faces the certainty of a vote on the popular election of senators before the adjournment of congress. By skillful maneuvering Senator Borah succeeded in having the resolution made the unfinished business of the senate.

Hereafter it will come up automatically every day at 2 o'clock and Senator Borah will have it in a parliamentary position where he can compel its continuous consideration and ultimately force the senate to a vote upon the proposition.

It cannot be displaced from its commanding position on the senate calendar without a yea and nay vote. The majority that stood back of Senator Borah is too large to permit this to be done. As Senator Hale expressed it in his short capitulation speech, "manifestly the majority of the senate wants this matter placed before the body and it would be a waste of time to protest further."

LONG STRIKE DECLARED OFF

Garment Workers in Chicago Are Seeking Their Old Places.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The garment workers' strike is ended. After a struggle of 133 days the strikers voted to return to work, and all are expected to be re-employed within a week. The lack of money, the straitened circumstances of the strikers and the fact that the strike had lasted more than four months influenced the action.

When the rank and file of the strikers were informed that they could go back to work they cheered and then immediately left for their former places of employment. Several thousand were told to report for work by the various firms.

SALOON KEEPER SLAIN

Shot Down While Reaching for Revolver to Defend Himself.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—While reaching for his revolver to defend himself from two robbers who had commanded him to hold up his hands, John Mullany, fifty-four years old, the father of ten children, was shot and instantly killed in his saloon, 2101 West Sixty-third street.

Free Dyspepsia Sample

Sufferers from indigestion are waking up to the fact that peppermint lozenges, charcoal and "dyspepsia cures" are only makeshifts in the cure of so troublesome a complaint as chronic indigestion. What is required is something that will not only relieve but which will tone and train the digestive apparatus to again do its work normally, and this these simple remedies cannot do.

There is something more to the cure of indigestion than sweetening the breath, and yet a remedy that only contains digestive ingredients will not cure permanently, as the basis of indigestion is poor bowel circulation, and that requires a scientific laxative. We know of no remedy that combines these requirements better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which has been sold for a quarter of a century.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative tonic, a scientific blending of natural ingredients for the cure of constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sour stomach, sick headache and similar complaints. Its ingredients will so strengthen and tone the stomach and bowel muscles that they will again do their work naturally, and when that has been accomplished your trouble is over. Fannie Stuart, Staunton, Va., was a long-time sufferer, as was O. Tuck, Blackburn, Mo., and they both found their cure with this remedy. They became convinced that pills and tablets, salts, "dyspepsia cures," etc., were at best only temporary reliefs. They first accepted Dr. Caldwell's offer of a free sample bottle, which he willingly sends to anyone who forwards name and address. Later, having convinced themselves through the free sample, they bought Syrup Pepsin of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

The Milk in the Coconaut.

Probably everybody has wondered at times what kind of stuff the "milk" of the cocoanut is. One inducement generally held out by the dealer to the prospective purchaser is that the nuts are "all milky." Recent analyses, however, have dissipated the delusion that the fluid has anything in common with real milk. It contains only 4 per cent of solids, consisting chiefly of sugars, 2.8 per cent, the balance being made up of mineral matter and tartaric acid. More than half of the sugar present is mannitol, the sweet principle of manna, which is sometimes found also in wine as a product of normal grape sugar. The question has been discussed as to whether it would be profitable to extract the cocoanut water for the sake of its cane sugar, but as this amounts to only one-tenth per cent the process would not be commercially successful in spite of the water being a waste product. Even if the water contained 5 per cent of sugar, as some specimens appear to have shown, the recovery of this amount would be unprofitable. The juice of the sugar cane yields nearly 2[illegible] per cent of sugar.—New York World.

Two Thumbed Gloves.

In so cold a climate as that of Iceland the glove must be put off or on as rapidly and easily as possible, so it is made without fingers, and in order that no time may be wasted in distinguishing between right and left all gloves have two thumbs. You simply thrust your hand into the first glove that comes and your thumb immediately finds its way. There are, of course, drawbacks in the matter of appearance, for the dangling idle thumb looks untidy.—London Chronicle.

THE PEDDLER'S STORY.

A cold winter's night, several years since, found a stage-load of passengers gathered around the warm fire of a tavern bar-room in a New England village. Shortly after we arrived, a peddler drove up and ordered that his horse should be stabled for the night.

After we had eaten supper, we repaired to the bar-room, where the conversation flowed freely.

"Well, gentlemen," he commenced, knocking the ashes from his pipe and putting it in his pocket, "suppose I tell you about the last thing of any consequence that happened to me. You see I am now right from the West, and on my way home for winter quarters. It was during the early part of last spring, one pleasant evening, that I pulled up at the door of a small village tavern in Hancock county, Indiana. I said it was a pleasant—I mean warm. I went in and called for supper and had my horse taken care of. After I had eaten, I sat down in the bar-room. It began to rain about eight o'clock, and it was very dark out of doors. Now I wanted to be in Jackson the next morning, for I expected a load of goods there for me which I intended to dispose of on my way home.

"The moon would rise about midnight and I knew if it did not rain I could get along through the mud very well after that. So I asked the landlord if he would see that my horse was fed about midnight, as I wished to be off about two. He expressed some surprise at this and asked me why I did not stop for breakfast. I told him that I had sold my last load about out and that a new lot of goods was waiting for me at Jackson, and I wanted to be there before the express agent left in the morning.

"There were a number of persons sitting round while I told this, but I took little notice of them; only one arrested my attention. I had seen that week notices for the detection of a notorious robber. The bill gave a description of his person, and the man before me answered very well to it. He was a tall, well-formed man, rather slight in frame, and had the appearance of a gentleman, save that his face bore those hard, cruel marks which an observing man cannot mistake for anything but the index of a villainous disposition.

"When I went to my chamber, I asked the landlord who that man was, describing the individual. He said he did not know him. He had come that afternoon and intended to leave the next day.

"I had an alarm watch, and having set it to give the alarm at one o'clock, I went to sleep. I was aroused at the proper time and immediately rose and dressed myself. When I reached the yard I found the clouds all passed away and the moon was shining brightly. The hostler was easily aroused and by two o'clock I was on the road. The mud was deep and my horse could not travel very fast. However, on we went, and in the course of half an hour I was clear of the village. At a short distance ahead lay a large tract of forest, mostly of great pine. The road lay directly through this wood, and as near as I can remember the distance was twelve miles. Yet the moon was in the east and the road ran nearly west, so I thought I should have light enough.

"I had entered this wood and gone about half a mile when my wagon wheels settled with a jump and jerk into a deep hole. I uttered an exclamation of astonishment, but that was not all. I heard another exclamation from some source. What could it be? I looked quietly around but could see nothing, yet I knew the sound that I heard was very close to me. As the hind wheels came up, I felt something besides the jerk from the hole. I heard something tumble from one side to the other of my wagon, and I could also feel the jar occasioned by the movement. It was simply a man in my cart! I knew this on the instant.

"Of course I felt puzzled. At first I imagined that somebody had taken this method to obtain a ride. My next idea was that somebody had got in to sleep there; but this passed away as soon as it came, for no man would have broken into my cart for that purpose. And that thought, gentlemen, opened my eyes. Whoever was there had broken in. My next thought was of the suspicious individual I had seen at the tavern. He heard me say that my load was all sold out, and of course he supposed I had money with me. In this he was right, for I had over two thousand dollars. I thought he meant to leave the cart when he supposed I had reached a safe place, and then creep over and shoot me or knock me down. All this passed through my mind by the time I had got a rod from the hole.

"In a few moments my horse was knee deep in the mud, and I knew I could slip off without noise. So I drew my pistol and having twined the reins about the whipstock, carefully slipped down in the mud, and as the cart passed on I went behind and examined the hasp. This door of the cart lets down, and is fastened by a hasp, which slips over the staple and is then secured by a padlock. The padlock was gone, and the hasp was secured in its own place by a bit of pine, so that a slight force from within could break it. My wheel wrench stood in a leather pocket on the side of the cart, and I quickly took it out and slipped it into the staple, the iron handle just sliding down.

"Of course I knew my unexpected passenger was a villain, for he must have been awake ever since I started and nothing in the world but absolute villainy would have caused him to remain quiet so long, and then start up in this particular place. The thumping and pushing grew louder, and pretty soon I heard a human voice.

"'Let me out of this!' he yelled pretty loud.

"I lifted my head so as to make him think I was in my usual place and then asked him what he was doing there.

"'Let me out and I will tell you,' he replied.

"'Tell me what you are in there for.'

"'I got in here to sleep on the rags,' he answered.

"'How did you get in?' I asked.

"'Let me out or I'll shoot you through the head.'

"Just at that moment my horse's feet struck a hard road, and I knew that the rest of the route to Jackson would be good going, the distance of twelve miles. I slipped back on the footboard and took the whip. In fifteen minutes we cleared the wood, and away we went at a keen jump. The chap inside kept yelling to be let out.

"Finally, he stopped, and in a few moments came the report of a pistol—one—two—three—four, one right after the other. I heard the balls whiz over my head. If I had been on my seat, one of these balls, if not two, would have gone through me. I popped up my head again and gave a yell, and then I said,—

"'O God save me!—I'm a dead man!'

"Then I made a shuffling, as though I was falling off, and finally settled down on the footboard again. I now urged up the old mare by giving her an occasional poke with my whip stock, and she peeled faster than ever.

"The man called out to me twice more pretty soon after this, and as he got no reply he made tremendous efforts to break the door open, and as this failed him he made several attempts on the top.

"All this time I kept perfectly quiet holding the reins firmly, and kept poking the beast with the stock. We were not an hour going that dozen miles—not a bit of it; I hadn't much fear—perhaps I might tell the truth and say I had none, for I had a good pistol, and more than that, my passenger was safe, yet I was glad when I hauled up in front of the tavern and found a couple of men in the barn cleaning down some stage horses.

"'Well, old fellow,' said I, as I got down and went to the back of the wagon, 'you've had a good ride, haven't you?'

"'Who are you?' he cried, and he swore as he asked the question.

"'I am the man you tried to shoot' was the reply.

"By this time the two hostlers had come to see what was the matter, and I explained the case. After this I got one of them to run and rout the sheriff, and tell him what I believed I'd got for him. The first streaks of daylight were just coming up, and in half an hour it would be broad daylight. In less than that time the sheriff came and two men with him. I told him the whole affair in a few words, and then made for the cart. He told the chap inside who he was, and if he made the least resistance he'd be a dead man. I then slipped the wrench out, and as I let the door down the fellow made a spring. I caught him by the ankle, and he came down on his face. He was marched to the lockup, and I told the sheriff I should remain in town all day.

"After breakfast the sheriff came down to the tavern and told me that I had caught the very bird, and if I should remain until the next morning I should have the reward of two hundred dollars which had been offered.

"I found my goods all safe, paid the express agent for bringing them from Indianapolis, and then went to work to stow them away in my cart. The bullet holes were found in the top of the vehicle just as I expected.

"On the next morning the sheriff called upon me and paid me two hundred dollars in gold, for he had made himself sure that he had got the right villain.

"I afterwards found a letter in the postoffice at Portsmouth for me, from the sheriff of Hancock county, informing me that the fellow who tried to kill and rob me was in prison for life."—Waverly Magazine.

The Drinking Record.

The tombs of Beni Hassam are interesting on account of their realistic paintings. In these tombs, which are 5,000 years old, there are many pictures of drunkards. Drunken men, waving wine cups in both hands, are being carried home by slaves. Drunken women lurch through the streets, followed by little mocking children. All this, mind you, 5,000 years ago, says an antiquary in the Chicago Chronicle.

Alexander the Great used to hold drinking contests. He who could drink and carry off the most wine won. Promachus won a gold cup from Alexander by drinking 14 quarts of wine.

The Romans used to serve at their banquets wines 80 and 100 years old. They would mix with these wines turpentine, resin and sea water. Thus, they thought, a fine flavor was gotten.

I once tasted a wine 20 years old. It was so thick we had to dig it out with a spoon. Its flavor was so horrible that turpentine, resin and sea water would, no doubt, have improved it.

Origin of Old Sayings

The honeymoon —For 30 days after a wedding the ancient Teutons had a custom of drinking a mead made of honey.

The bridegroom — In primitive times the newly wedded man had to wait upon his bride and the guests on his wedding day. He was their groom.

Sirloin of beef — King Charles I, being greatly pleased with a roast loin of beef set before him, declared it "good enough to be knighted." It has ever since been called "sir loin."

A spinster—Women were prohibited from marrying in olden times until they had spun a full set of bed furnishings on a spinning wheel; hence, till married they were spinsters.

Cabal—This word was coined in Charles II's reign, and applied to his cabinet council. It was made out of the initials of their names, which were: Clifford, Arlington, Buckingham, Ashley and Lauderdale.

For Variety Collection

The newest and most expensive chain purses are of platinum, and while admittedly more costly than gold, it is claimed by authorities to be more satisfactory, as it retains its brilliancy and does not become dull and black with service.

A gold wrist bag now demands a purse and a small card case.

There are two new additions to the vanity collection which is becoming quite a formidable array of jingling things. The first is a cunning little stick containing powder for the nose, called a "powder gun." The powder and a wee powder puff which rests in a little gold ball, accompany the gun and make a most tempting set for the vanity collection.

AMERICAN MADE GOODS MEETING FAVOR IN CHINA

Boycott Is Completely Lifted and Demand Is Now Heavy.

Spokane, Washington — "China's boycott on American-made goods has been lifted as a result of the visit of the honorary commercial commissioners of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Pacific Coast," said C. Herbert Moore, former mayor of Spokane, on returning home from a stay of four months in the orient.

"There is every reason to believe that China will become one of the best customers of the United States," he continued, "and from now on the volume of exports to that country may be expected to increase very rapidly and substantially.

"In many places we found the intelligent and progressive Chinese eager for a representative form of government. This desire is spreading with rapidity, and there are many in the orient who believe that the advocates of this reform will be successful. The plan to establish a parliamentary body is generally favored.

"We were informed in many cities in the empire that the prominent Chinese regard the United States as their best friend because of this country's firm stand as to the integrity of China and in favor of the open door policy.

"Another thing that has contributed largely to our relations with progressive, awakening China is the fact that the effective crusade against the opium traffic originated and is being largely carried on by Americans.

"The progressive signs of China's advancement toward modern improvement are in evidence on all sides. Railroad building is being carried on in many directions and up-to-date methods and equipment are employed in transportation.

"One of the best signs is the almost universal desire on the part of the younger generations for education upon the American and European standards. We are told that many of the older families are preparing to send their sons to institutes of learning in America and if only half of the number promised comes to this country the student bodies of our universities and colleges will be largely increased during the next few years.

"We found the commercial men and bankers of China fully alive to the benefits to be derived from trade with the United States as a measure to encourage peaceful relations and promote progressive and prosperous intercourse. Progress in China is exceedingly favorable.

"We were entertained everywhere and on every hand with great consideration and politeness and were entertained in many cities. We had audiences with the prince regent, and the governors and viceroys and commercial bodies were lavish in their entertainment. They made us feel that they regard the United States as a good friend.

"We found that many American-made goods are adapted to Chinese needs and that they will use them in preference to the articles manufactured in Europe. China already is importing considerable flour and lumber from the Pacific and Northwestern states, and arrangements are under way to provide apples and fruits grown in the Pacific country. We also were told there is a growing demand for necessities and luxuries manufactured in middlewestern and eastern cities and that this is bound to increase."

The commissioners, who represented the commercial organizations of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Diego, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and Spokane, also visited important points in Hawaii, Japan and the Philippines, where they were received with signal honors. Delegates are highly gratified with what was accomplished on the trip and they believe that much good will follow in future trade relations with American houses.

Jellied Chicken.

Cook six chickens in a small quantity of water, until the meat will part from the bone easily; season to taste with salt and pepper. Just as soon as cold enough to handle remove bones and skin; place meat in a deep pan or mold just as it comes from the bone, using gizzard, liver and heart, until the mold is nearly full. To the water left in the kettle add three-quarters of a box of good gelatine (some add juice of one lemon) dissolved in a little warm water, and boil until it is reduced to a little less than a quart; pour over the chicken in the mold, leave to cool, cut with a very sharp knife and serve. The slices will not easily break up if directions are followed.

Pluto Company's Factory Scene of a Disastrous Accident—Explosion Was Heard For Miles Around—One Man Was Seriously Injured—Only Parts of Victims' Bodies Can Be Found.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 7.—Nine men are known to have been killed in an explosion at the Pluto Powder company's factory, about five miles south of Ishpeming, shortly after 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. Another workman, Andrew Mattson, is missing, and one man is injured.

Fortunately, there was not more than 1,000 pounds of dynamite mixed in gelatine when it exploded, a batch having been removed less than an hour before.

Superintendent Gunnell was in the building about an hour before the explosion. Henry Nault, a young man who had gone after some material, was returning and was about 3,000 feet from the building when the explosion occurred.

The company's officials say they do not know what caused the explosion. The gelatine building is completely wrecked. Only a few parts of the victims' bodies have so far been found.

The Pluto company had only recently started to manufacture soft dynamite.

The explosion was heard in Ishpeming.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 6.—Both houses of the legislature went on record in favor of paying the employees of the legislature for seven days a week. PAPER MEN PROTESTING Pulp Schedule in Reciprocity Measure Menaces Industry.

WOULD OPERATE ONE-SIDEDLY

Situation Has Been Presented to Ways and Means Committee of the House, and Reconstruction of Schedule Will Follow, It Is Said—Will Not Effect Remainder of Treaty.

Washington (Special).—As a result of the growing belief that the paper and wood pulp provisions of the new Canadian reciprocity agreement will operate one sidedly to benefit the dominion without a corresponding benefit to the United States, an important change is likely to be made by congress in the measure before it is ratified.

Paper manufacturers, and others who have studied the agreement closely, believe that the language of the arrangement is so drawn that the United States may be compelled to admit paper free, before Canada complies with her part of the agreement.

The situation has been presented to the ways and means committee of the house in such strong light that many members of that committee are satisfied that the agreement between the two countries on the paper and pulp provisions is open to reconstruction.

Secretary Knox of the state department sent a letter to the committee, stating that the commissioners who framed the reciprocal arrangement had arrived only at a tentative agreement upon the paper schedule. It can be changed, he said, without defeating the rest of the treaty.

ENGINEER IS BLAMED.

Six Perish in Collision on Grand Trunk Near Richwood, Ont.

London (Special).—Six persons were killed and six injured when a light engine ran into a Grand Trunk mail train at Richwood on the Buffalo-Goderich division.

There was a score of passengers on the mail train, which consisted of engine, baggage and express, combination smoker and mail and two day coaches. Every coach was burned in the fire that started immediately after the collision.

Pinned down by the beams of the express car, and with the flames coming nearer and nearer, Express Messenger Whitelaw shot himself with his revolver rather than endure the torture of the fire. His charred remains were taken from the wreck later.

Many rescuers were attempting to free him, when he said:

"If you don't help me soon I'll end it all." In a moment there was a muffled report. He had kept his word.

When his body was removed the blackened express revolver was found within a few inches of the charred bones that had once been the arm and hand of the ill-fated messenger.

Blame for the wreck is laid to rest with Engineer Eckert of the light engine, whose orders were to lie up at Drumbo to allow the mail train, westbound, to pass.

Former Legislator Dies.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 6.—Dr. Giles B. Allen, aged sixty-eight, for forty-four years a prominent physician of Charlotte, probate judge of Eaton county for six years, former member of the state legislature, and a member of Co. F, Sixth Michigan infantry, in the civil war, is dead at his home here.

At Odds Over Reciprocity.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 7.—This city and its Canadian sister city are peculiarly divided in sentiment regarding the proposed reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada. Members of the Canadian Soo council have forwarded a general protest on the whole to members representing their district in the Canadian parliament. Local officials have sent copies of their resolutions of approval framed by the aldermen to the Michigan senators and congressmen at Washington.

HIGHER STANDARDS FOR ADMISSION TO BAR NEEDED

"The real trouble," writes Dean H. M. Bates, of the Law Department of University of Michigan, in the Chicago Sunday Tribune, "is that there are too many 'half-baked' lawyers, but not enough men well prepared to practice their profession. The young man of good ability and character, scientifically trained for the law, need have no fears. It is the large number of men of poor ability, superficially training and unstable character who face a hand to mouth existence. Unfortunately, moreover, these men make trouble, not only for themselves and clients but they lower the standard of living and in some cases, of professional conduct for other and better lawyers.

"The remedy is to be found in higher standards of admission to the bar. In this respect our profession lays disgracefully behind that of medecine. I think I am correct in saying that in every state of the union but one no man can even take the examinations for a license to pratice medicine unless he is a graduate of a reputable medical school. In not a single state is there a corresponding requirement as to law. Moreover the medical profession has seen to it that 'reputable medical college' is defined in all states as one having a four years' course, with at least stated facilities and adequate faculties; and in several states to be deemed such a medical school, an institution must require of matriculants that they shall have had in addition to a high school course at least one year of college work. There is nothing approaching this in requirements for admission to the bar."

SUPERVISORS IN STATE CONVENTION

At Lansing, February 8.

The Suervisors in convention at Lansing endorsed the Kalamazoo system of working tramps and drunks on the highways. Pres. Campbell maintained that if you put a man on his honor he will not be half as bad as he would if you treat him as a criminal.

Gov. Osborn, in speaking said, "I hope the time will come that State and County taxes will be divided. I believe in home rate taxation matters I believe the state has a right to tax corporations differently than individuals."

BRIEF AND BREEZY

Champ Clark is something of a wag, his latest joke is thanking the Democratic caucas for "this honor which you have bestowed upon me," when every one knows that he and his friends had it all cut and dried for months.

We are unalterably opposed also to the fortification of the Philippines, for fear the ruthless enemy might never be able to get them away from us.

Compared with 800 Russians whom the United States will not admit and Russia refuses to receive back, the case of just one man alone without a country looks trifling.

Capt. Hobson is a church member is good and regular standing but we hardly think he would remember to turn the other cheek if some warlike Japanese should happen to bill him one.

It is perfectly clear that the bromo seltzer king will need to take some of his own medicine

"I am a great singer because I have remained a bachelor," declared Mr. Caruso in a Chicago interview. Fudge!

Mr. Bryan's old trick when questioned a long way ahead of national convention time about Democratic Presidential possibilities was to name tentatively two or three impossibilities of the nonentity type, thus practically committing himself to the support of nobody but himself.

There is prospect of the passage of a homepathic parcels post bill. Well, let us be thankful for small favors. For many years the monarchies of Europe have enjoyed an excellent parcels post bill, as have also some of the semi-barbaric nations of Asia. In fact, it seems that this blessing is possible in nearly all the despotisms of interests with representatives in Congress it cannot be had. With forty thousand rural mail carriers with their pockets barely full of letters and newspapers, many of them driving carts or four wheelers, an excellent equipment for carrying packages of eleven pounds each to the farmers and other rural residents, this blessing necessary to country people and necessary to the Postmaster General in order to enable him to extinguish the postoffice deficit, is not attainable. It is too good for American citizens.

THE DAY OF GOOD OLD ST. VALENTINE

St. Valentine was a Christian martyr of the reign of Emperor Claudius, suffering death about the year 270. His festival was observed on the 14th day of February before the time of Pope Gregory the Great. The custom of sending valentines had its origin in a heathen practics connected with the worship of Juno on or about this day. Its association with St. Valentine is wholly accidental.—American Press.

But who cares about the association so long as good St. Valentine is supposed to preside over the fates of the young folks on St. Valentine's day? And next Tuesday will be awaited with deep interest for the tender missives that mark the occasion, and which leave the recipients to ponder as to who were the senders.

DEFENDS THE SOUTHLAND

The following clipped from the Los Angeles Herald explains itself without further comment:

Editor Herald: Believing that a great many Michigan people living in Los Angeles county read the Herald I offer you for publication the following quotations from a letter written at Benson, Ariz., to the Herald, a paper published at Tecumseh, Mich., by one George Graves, at one time a resident of Los Angeles, living at 117 East Thirty-first street. Mr Graves and the writer were former residents of Tecumseh. I passed the greater part of my life of seventy-two years in Michigan, but have been a resident of Los Angeles county seventeen years and of Long Beach nine years, so I think I am a fair judge of the climate and other features of both Michigan and Southern California. You see, Mr. Graves takes exceptions to the sentiments expressed in my letters to the Tecumseh Herald. He first attacks the climate of Long Beach in these words:

"They have a fog every morning which lasts until 10 o'clock and is damp and cold. Then a hard wind comes up and blows alkalia dust until you can hardly see, and fills your clothes and your houses with the worst kind of dust."

Admitting the fogs and the Santa Anas that we do have, the statement is so far from the truth as to make it appear absurd to those who know the facts.

He says of the climate in Los Angeles and Long Beach that while it don't freeze here we "feel the cold, wear the same clothes they do in Michigan," a statement which is disproven by the thousands of women and girls going about our streets with heads bare and with very light outer wraps, if they wear any at all; boys playing marbles, ball and flying kites; girls playing basketball; building operations of all kinds going on the same as in midsummer; all of which goes to prove that any person writing as Mr. Graves writes either ignorantly or willfully misrepresents climatic conditions here.

If what Mr. Graves says of this country is true, which of course it is not, then the thousands of easterners who have settled in Southern California, and especially in Los Angeles county, lack good common sense.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Harry Scott whose untimely death was chronicled in our last issue was laid to rest in Brookside Thursday afternoon. Her death seems very sad for she was young to go, and she seemed so necessary to the home that is left desolate to a little sixteen months old babe and a sorrowing husband who depended on her love and care. The esteem in which she was held by her friends and neighbors was shown by the wealth of flowers that were sent as the last token of friendship. Beside her own family she leaves her parents Mr. and Mrs. B. Hines and Mrs Chas. Cornell to mourn her loss. The Rev. Kennedy spoke most feelingly at the funeral and the singing by Mesdames Hodges and Mead was very effective. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity and many followed her to the grave.

The average depth of snow on the 15th in the southern counties was 3.73 inches; in the central countie 5.45; in the northern counties 15; in the upper peninsula 24.76, and in the State 7.33 inches.

On the 31st the average depth in the southern counties was 0.89; in the central counties 0.00 of an inch; in the northern counties 8.73; in the upper peninsula 16.92, and the State 3.17 inches

"GRAUSTARK"

The mere announcement that "GRAUSTARK" is coming should arouse an exceptional interest in all lovers of the theatre, for as a rule they are also readers of fiction, and if they have not seen the play, have read the novel. Mr. George Barr McCutcheon, the author, is a product of that greater center of agriculture and literature, Indiana. James Whitcomb Riley, Booth Tarkington, George Ade and General Lew Wallace have all contributed to the state's fame, but no "best sellers" ever came out of Indiana and achieved greater fame and popularity than the works of McCutcheon and the greatest of these is "GRAUSTARK." It has had a larger output than the combined sale of all his other books and the demand for it still continues. Mr. Geo. D. Baker, who dramatized the novel, realized that the public would wish to see as much of McCutcheon as possible; and therefore, kept as closely to the story as the dramatic unities would allow. A guarantee of the correctness and beauty of the production is the name of James W. Castle, who staged Mme. Schuman-Heink's production of "Love's Lottery;" "Quo Vadis;" "When Jonny Comes Marching Home;" and other plays for Mr. F. C. Whitney, Mr. Edwin Knowles and Mr. Alfred E. Aarons. His staging of "GRAUSTARK," has been a labor of love, and he has given all that thought, care, patience and skill can contribute to a sumptuous production.

"GRAUSTARK'S" engagement at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 15, will be looked forward to by theatregoers and book readers of TECUMSEH

A WORD OF EXPLANATION

There is only one company playing "GRAUSTARK" and that is BAKER & CASTEL's City Company—the same company that played at the LYCEUM theater at TOLEDO, February 2-3-4, then went to CLEVELAND for a week, then ADRIAN the night before they play here.

Don't be misled by two or three knockers, which this town (like all others) has to contend with, who tell you this is the No. 2 company and all that sort of rot.

There is no No 2 company, and the company which presents "GRAUSTARK" at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, is the same one that is playing all of the surrounding cities

The tremendous popularity of this attraction was unprecedented and the demand for seats so great, the seating capacity of the theatres wherever the play was produced was taxed to its utmost to try and accomodate all comers.

Due to these conditions, the sale of seats will open one day earlier than usual to allow theatregoers to secure their seats in ample time.

Herbert V. Henderson of Tecumseh is the proud possessor of seven certificates like this above, which he won for proficiency in Bible Study in the courses taught by the local County Association group during the past few years. While still a boy, he has taught a group at the County Camp and has acted as a supply teacher Written examinations were necessary for each course studied.

HOBOES

The hobo chalk sign is quite in evidence in Adrian and these cold winter days they are swarming in quite lively for the first seven days in February they had lodged over 50 in their police station. There are so many on the streets that the women and children have been warned to keep off the street unless attended by an escort.

Tecumseh has had her share already this winter as the records show Some nights there being 7 or 8 lodged in the jail. Many arrests have been made upon complaint of the Lake Shore R. R. in Adrian and the officers are kept busy both in Adrian and Tecumseh looking after them, and the end is not yet.

BASEBALL

The Adrian baseball club roster is nearly completed. About the only position that needs to be filled just now is the short-stop place. All the bases are filled and several promising candidates are available.

Owner A. S. Burkart of the Saginaw club is being investigated, the National committee claiming that he suspends to many players and depriving them from developing into good players by thus barring them from organized baseball. Several clubs are mentioned as keeping from ten to fifteen players absolutely in their power with no chance for advancement.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh Without Stomach Dosing, or Money Back

Yes, dear reader, catarrh can be cured; but not by pouring vile, nauseating drugs into the stomach.

You've got to kill the catarrh germs, that's all there is to it, before you can cure catarrh.

And catarrh germs thrive, flourish and multiply in the nose and throat.

Can you kill these tough and persistent little health destroyers by swallowing pills or nostrum? Any physi- will tell you that it cannot be done.

HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) is a germ killing vaporized air which when breathed either through the mouth or nose, will kill catarrh germs and soothe and heal the inflamed and mutilated membrane promptly. It gives relief in two minutes.

HYOMEI is such a powerful germ destroyer that it penetrates every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat.

A complete outfit, which includes inhaler, a bottle of HYOMEI and simple instructions for use, costs $1

Should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI the price is only 50c. Leading druggists everywhere and C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich., sells HYOMEI.

To feel strong, have good appetite and digestion, sleep soundly and enjoy life, use Burdock Blood Bitters, the great system tonic and builder.

Itch! Itch! Itch!—Scratch! Scratch! Scratch! The more you scratch the worse the itch. Try Doan's Ointment It cures piles, eczema, any skin itching. All druggists sell it.

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer—who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—yet with the help of the Review of Reviews, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of little-known phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

NEWLOW SPREADERS.

About two years ago we noticed in an I. H. C. Guide a cut and discription of a lower spreader the company building. We made inquiries of different travelers regarding the same. Those who had seen it could not say enought in its favor.

We tried to secure the agency but were turned down repeatedly, as the capacity of the factory whete they were being built was strained to the limit, owing to the great demand in the States where they had been introduced.

Last fall we were allowed one car of these spreaders. As soon as they were tried out under the most severe tests we, as well as every farmer who saw one work, realized that this spreader would revolutionize the spreader trade.

We sold the first car readily and have had no end of trouble in securing more, and have just recently made a contract for what we will want for the year.

These spreaders are 18 in. lower than all others. Have a steel frame—one wheel in front instead of two. For you to fully appreciate what they are, call and see them, or talk with a farmer who has used one and hear what he says about how much easier they run than any other kind.

Hello Causes Many to Swear; Bar It

Profanity Lurks in Pronunciation of Word Hello, Declares Jersey Minister

MIGHT AS WELL OMIT "O"

Church Asks Telephone Company to Abandon Use--Would Substitute "Lo."

The members of a Trenton, New Jersey, church have begun a crusade against the use of the word "hello," as they declare it verges on profanity and they have requested the telephone companies to instruct their centrals not to use it.

Rev. Harry M. Hitchcock, pastor of the church, says that thousands swear daily and do not know it by the use of the word, and he believes a ban should be put on it all over the United States. The members of his congregation are enthusiastically following him in the movement and believe that "hello" will be abandoned in a few years.

"It is an improper word," declared the preacher, and should be tabooed, I think it should be classed as the call of Hades, because the manner in which many pronounce it is so broad that the last letter might as well have been eliminated. It frequently passes the mouths of children who soon learn that by putting the last letter first, there is an altogether different meaning given, and I have often heard yougsters make this reversal.

"Why should we have a word in everyday use that thus spells the name of such a horid place? Another would be just as good and less offensive to the ear. I believe that simple 'lo' would be more convenient and answer the same purpose. It would be more American, too.

"I believe the word 'dam' as applied to water should also be changed, as it reminds one too vividly of 'damn.'"

AMUSEMENTS!

TECUMSEH TO HAVE ANOTHER GOOD ONE.

"GRAUSTARK," the romance by George Barr McCutcheon will be the attraction at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15.

Messrs. Baker & Castle, the producers, guarantee a perfect performance in every particular. They send on tour a carload of scenery and effects. Mr. Baker, the dramatist, in his desire to get the correct atmosphere, spent a summer kodaking through Europe and every scene is a replica of old world royal environment. The costumes were designed from a celebrated court costumer. Mr. Castle, who selected the cast and produced the play, has given the same attention to ensemble and detail which contributed so largely to the success of "Quo Vadis," "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," and Mme Schuman-Heink's production of "Love's Lottery" of which he was the guiding hand. No effort has been spared to make this production the one sensation of the season, as it was last season.

This is the same company that played at the Lyceum, Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 2-3-4, then went to Cleveland, Ohio, for a week's engagement and comes here from Adrian.

The tremendous popularity of this theatrical offering was unprecedented and the demand for seats so great, the seating capacity of the theatres whereever the play was produced was taxed to its utmost to try and accommodate all comers.

Due to these conditions, the sale of seats will open one day earlier than usual to allow theatregoers to secure their seats in ample time.

K. of P. DANCE.

The K. of P. dance last evening was a very pleasant affair about 35 couple being present. The festivities were prolonged until a late hour. Refreshments were served by the Pythian Sisters.

"THEM HENDERSON KIDS"

I. O. O. F. Benefit, a Success

A full house greeted "Them Henderson Kids" on Tuesday evening and they behaved themselves quite properly. The play abounded in merry jests and escapades and kept the audience on the lookout for what was to come.

The specialty acts were well received; the singing was exceptionally fine and taken all together, the entertainment was a good one. The Odd Fellows are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 7.—Business is booming here again. Men are being taken on daily in the automobile factories, and Pontiac is again face to face with a house shortage which caused great inconvenience a year ago. Despite the fact that 1,000 new homes were erected since last season there is again a lack, and men who desire to bring their families here are unable to do so at the present time.

Sickly Children
Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

LORD DECIES.

English Nobleman Who Was Married to Helen Vivien Gould In New York, Tuesday.

GORGEOUS WEDDING.

Lord Decies and Helen Gould United In Matrimony Tuesday.

New York (Special).—The marriage of Helen Vivien Gould to Lord Decies was solemnized at 4 o'clock Tuesday, in St. Bartholomew's church.

The bride wore a white satin dress embroidered with silver roses. The train, five yards and a half long, was carried by two little pages in white sailor suits, nephews of Lord Decies.

The 3,000 invitations issued for the ceremony at the church were all presented, and the cathedral was packed to suffocation.

A squad of police were on hand to prevent anything undignified happening.

Grange Opposed to Reciprocity.

New York (Special).—The machinery of the National Grange, an organization claiming a membership of 1,000,000 farmers in thirty states, has been started to defeat the ratification by congress of the Canadian reciprocity treaty. The legislative committee of the Grange at a special meeting at the Hotel Manhattan adopted a resolution protesting against the enactment of the reciprocity bill, called upon the membership to exert pressure upon congressmen from their various districts to vote against the measure, and decided to go to Washington to map out a campaign there.

Battle Is Imminent.

Puerto Cortez (Special).—In the event of the failure of General Manuel Bonilla, leader of the revolutionists, and President Davilla to agree to peace negotiations as proposed by the United States, a decisive battle probably will be fought this week at Pimieto, twenty miles south of San Pedro Sula. Hostilities in the northern part of Honduras have ceased pending the definite reply of General Bonilla to the American proposal.

Free Dyspepsia Sample

Sufferers from indigestion are waking up to the fact that peppermint lozenges, charcoal and "dyspepsia cures" are only makeshifts in the cure of so troublesome a complaint as chronic indigestion. What is required is something that will not only relieve but which will tone and train the digestive apparatus to again do its work normally, and this these simple remedies cannot do.

There is something more to the cure of indigestion than sweetening the breath, and yet a remedy that only contains digestive ingredients will not cure permanently, as the basis of indigestion is poor bowel circulation, and that requires a scientific laxative. We know of no remedy that combines these requirements better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which has been sold for a quarter of a century.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a laxative tonic, a scientific blending of natural ingredients for the cure of constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sour stomach, sick headache and similar complaints. Its ingredients will so strengthen and tone the stomach and bowel muscles that they will again do their work naturally, and when that has been accomplished your trouble is over. Fannie Stuart, Steunton, Va., was a long-time sufferer, as was O. Tuck, Blackburn, Mo., and they both found their cure with this remedy. They became convinced that pills and tablets, salts, "dyspepsia cures," etc., were at best only temporary reliefs. They first accepted Dr. Caldwell's offer of a free sample bottle, which he willingly sends to anyone who forwards name and address. Later, having convinced themselves through the free sample, they bought Syrup Pepsin of their druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

INVESTIGATE EXPLOSION.

Efforts Will Be Made to Fix Responsibility For Loss of Life.

New York (Special).—Three separate investigations have been started to fix the responsibility for a dynamite explosion on a boat in New York harbor last week which resulted in the death of at least thirty persons and injury to hundreds.

One inquiry will be conducted by a jury under Coroner James M. Houghton of Jersey City, another by Inspector of Combustibles James M. Connolly of Jersey City and a third by Public Prosecutor Pierre P. Garven of Hudson county, N. J.

Definite estimates of the number of dead are still impossible. The total of dead and missing is thirty. The list of dead in the hands of the coroner is seven, and it is that official's belief that most of the twenty-three men who he classes as "missing" were blown to atoms.

The property loss, according to various official estimates, will be between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

SHEPARD SEEKS REST.

One of Principals In Albany Senatorial Deadlock Weary of Excitement.

New York (Special).—Edward M. Shepard has left the city for a few days' rest. He is in seclusion. It is said emphatically by those closely associated with him here that his going does not mean that he is sick or that he intends to get out of the fight for the senate.

P. C. Savage, his secretary, said that there seemed to be no reason why Mr. Shepard's whereabouts should be told. Too many telegrams would not be good for him, he said, and the senatorial race was being managed by his friends, anyhow.

Albany (Special).—The deadlock for senator, on the seventeenth ballot, stood as follows: Sheehan, 66; Shepard, 9; Kernan, 9; Glynn, 3; Littleton, 3; O'Brien, 2; Parker, 1; Taylor, 1; Sulzer, 1. Republican: Depew, 59. Total, 154. Necessary for choice, 78.

Wife Suffers For Husband's Sins.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 7.—"You knock on my drinking whisky, now I'll drink some real hot stuff," said Melvin Corbin, aged twenty-nine, to his young wife as he swallowed the contents of a carbolic acid bottle. A moment later he fell in convulsions and became unconscious. The wife ran from the home screaming and started for a physician's office, but slipped on the icy sidewalk and sustained a broken leg. She was picked up and carried back to the house, and both she and husband were taken to a hospital. Both will recover.

WHEN STERNS AWOKE

Otto Sterns was known to his associates as an unimpassioned very self-contained orchestra director. Sterns was a wonderful musician, everyone said although no one had known him to give any particular evidence of his powers. He conducted the orchestra at matinees and other times when the first director felt unable or unwilling to assume the task.

Weimert a close friend of Sterns, was wont to declare that at heart the latter was fiery and impassioned—that he would be the grandest director the world had ever seen if something would only happen to awaken him. No one else, however held this belief.

On a particular hot, sultry afternoon, the orchestra was giving one of the last concerts of the season. It was an unusually important concert, as representatives of a city which intended to engage the band for a series of performances were in attendance. Sterns was conducting the musicians, owing to the fact that the first conductor wass ill. He was unusually lifeles even for himself, and Weimert, in an intermission, snorted in disgust:

"Wake up!" Wake up!" he whispered, fiercely, to his friend. "Can't you see those fellows are getting disgusted with the playing? Wake up, man!"

Sterns shook his head wearily and turned back to his stand and covertly glanced at a letter. Weimert saw this action and it clinched his idea that some girl was the cause of Sterns' lethargy. Suddenly an idea flashed into Weimert's head. He hastily left his seat and walked off the stage. In a moment or so he returned, a confident smile on his face.

"Watch Sterns during this next piece," Weimert whispered to the man next to him in the orchestra.

The following number was a wonderfully fiery selection, but the orchestra, depressed by Sterns' dull direction, dragged along wearily. Then something remarkable happened. Weimert, who was closely watching Sterns, saw the latter's head go up with a new gesture. His body took on a more virile, energetic pose. New life seemed to flow into him. He became animated, alive, awake—and with power and confidence fairly drew from the wonderful musicians the passionate notes of the score. Sterns had become another man. All that he formely lacked, he now had, and Weimert as he played manfully, observed Sterns with the gloating eye of a victor.

The number came to a magnificent, crashing close, that started thunders of applause from the meager audience. The day was won, Weimert saw as he glanced at the other city representatives. There was no longer any doubt but that they would engage the orchestra. Then Weimert turned to the man beside him.

"See," he said as he started to place his instrument in its case. "See I was right. It was a girl—that one who has been hanging around her old home. I put two and two together. She wrote a letter to Sterns some time ago, turning him down. Since then she has regretted that action. The letter Sterns looked at this afternoon was her old one. I put two and two together and had her show herself at a door where Sterns could see her. He used to be a great director, but when the girl turned him down, he broke up. Then, when he saw her again, he made the music talk to her—to win her back. See, they are together—it is all right."

"It is told in Washington that a lady who is a member of a prominent church employing a deaconess to assist the pastor, had been ill and a friend visiting her asked if the pastor had been to see her. "No," she replied, "he was too busy to come so he sent his nurse."

Dorothy (aged three) to her older sister.—"I's as tall as you."

Majorie—"No, you're not. Stand up and see. There, you only come to my mouth."

Dorothy—"Well, I don't care. I'm as tall the other way; my feet go down as far as yours!"

A young officer at the front wrote home to his father: "Dear Father—Kindly send me 50 shillings at once. Lost another leg in a stiff engagement and am in hospital without means."

The answer: "My Dear Son—As this is the fourth leg you have lost (according to your letters,) you ought to be accustomed to it by this time. Try and wobble along on any others you may have left."

"Why, that's a regular little printing press, isn't it?" remarked the visitor.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Popley. "Willie's uncle gave it to him on his birthday."

"What a complete little thing! It's self-inking, isn't it?"

"I don't know, but Willie is."

"Jack, dear, mamma has invited us to spend your vacation with her, and you know we haven't a trunk."

"We might ask our landlord to let us take this flat with us."—Life.

"Who was it that said, "Be sure you're right and then go ahead'?"

"I don't know," replied Mr Chug, "but I'll bet it wasn't a member of the chauffeur's union in our town."—Washington Star.

Totem—Franklin once said, "One that takes a wife takes care."

Haden—Well, that's all right. In taking a wife a man should take care.

[illegible] Pudding.

Needed: One pound of suet chopped very fine, one pound of flour, one pound of bread crumbs, one pound of sugar, two pounds of raisins, stoned and chopped; two pounds of currants, picked, washed and dried; one pound of figs, chopped fine; one-half pound of mixed citron and orange peel, sliced fine; one ounce of mixed spice, three tablespoonfuls of molasses, four beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of salt, one pint of brandy. Mix all together with about a quart of milk, place in a pudding bag and boil in water for seven or eight hours. Boil steadily to prevent the pudding from absorbing the water.

SCOUTS IN AIR OVER JUAREZ

Charles K. Hamilton In Great Aeroplane Feat.

BRAVES BULLETS OF FEDERALS

Crosses the Rio Grande River at El Paso and Sees How Things Are In Juarez—Insurrectos Destroy Many Bridges

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 13.—In spite of the warning that he might be fired on by the federal troops, Charles K. Hamilton flew across the border into Mexico and made the first aeroplane reconnaisance ever attempted in time of war.

Rising from the aviation ground on the American side of the river, Hamilton in a biplane crossed directly over the Mexican custom house, circled over the defenses of Juarez and returned to the American side of the river. Garros in his monoplane left the ground shortly after Hamilton and also crossed the river, though his flight did not cover as much territory as did Hamilton's.

Hamilton was allowed to make the flight by the American officers in charge of the border parole on condition that he would divulge no information he might inquire in his flight. When he brought his machine to the ground he declared, "there seems to be quite an army in Juarez."

The insurrecto forces encamped at Mulata are awaiting another attack by the federal troops under Gen. Luque, following the defeat of the attacking army. The rebels have strenghtened their position and changed their base somewhat in preparation to offer stubborn resistance to the federals.

Insurrecto soldiers under Captain Nogales, of General Orozco's command, blew up two bridges on the Northwestern railroad track and making i. impossible for General Navarro with his 1,000 soldiers to reach Juarez. Navarro was sixty-seven miles south of Juarez.

Juarez was cut off from the balance of Mexico. During the night rebels blew up six bridges on the Northwestern and the Mexican Central and destroyed 100 miles of track.

He was staff physician for the Pere Marquette and Grand Trunk railroads for a number of years and had a large practice. For the past few years he had been leading a retired life.

FRIENDS PRAISE TAFT'S SPEECHES

President Cheered for Reciprocity Campaign.

CABINET MEMBERS TO SPEAK

Message Delivered by Congressman-Elect Martin W. Littleton, of New York, Is Pleasing to Nation's Chief Executive.

Pittsburg, Feb. 13.—President Taft, on his way back to Washington, reached Pittsburg, cheered by many telegrams of congratulations on the manner in which he conducted his brief campaign in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois for reciprocity with Canada. In spite of the information that Speaker Cannon is opposed to the agreement, the president is more optimistic than ever over the prospect for passage of reciprocity legislation at this session of congress.

At the same time the president does not intend to abate the order of his campaign. He realizes that now is the accepted time to put the agreement through. He believes that at present the opposition to reciprocity is not organized and coherent. He will make every effort therefore to get a vote in both branches of congress as soon as possible.

Secretary of State Knox is to speak on reciprocity at a dinner in Chicago on Feb. 15 and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is to advocate it at a dinner in Buffalo on Washington's birthday. Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel has been commandeered for the campaign and will speak at Akron, O., probably this week, while Attorney General Wickersham may wake up today to find himself drafted for the war.

The president expects the McCall bill which was reported favorably to the house of representatives, to come before the house shortly.

The president will continue his personal campaign. He feels that if he can reach the people with a lucid explanation of what the agreement means, and of what it does not mean, the country, and consequently congress, will be with him.

One of the pleasing messages that came to Mr. Taft on this trip was that delivered by Congress-Elect Martin W. Littleton, of New York, who spoke at the Lincoln Centennial association banquet at Springfield, Ill. Mr. Littleton spoke after Mr. Taft on "The Great Leaders," but before he swung out into his set speech he paid a tribute to the president that called forth much applause from the diners and the spectators. Here is what Mr. Littleton said:

"The president is entitled not only to the support of his party, but he is entitled to the support of the members of every party, as he stands by the constitution of the United States. My partisanship has never sunk so low, my obligation to my friends has never been so incorrigible, my control of my own political career has never been guided by such a critical motive that I could not give my support to a president who I believe is patriotic and endeavoring to discharge his duty. When the day of ordinary criticism has passed away, when partisan politics has ceased to dictate to you and to me what we shall do, when the papers have written their final screed upon the subject and when men have finally delivered themselves of their judgment I believe that our present president will go down in history as one of the greatest men of America because of the recent thing which he did and that was to institute reciprocity between Canada and the United States.

"I said this the other night when he was not present—I take occasion to say it now when he is present—because I know and feel the great duties and obligations under which he labors in discharging the burdens which he must discharge in this office which he has taken on behalf of the American people and so far as being a Democrat or being a Republican is concerned, I do not believe any man is entitled to hold a public office unless he holds that office for the good of his country."

ENTIRE FAMILY KILLED BY GAS

Accidental Loosening of Tube Causes Death of Seven.

ALL OVERCOME WHILE IN BED

Eldest Daughter of Hyman Berkowitz Was to Have Wed Soon—Trousseau Found Carefully Protected from Dust.

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—A family of seven persons, including the father, mother and five children, was killed by illuminating gas in the little home, in the rear of 228 Christian street. The dead are:

Hyman Berkowitz, 42 years old, a fruit huckster; Mrs. Rose Berkowitz, 40 years old; Minnie, 18; Michael, 12; Israel, 9; Rebecca, 7; Paul, 5.

The seven were killed by the accidental loosening of a rubber gas tube from a pipe running across the main living room, and the flooding of the house with the illuminating gas. Not one of the family was able to get out of bed, before being overcome, although the three youngest children showed evidence of having tried, in a feeble manner, to escape the overpowering gas.

A particularly sad feature of the deaths was that of the eldest child, the daughter Minnie. She was to have been married within a few days. The girl's trousseau was all finished and was found hanging on the second floor covered with cloth to protect it from dust.

On the first floor of the house is a sitting room and improvised kitchen. On the second is a room where clothes are kept. On the third floor is a huge bedroom occupied by the family. In the main living room downstairs is a gas stove in one corner. From it there is a pipe which extends across the center of the room. From this pipe a rubber gas tube had been attached which ran to the stove in the corner.

It is thought the tube was accidentally kicked and thereby loosened from the pipe, allowing the gas to escape.

MRS. ARNOLD AT HOME

Mother of Missing Heiress Does not Know Daughter's Fate.

New York, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Francis R. Arnold, mother of the missing Dorothy Arnold, arrived from Naples by the Cunarder Pannenia, declaring that she did not know whether or not her daughter was alive or dead, and that she was utterly opposed to George S. Griscom, Jr., as a son-in-law.

She was greeted at quarantine by her son, John W. Arnold, and her husband and her son, Hinckley, met her at the pier. The reunited family, in the conference held later, expressed themselves as much in the dark as ever about the disappearance of the young woman. The little that the mother said merely accentuated the mystery.

COFFIN FALLS ON HIM

Express Agent at Allegan Badly Hurt in Queer Accident.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 13.—Harry Lince, express agent at Allegan, was dangerously injured when a casket he was assisting in removing from a train fell on his head, badly crushing it.

Just as Lince started to lift on the casket he was seized with an attack of rheumatism and fell to his knees. The casket slipped from his hands, one corner striking him in the face. His cheekbone was crushed and protruded through the flesh in several places, and he is suffering from concussion of the brain.

ARCHBISHOP RYAN CALLED BY DEATH

Just Before Passing Away Murmurs Paul's Dying Words.

DOUBT AS TO HIS SUCCESSOR

Important Changes in the Government of the Catholic Church of America Are Made Inevitable by Death of Aged Prelate.

Philadelphia, Feb. 13. — Most Rev Patrick John Ryan, archbishop of Philadelphia and metropolitan of Pennsylvania, died at the archiepiscopal residence in this city.

The death of the archbishop came as a distinct shock, as the prelate was thought on the way to recovery after making a brave fight against death.

Just previous to his death he murmured the dying words of St. Paul:

"I wish to be dissolved and be with Christ."

The end came an hour later, while his household watched at his bedside. He would have been 80 years old had he lived until the 20th of this month.

For two weeks the archbishop's condition had been most precarious. He suffered several sinking spells, during which he lapsed into unconsciousness, but from which he would recover brighter than before and with his intellect unclouded.

Although he had been showing the enfeeblement incident to his advanced age, the general public was not aware of his real condition until Jan. 30, when news of it came as a shock to his thousands of friends in this city and in all parts of the country.

A few minutes after the prelate had passed away the deep-toned bell of the cathedral began tolling off 79 strokes, one for each year of the archbishop's life, and the people in the neighborhood readily understood what had occurred.

The funeral will be held on Thursday. The body will lie in state at the cathedral, and will be entombed back of the altar of the great church besides those of Bishop Egan, Bishop Conwell and Archbishop Wood, who were his predecessors in the diocese. This was his wish.

Important changes in the government of the Catholic church in America are made inevitable by the death of Archbishop Ryan. There will be a strong rivalry for the throne he has vacated and if the precedent established in his case, and at a later day followed in the promotion of Bishop Quigley from the See of Buffalo to the archdiocese of Chicago, is to be followed in this instance, the contention will be keen.

The priests of the archdiocese of Philadelphia may be expected to make a strong plea for the promotion of a Philadelphian, one of the bishops of that province, or, as is more likely, for Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the North America college at Rome. Mgr. Kennedy is a bishop of the church, having been elevated to that dignity by the present pope in 1907. He is now in Philadelphia, having gone to this country on a visit to his parents. He is a member of the archdiocese of Philadelphia and is popular with the clergy.

According to the laws of the church Auxiliary Bishop Prendergast becomes the administrator of the archdiocese pending the appointment of a successor. It is said that Bishop Prendergast, who is well advanced in years, has no desire to be promoted.

There probably will be a three cornered contention; the priests will select three names, the bishops of the province three, and in the end the archbishops of the country may be asked by the Holy Father for their opinion. It is believed that Mgr. Kennedy will be the first choice of the priests. If a bishop of the province of Philadelphia is favored the choice will be among Bishops Fitzmaurice, of Erie; Shanahan, of Harrisburg, and Garvey, of Altoona.

Among those prominently mentioned are the two former rectors of the Catholic university—Bishop Conaty, and the present coadjutor of San Francisco, Dr. O'Connell.

Bishop O'Gorman, of Sioux Falls, and Bishop Keane, of Cheyenne, Wyo., are likely to be considered.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

METHODIST TO MINNEAPOLIS

NEXT GENERAL CONFERENCE IN 1912 GOES TO MINNSOTA CITY

The next general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held in Minneapolis in May 1912 according to a decision reached by the general book committee yesterday.

Representatives of several cities made speeches lauding the claims of their respective cities. The Minneapolis booster however pointed out the fact that their city had been second choice for the meeting place of the last general conference which was held in Baltimore and was also the central city of the West.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY — SUNDAY FEB., 12.

Also the Semi-Centennial of the Civil War

In a little log cabin in Kentucky, just one hundred and two years ago, February 12 was born a babe whose history was to be remembered as long as that of the history of his country. Just 50 years ago when he was 52 years old Abraham Lincoln assumed the greatest burden that ever rested on mans shoulders, the safety of our nation which was imperiled by the secession of the South. The secession of the south was a fact—the civil war was about to begin.

The semi-centennial of the rebellion is with us! And now, in another century, let us measure the tremendous load that rested on Abraham Lincoln.

Fifty years ago Lincoln was standing in the waiting room of the dingy depot at Springfield, Ill. It was a stormy morning, which added to the gloom of the friends and neighbors who had gathered to bid the president elect goodby.

The party, consisting of the following people—Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln and their three sons, Robert T., William and Thomas, Lockwood Todd, Dr. W. S. Wallace, John G. Nicolay, John Hay, Hon. N. B. Judd, Hon. David Davis, Col. E. V. Sumner, Capt George W. Hazard, Capt. John Pope, Col. W. H. Lamon, Col. E. E. Ellsworth, J. M. Burgess, George C. Latham, W. S. Wood, and B. Forbes—and a few other personal friends and other dignitaries, entered the train

As the locomotive bell gave a warning of departure the president-elect appeared on the rear platform and said:

"No one not in my situation can appreciate the sadness of this parting Here my children have been born I now leave not knowing when or whether I may return. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you an effectionate farewell."

Then he went east where he directed the great civil was for the northern states, which eventually resulted in his untimely death.

Supervisors Returned From Meeting of State Association

Supervisors Sutton of Adrian and Halliday of Clinton who represented Adrian at the annual state session of county supervisors at Lansing this week, returned Friday after the three day meeting there. The delegates report one of the most successful sittings in the history of the state association.

Tuesday evening the supervisors were invited to appear in a body before the joint session of the house of representatives and the senate for the purpose of discussing corporation and mining taxation laws. On Wednesday they again sat with the legislators for the purpose of considering the mortgage tax laws and some proposed changes. Bills are being framed to be presented to the house embodying important legislation concerning the questions considered at the session.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS

Many Catharitics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is hermful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent is it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless and colorless. Combined with other well known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do no gripe, purge nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in two size packages, 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents. Remember you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store.

The Dutch duet by Arthur Green as Katrina, and Fred Haines the lover, in costume, was the hit of the entertainment and brought out the hearty applause of the house.

LETTER FROM CHAS. PANGBORN

INTERESTING ACCOUNT OF DOING'S AT JAUREZ

U. S. Troops Stationed Just Across Border.

Charles Pangborn who is travelling through the south and west this month happened to be at El Paso last Sunday while the fighting was going on across the border at Jaurez, and in writing to his sister, Mrs. Howland says:

I got here just thirty minutes after the fight, but saw the Insurrecto Cavalry as they came to water their horses at the river which is no wider than than the Raisin at Tecumseh, you could throw a stone across I saw Orozco, there were two white men with him in Uncle Sam's uniforms. The river is patroled by U. S. troops. I was amused to see one of the white men on the other side suddenly throw down his arms, starting his horse on a dead run for this side accompanied by two Mexicans. A man on the American side ran out into the river and handed the white man a bundle or bag of something then the three rode back and Uncle Sams boys were not quick enough to catch them and did not dare shoot as the three were unarmed.

They say they are going to take Jaurez tomorrow and I have the alarm clock set for daylight. If they do fight I hope they will hurry up and get at it before I leave as I would like to see how it is done. They warned all Americans to leave the place and many have taken refuge over here, but a reporter, a Pulman conductor, another travelling man and myself went across to see how things looked over there.

In ordering something to eat at a restaurant we were able to make the waitress understand our wants until the traveller asked for a glass of milk which the girl could not comprehend, so he drew a picture of a cow on the bill of fare and she seemed to know what was wanted and returned with some tickets for the Bull Fight.

Orozco lined his men up on the other side this afternoon and had their pictures taken. They do not at all compare with our soldiers in appearance. Jaurez is a dirty little city with pigs in the streets and several gambling houses running, but not much else.

AMUSEMENTS!

George Barr McCutcheon, when he wrote "Graustark," had the foresight to lay the scene of his romance amidst beautiful surroundings. Snow capped mountains, green valleys, old world architecture, castles and throne rooms follow each other in description after description forming a veritable kaleidoscope of scenic grandeur. This is fortunate for the producer and scenic artist, and Messrs. Baker & Castle, the managers, have endeavored faithfully to compete with Mr. McCutcheon's word picture—and with success.

Nothing could be prettier than the view from the terrace of the Hotel Regengetz, with the picturesque city of Edelweiss nestling on the shores of a beautiful lake in the valley below, a broad boulevard leads up to a fine old fortified castle on the heights beyond the city, and a majestic, snow capped peak pierces the distant sky. When the twilight deepens it is even more beautiful. The lights from the castle and the nearer lights of the city mingle with the long row of lamps that illuminate the royal boulevard, while the last rays of the sun guild tne lofty peak

The Princess' boudoir is an exact reproduction of a room in an old European palace. It is dark in tone, with mullioned windows overlooking the castle terrace, the bed above surmounted by the royal crest and a handsome portrait of Yetive's soldier father over the mantle.

The throne room is magnificent. Being a state apartment it is more brilliant in coloring, with heavy gold frieze and marble doors and throne arch. The panels are beautiful mural painting of battle scenes, representing Graustark's past victories. Castle & Harvey, the artists, justly pride themselves on this production as the most artistic their studios have ever turned out.

"GRAUSTARK'S" engagement at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE, on WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, will be eagerly looked forward to by theatregoers and book readers of TECUMSEH.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

PERJURY IS CHARGED

Affidavit of Detective Is Sent to Aid Lorimer.

States Attorney Wayman's and Governor Deneen's Names Mentioned in Affidavit.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Charges that Charles A. White perjured himself when he testified that the election of Senator Lorimer had been bought, and that State's Attorney Wayman and Governor Deneen not only knew, but encouraged the perjurer, are made by Detective John J. O'Keeffe, in an affidavit which has been sent to Washington to use in the defense of Senator Lorimer.

O'Keeffe was attached to the state's attorney's office when the legislative scandal broke, and was the detective who guarded Charles A. White during the Lee O'Neil Browne trial.

In his affidavit O'Keeffe asserts White made these admissions to him, declaring that no matter what he might testify to he would not be punished. White said State's Attorney Wayman, according to the affidavit, expected he would become governor of Illinois if Lee O'Neil Browne was convicted and had promised to make White warden of Joliet penitentiary.

SEEK MRS. EDDY'S WORKS

Sons of Late Christian Scientist Serve Notice on the Mother Church.

Boston, Feb. 13.—George W. Glover and Dr. E. J. Foster-Eddy, sons of the late Mary Baker Eddy, have served notice on the mother church of the First Church of Christian Scientists at Boston, that they will demand control of "Science and Health," and Mrs. Eddy's other works when the copyright expires.

Their relationship gives them such right and in view of this they could, if successful in the move, divert from the Christian Science church the huge income derived from the publications.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lightness of step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to know what to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Cathartics are too strong and salts and other purgatives are not only too strong, but the child refuses them because of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child, but there is nothing better to be found for children. They like its taste—you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this way you can try it before buying. Later, when convinced of its merits, you can get it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of other families are doing. The family of Mr. D. W. Spangler of Strattonville, Pa., as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn., started with it in that way and now write that it is their one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello Ill.

D. K. Halsey of Saginaw Dead.

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 13.—David K. Halsey, 66 years old, health sergeant of the Saginaw police department for the past twenty-one years, is dead, following an illness of three days. His death was a great surprise to the city generally. Probably no veteran was better known in the Grand Army ranks of Michigan than Mr. Halsey who saw service with the Sixth Michigan infantry.

LIBBY THE UNLOVED.

Libby Anderson hung the dishcloth on its accustomed nail, and stood there surveying it. It was plain from the way she looked, that she had determined to speak.

"Ma," she asked of the woman who was sitting before the little round stove, "what were those papers Dave put in his pocket as I came in?"

"Some things he was showin' me."

"Ma," she asked quiveringly, "you didn't sign anything, did you?"

"I didn't sign your name to anything." And the needles clashed again.

She knew her mother too well to press further.

"I just couldn't understand Dave coming here this time of year," she ventured; "and I thought he acted queer."

The old woman was folding her knitting.

"I'm going to bed, and you'd better come along, too," was her reply.

A week went by, and although Libby had twice forgotten to feed the chickens, and had several times let the kettle burn dry, she was beginning to feel more settled in her mind.

She did up the work one morning and went to town.

Her first call was at the solicitor's, and here she heard the worst. Ma had assigned their home to Dave. She did not make any fuss; she was too old-fashioned for hysterics.

It was not until the old place came in sight that she broke down.

"It's not fair," she cried out, "when I've stayed here and worked—it's not fair!" And, for the first time in many years, she was crying—passionately crying.

It was a feeling of outraged justice that made her speak, for she was just a woman—the daughter of pa.

"Ma," she said, "do you think pa would like to think of you assigning the place to Dave, when I've stayed here and kept it up the best I could for twenty years?"

"I think you don't realize what you've done," she said; and turned to the bedroom to take off her things.

It was not until the next month, the blustering month of March that all was made clear. It was early in the afternoon when Libby looked from the window and saw a man coming in at the big gate.

"That friend of Dave's from the city is coming, ma," she said.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Anderson, "and such a day as 'tis!"

The stranger warmed his hands, and disbursed a number of pleasantries.

"Well, Mrs. Anderson," he said finally, "your son wants me to make a little proposition to you."

Mrs. Anderson looked pleasantly expectant.

"Dave's always makin' propositions," she chuckled.

"He's been a good deal worried about you this winter—afraid you were not just comfortable out here—you two, all alone." "Dave's always thinkin' of his mother's comfort," she asserted; and looked triumphantly over to Libby.

"Well," he resumed, turning back to the older woman, "it worries Dave to think of your being out here lone now that you're getting along in years, so he's rented a nice little place in town and he feels sure it would be better all around if you'd just go in and take it."

"If that ain't for all the world like Dave!—always some new idea in his head. But you just tell him, Mr. Murray, not to be bothering. We don't want to move to town—do we, Libby?"

"Not if we can help it," she replied.

"Dave's been away from the place so long that he don't see just how 'tis," ma explained. "Libby and me wouldn't feel at home no place else."

"It's too bad you feel that way," he went persuasively, "for Dave was so sure you'd like the idea that he's gone ahead and made all arrangements, and I'm afraid there might be a little trouble about unmaking them."

He turned to Libby.

"How soon do you think you could move? By the first of May?"

"I suppose so," she answered, in a dull voice.

April came, and for the fiftieth time the old woman watched the white give way to the green on the hills that curved in and out around her old home.

As long as she could, Libby let her have her dream. Her heart was not hard toward ma now. Ma had not understood. And Libby was glad she could have those few spring days before she was torn from the old home.

"Ma," she began one morning in April, "I will have to be packing up this week."

"Packing up what?"

"Why, don't you remember, ma, we're going to town the first of May?"

"Oh, la, Libby, I've give that up long ago! I'm going to die on the old place."

"But you know, ma, the arrangements have all been made. I'm afraid we'll have to go."

She turned to her crossly.

"There's no use to argue wi' me, Libby Anderson, I ain't goin'!"

"But what about Dave?"

"You can jest write Dave and say his mother don't want to leave the place. Dave won't have nothin' further to say."

She looked off at the meadowland as if it were all settled. Libby would have to tell her.

"Ma," she said, "it's no use to write to Dave."

"Why not?" she demanded, in a half-frightened, half-aggressive voice.

"He's sold the place, ma."

"What's that you say? Something about Dave selling my place? Are you gone crazy, Libby?"

"You know you deeded it to him, ma. It was his after you did that. And he's sold it, and we'll have to move out."

"I didn't think he'd do that," she faltered.

"Never mind, ma," Libby said awkwardly. "Poor ma."

It was the nearest to a caress that had passed between them since Libby was a little girl.

Nothing more was said until after ma had gone to bed. Libby supposed she was asleep, when she called quaveringly to her

"Libby," she said, "you mustn't be thinkin' hard of Dave. He must have thought it for the best."

Libby was used to caring for ma, and she needed care now.

"Yes, ma," she answered; "I'm sure he must."

It was not until the morning of the fourth day that the silence between them was broken. Libby got up to take down the old clock, when she heard a strange noise behind her, and, turning, she saw that ma's head was down low in her hands, and she was rocking passionately back and forward and crying as though her old heart had broken.

Ma did not get up at all next day. Perhaps she was ill, or perhaps it was only that she did not want to go out in the sitting-room and see how unlike home it looked. But the next day she did not get up either, and Libby went to town for the doctor. He said the excitement had weakened her, and did not seem very certain she would ever get up again. That night Libby wrote a letter to Dave, asking him again to let his mother die on the old place. A week passed, and an answer had not come, and still ma had not left her bed. The packing was all done. It was the first of May, and she was just waiting—she did not know for what.

Her whole soul rose up against moving ma from the old place now, when her days were so surely numbered; and so she sent a telegram to Dave, telling him his mother was ill, and asking leave to stay a little longer. There came a reply from his partner, saying that Dave was away and would not be home for two weeks.

That night the old woman raised herself and sobbed out the truth.

"It's Dave that's killing me! It's to think Dave sold the place and turned me out to die!"

And then the way opened before Libby, and she saw her path.

The disinherited child wrote a letter that night, and to it she signed her brother's name. Out in the world they might have applied to it an ugly word, but Libby was only caring for ma. She was a long time about it, for it was hard to put things in Dave's round, bold hand, and it was hard to say them in his silky way.

"It ain't that I'm goin' to die," she said, when Libby came in and found her crying; "but I was thinkin' of Dave. I keep thinkin' and thinkin' of him when he was a little boy, and how he used to run about the place, and how pretty he used to look; and then, just as I begin to take a little comfort in rememberin' some of the smart things he said, I have to think of what he has done, and it does seem like he might have waited till——" But the words were too bitter to be spoken, and, with a hard scraping sound in her throat, she turned her face to the wall.

Libby put her hand to something in her pocket and thought of last night's work with thankfulness.

About eleven o'clock she entered the room with the sheets of a letter in her hand.

"Ma, she said tremulously, "here's a letter just come from Dave."

"I knew it'd come—I knew it!" And the voice filled the room with its triumphant ring. Then there crept into her face an anxious look. "What did he say?"

"He's sorry about selling the place, ma. He really thought you'd like it better in town. But he's fixed it up for us to stay. He says you'll never have to leave the place."

"I knowed it—I knowed it well enough! You don't know Dave like I do. But read me the letter."

She did read it, and the old woman listened with tears—glad tears now—falling over her withered cheeks.

"You can just unpack our things," she cried, when it was finished, "and get this place straightened out. The idea of your packin' up, and think we was goin' to move to town! Nice mess you've made of it! Jest as if Dave [illegible] leavin' the place. I always knowed you'd never 'preciated Dave."

Before morning broke ma was dead. Happy, because she had back her old faith in Dave—the blind, beautiful faith of the mother in the son. And Libby—the homeless and unloved—was happy, too, for she had finished well her work of caring for ma.—London Answers.

A Good Majority.

A well known English surgeon was imparting some clinical instructions to half a dozen students, according to the Medical Age. Pausing at the bedside of a doubtful case, he said:

"Now, gentlemen, do you think this is or is not a case of operation?"

One by one each student made his diagnosis, and all of them answered in the negative.

"Well, gentlemen, you are all wrong," said the wielder of the scalpel, "and I shall operate tomorrow."

"No you won't," said the patient as he rose in his bed; "six to one is a good majority; gimme my clothes."

Bills—"What made that preacher say he wished the members of his congregation were somnambulists?"

Wills—"So they would stop snoring and walk out when they went to sleep."

Creamed Spinach.

Needed: Two pailfuls of spinach, two tablespoonfuls of salt, two ounces of butter, eight tablespoonfuls of cream, one small teaspoonful of pounded sugar, a very little grated nutmeg. Boil and drain the spinach, chop it finely, and put it into a stewpan with the butter; stir over a gentle fire, and when the butter has dried away, add the remaining ingredients, and simmer for about five minutes. Boil the cream before adding, or it may curdle. Serve on a hot dish, and garnish either with sippets of toasted bread or leaves of puff paste.

Raisin Cake.

Beat together one cupful of butter, with two of sugar, and a cupful of molasses, three well beaten eggs, one cupful of buttermilk, one of stoned raisins, five of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda, two of cinnamon, two of cloves, one grated nutmeg; stir well together and bake same as fruit cake.

Claret Punch.

Needed: One quart of good claret, one pint of sherry, table sort, one-half dozen lemons, 10 oranges, one fresh pineapple or a quart can of the fruit, one-half pint of whisky and the same of champagne. Mix thoroughly. This may be served frozen, but the wines and spirits are best put in after the chilling.

Cranberry Apples.

Select large, perfect, sweet apples, cut out the cores, fill the cavities with thick cranberry jelly, set the apples in a pan of water in the oven, and bake until done. Place each apple in a small sauce dish and serve with whipped cream.

Cocoanut Macaroons.

Six eggs beaten stiff, one pound sugar, one pound grated cocoanut; beat well together; flour your hands and make into little cakes, grate sugar over them, bake quick.

Mothers Should Help Daughters to Success

HOW many mothers think of the mistake they make, not to speak of the injustice, of expecting a girl who has been working all day in an office or store to come home and do her "share" of the housework? This seems to be a mooted question, and is of burning interest to the little wage earner who comes home in the evening fatigued in mind and body and goes to her room, only to find that the bed is still unmade and the room not put in order, but left just as it was when she went out in the morning.

Is it not the most natural thing in the world that she should feel discouraged and irritable when her mother reminds her, in no cheerful tone, that she also has been busy all day with the smaller children and housework in general, and that if the girl expects her room to be in order she must put it so herself?

Every mother, I hope, wants to help her daughter to success. Why, then, does she not begin at the beginning and take care of her physical well-being? Women who have never worked in offices do not know the strain their daughters work under.

In the home, no matter how hard the work, there is always a minute the housewife can take to sit down and glance over the newspaper; always a time in the afternoon when she can lie down and get 40 winks, and then, greatest of all, she does not work under a supervision more or less strict. Her time is her own, and if the housework occupies but a few hours she knows that for the rest of the day she may do as her own sweet will prompts — read, embroider or visit her neighbors.

In the office it is vastly different. If the little stenographer finishes her letters, the bookkeeper closes up the accounts or any of the clerks finish their especial work there is always something else to do.

The "boss'" eagle eye is on all alike, and woe to the clerk who turns over the pages of a magazine, or the stenographer who stealthily opens her novel to find out if Margaretta really commits suicide, or if Reggie rescues her in time. A minute not spent in work is a minute idled in the eyes of the man higher up, and the girl knows this, and all day long she feels she must show that she is busy.

When she leaves the office in the evening she feels it is only right that she should come home to rest. Rest she must have, and if not at home where then? If she is expected to do a share of the housework in the only time she has to herself—the evening—how can she go to work again fresh and bright, mind and body rested and take up her task and succeed at it?

RECIPROCITY BILL PASSES IN HOUSE

Measure Is Now Up to Senate —Favorable Action Expected.

MICHIGAN DELEGATION DIVIDED

Denby and Young Voted For and McLaughlin, Fordney and Dodds Against Measure—Seven Michigan Congressmen Did Not Go on Record. Canada Will Pass Measure.

HOW THE MICHIGAN DELEGATION VOTED

For the bill: Denby and Young.

Against: Fordney, Dodds, McLaughlin.

Not voting: Townsend, Gardner, Hamilton, Diekema, S. W. Smith, McMorran, Loud.

Washington (Special). — President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada was ratified in the house of representatives through the support of an almost solid Democratic vote. The McCall bill, carrying the agreement into effect, was passed 221 to 92. A majority of the Republicans present voted against the measure, the division being 78 ayes and 87 nays.

The Democratic vote was 143 ayes and only 5 nays. A majority of the Republican insurgents present voted for the bill.

The McCall bill now goes to the senate.

The fate of the bill in the upper branch of the congress is problematical at this time. President Taft believes that if a filibuster can be avoided and a vote taken, the bill will pass.

By a vote of 12 to 7, the ways and means committee Saturday reported favorably to the house the Canadian reciprocity treaty.

There was only one amendment adopted by the committee, that relating to pulp wood and print paper.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT STRONG FOR MEASURE

Ottawa, Ont. (Special).—Crowded galleries heard the debate on the proposed reciprocity agreement with the United States in parliament here.

Finance Minister Fielding, finally announced that parliament would put through the measure without delay, with a provision that it should come into force as soon as the United States has taken favorable action.

TAFT SAYS RECIPROCITY TREATY IS LOGICAL

Springfield, Ill. (Special).—President Taft defended the proposed reciprocity agreement with Canada in an address before the Illinois legislature here Saturday as the "logical conclusion" of the protection plank in the last Republican national platform.

FARMERS ARE AGAINST CANADIAN TREATY

Protests against the adoption of the reciprocity agreement are still coming to the capitol from the granges of the country.

The sentiment in the states on the Canadian border shows curious diversity. Maine is against reciprocity as so is part of New York, while Michigan, except for the action of its granges, is strongly disposed to favor the trade compact.

HARMON OPENS CAMPAIGN.

Ohio Governor's Race For Presidency Is On In Earnest.

Cincinnati, O. (Special).—Governor Judson Harmon began his race for the presidency Saturday. At an early hour Hugh Nichols, chairman of the state Democratic committee, opened the doors of the Harmon headquarters, 816 Provident Bank building, took charge and officially declared the race on.

Nichols is chairman of the Harmon campaign committee.

Middies Fail to Pass.

Washington (Special).—For failure in studies at their recent semi-annual examinations, thirty-seven midshipmen have been dropped from the rolls of the naval academy at Annapolis. Of the boys who failed, three were in the first class, eight in the second, five in third, and twenty-one in the fourth.

American Missing in Rome.

Rome (Special).—Frederic Crowninshield, director of the American academy, has asked the police to assist in a search for Henry Lawrence Wolfe of New York, a student of painting at the academy, who dropped out of sight several days ago. He is thirty-five years of age.

$25,000 on Aeroplanes.

Washington (Special).—It is going to take a considerable amount of money to collect the revenues from customs receipts in the state of Michigan during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912. The secretary of the treasury has submitted his estimates to congress for this purpose, giving the number of employes required to perform the service, in addition to the amount necessary to carry on the work.

In the collector of customs office in Detroit seventy-six employes will be needed, who will receive a sum total of $31,680.50. In the appraiser's office, seven employes will be necessary, receiving $9,760. At the port of Grand Haven, nineteen employes will receive a salary of $10,682.50, while at Grand Rapids it will require but three employes to do the work, who will be paid $7,600 in all. ROOSEVELT AT GRAND RAPIDS

Ex-President Chief Guest at Lincoln Club Banquet.

INDORSES RECIPROCITY BILL

Nearly 2,200 Guests Pack the Coliseum to Hear the Colonel Speak Saturday Night—Declares Himself In Favor of Direct Election of Presidents and Senators.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 11.—Speaking at the Lincoln club banquet here Saturday night, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt declared himself in favor of the direct election by the people not only of United States senators, but also of the president of the United States. He said that the present method of choosing senators through the legislatures of the several states was a relic of olden times, and that the electoral college was also a useless appendage of the government, and should be abolished.

He also indorsed the pending reciprocity treaty with Canada as a good thing in every way, saying that it "marked a signal advance in bringing about the closest and most friendly relations between the two countries."

Nearly 1,600 sat down to the spread that was served in the Coliseum, while an equal number, most of them ladies, were packed in the galleries.

Governor Osborn and Senators Smith and Townsend spoke.

The Romigs allege that Rathburn, who was a frequenter of their store, had carried on a systematic pilfering from their cash drawer for the last three years, taking amounts ranging from 40 cents to $3.25 at a time.

Rathburn, in his answer, contends that the suit is one of extortion, for the purpose of mulcting him of money. Rathburn is interested in many business enterprises, both here and in Dundee.

Junket Independent of State.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 13.—The members of the house committee on Jackson prison have decided that they will visit the institution even if they do not draw any expense money from the state, as Warden Simpson has agreed to board them and Charles Downey has promised to give them an auto trip from Lansing to Jackson.

Jackson prison is a costly institution. Since 1900 it has drawn from the state for special purposes, such as new building and improvements, about $700,000.

In 1907 it cost the state $48,000 to maintain the inmates. In 1908 it cost $58,000. In 1909 it cost $68,000, and in 1910 it cost $96,000.

Two Lives Snuffed Out.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 11.—Without a moment's warning, the lives of Fred Greiner and Frank Kelly, coal wagon drivers, were snuffed out in the yard of the Drydock Iron works here. The two men had dug a hole in a huge mass of coal, tunneling into the pile, when suddenly it gave way, burying them so that it required half an hour for workmen to recover the bodies.

Kelly moved to Port Huron from Cheboygan two weeks ago. He is survived by a widow and three children. Greiner leaves a widow and two stepchildren.

Flood Fear Grips Battle Creekites.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 15.—Superstitious business men are considerably alarmed over a sudden onrush of big brown river rats, the rodents taking possession of cellars in the business district. The merchants take this as a warning of another spring flood such as has on two occasions cost Battle Creek thousands of dollars.

MICHIGAN MASONS

HONORS PAID BY WASHINGTON LODGE

Third Degree Exemplified at Alexandria, Va

The Grand Lodge of Michigan Masons has been greatly honored by being invited to exemplify the third degree at Alexandria near Washington, D. C., at a meeting of the lodge over which George Waslangton, the first president, once presided. Grand lodge officers from all over the country will be present at the event but Michigan alone will send a complete delegation. Among those who will go are Grand Master G. Roscoe Swift and wife, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Taylor of Adrian, and J. Q Look of Tecumseh. They will leave Detroit Sunday, February 19, on a special train over the P. M. and the Pennsylvania lines and will remain in Washington or Alexandria for a week, returning home on the following Saturday.

The team which will exemplify the degree will be selected from the blue lodges of Detroit. One or two rehearsals for this work have already been held and several more will take place preparatory to performing the work. The Michigan grand lodge wishes to be perfect in the ceremony.

There is to be a Masonic event of more than usual significance at Alexandria, Va., on the Potomac February 22. The grand masters of all the grand lodges of the United States are to be in attendance—or have been invited—and the purpose of the gathering will be to set in motion a plan for the erection in Alexandria of a National Masonic Temple in commemoration of the fact that George Washington was the first master of one of the Alexandria lodges and one of the prominent figures of Virginia Free Masonry of his time.

One of the features of the meeting will be the conferring of the third degree by Michigan Masons. The entire grand lodge from this state is to be present and will be accompanied by many prominent members of the craft from this state not members of the grand lodge official line.

Alexandria-Washington lodge is the name of the lodge over which Washington presided. Its original name was simply Alexandria Lodge, and the name Washington was added subsequently by way of distinction. Alexandria was Washington's home town and Mount Vernon is only a few miles distant down the Potomac. In the lodgeroom are preserved as sacred relics used by Washington in the discharge of his duties as master and it is to build a secure home for these, as well well as to raise a Masonic memorial to the father of his country, that the Masons of the national are joining in the erection of a temple at Alexandria.

The most conspicuous Masonic relic retained by Alexandria-Washington Lodge is the apron worn by Washington as master and at the laying of the corner stone of the national capitol at Washington. Since his death the apron has been worn four times: by Gen. Lafayette when he visited the lodge in 1825; at the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument; at the laying of the corner stone of the Yorktown monument in 1881, and to confer the Master Masons degree on Lawrence Washington, on Feb. 22, 1910.

One object in the lodgeroom viewed by all visitors with interest is the the chair used by Washington when presiding over the lodge as its first master. This chair a Gainsborough of inviolable purity of design is of inlaid mahogany and upholstered in leather. It was used 117 consecutive years by the masters of the lokge. It was retired from active service and placed under the protection of a large glass case.

The most valuable object of all held by the lodge however is the celebrated William portrait of Washington. In 1793 the lodge, by resolution asked Washington then president and living in Philadelphia, to sit for his picture. He consented and Williams the best known artist in Philadelpfia, was employed to execute the work. It is a flesh colored pastel and shows Washington at a more advanced age than any other likeness extant. Many other Washington relics are owned by the lodge

NO TRAINS TO TECUMSEH

Morning Service Cut Off By D. T. & I. Ry

The following clipped from the Detroit Journal explains the situation better than we can.

For the next 60 days residents of Tecumseh and other towns between Delray and Tecumseh will have no direct morning railroad service to Detroit, and no direct way of getting back home from Detroit in the afternoon.

This condition comes from the temporary discontinuance of the Detroit Toledo & Ironton Delray-Tecumseh trains that arrived at Delray at 10 a. m and departed from Delray at 4:15 p. m. The D. T. & I. says that the loss on the trains from after the holidays until spring is to much for the road to stand. The passenger officers say that there are some fair Lake Shore connections, at Monroe that Tecumseh people can make of service

The only direct service between Tecumsen and Detroit for the remainder of the winter will be by trains that leave Detroit at 8 a. m. and arrive in Detroit at 7:05. These are regular through trains.

RESEARCH

The ladies of the Research had a valentine evening at the home of Mrs. Ira Rogers. The ladies arrived at appointed hour each one representing a valentine. Boys with their sweethearts. Old girls looked like sweet sixteen, each one entering into the joy that St. Valentine always brings.

The house was tastefully decorated with hearts and flowers. The program was carried out in heart effect. A post office was arranged where each lady found her valentine. A heart contest, dialouges and songs made the evening one of continual merriment.

The refreshment committee with Mrs. Geo Kay as chairman served a very pretty lunch carried out with hearts red and white. Each lady expressed themselves saying this was the pleasentest evening of the Research meetings. About 40 were in attendance

"Bo" Slear manager of the Jackson Club for the last three years feels that he has been practically cut out of a job for the coming season by the action of the local management who while intending to sign up a new manager have not given him a chance to sign up with some other club.

He claims that Adrian made some good offers for his release but could get no definite answer from the local club. He claims that knowing that were meditating a change they should have given him some sort of a chance to place himself. He blames the lack of organized management matters being in such shape that one did not know who to deal with.

Should he be released there is no doubt but what he will hold some good position with some of the Southern Michigan Clubs.

Blissfield now has a little scheme which in limelight makes it gleam, and ought to make the census grow and add new streets, as you should know. For rest is what we all most crave, and so rest room will be the rave. Now Blissfield seeks a place to rest and advocates it with a zest. So when on flowery beds of ease a Mecca for the tired she sees, weary pilgrims seek the haven sweet, Blissfield for leisure cannot be beat.—Hudson Post.

The following write up of an entertainment given by the Morenci Pythian sisters is found in the Hudson Post: The charm of a travel through Japan appeals, and curious customs this country reveals. The woes of sea-sickness abandoned may be, if Morenci Pythian Sisters you see. How it is done they will not unveil, but probably you ride on the goat's stubby tail. And when before Mikado 'tis time to bow, ascending goat's hind legs will show you just how. Oriental processious and Japanese maids are dressed in fine silks and most beautiful arrayed. You sit on rugs as no chairs can you find, to orientalism you gladly incline. All this was a treat they enjoyed the other night, when blinds were drawn, and the doors were locked tight. The goat is now eating his provender well, and tin cans and scrap iron are making him swell. And on this good diet he surely will thrive, and be ready to give next victim a ride.

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY

Twelve of the girl friends of Miss Bernice Reid were invited to spend the afternoon of St. Valentine's day with her at her pleasant home in Tecumseh. The jolly bunch left over the L. S. & M. S, at one o'clock. After pleasant greetings the guests were invited to the parlor where a spider had spun a large web to which was attached several ribbons. The girls unwound the ribbons and at the end of one a card with the following was found and read by Miss Lovel Stewart Mr. and Mrs. Alex Reid announce the marriage of their daughter Bernice to Mr. James G. Brock of Anderson, Ind., to take place June 20, 1911. After wishing the bride-to-be the best of good success the time was given over to games and music. At 4:30 a two course supper was served by Mrs. Reid and the guests returned home over the D. T. & I., voting it a delightful afternoon.—Adrian Times.

"GRAUSTARK."

A fine audience on Wednesday evening attested their appreciation of the play Graustark which was presented in a most delightful manner. Every character was well taken and carried the audience with them through the many thrilling passages. The Americans were fine types, and did honor to their country.

The costumes were most exquisite as became royalty and the beautiful scenery gave an added charm to the play.

The whole evening was one of deep interest and it was with regret that the audiences saw the curtain fall on the last scene.

Now I weigh 187 pounds and have been well and strong for years." McKINLEY BANQUET

About 42 men from Tecumseh attended the banquet held in Adrian Tuesday evening and helped to swell the crowd to 550. Most of them left on the 3:03 train, returning at midnight and each and every one reports a fine time and one of the finest meetings held in the history of the club.

A business meeting was first in order when the election of officers took place. Harry L. Larwill President, J. Leighton Bush Secretary, Grant A. VanDeuser, Treasurer, Vice presidents were elected for each ward and township. Among these, Guy Nemire was elected to represent Tecumseh.

The doors of the rink opened promptly at 6 o'clock and it was only a few moments until the tables were practically filled. Attractive decorations had been arranged under the direction of Committee Chairman Guitteau throughout the building and the tables were prettily placed and arranged by the ladies of the M. E. church who had the banquet in charge. The speakers' table was elevated at the west side of the hall opposite the entrance and was overhung with a canopy of the national colors set forth strongly by a row of six gas arcs. Back of the platform were the pictures of Lincoln and McKinley hung against the red, white and blue background. Heavily shaded gas lamps brought out well the red and white in which the tables were decorated with potted plants interspersed, forming an attractive setting for the party of speakers who filed into the hall shortly after the seating of the guests had been completed.

When the tables had been cleared away cigars were lighted and the speech making begun. Leland Bean opened the program with a short address, after which he introduced Atty D. B. Morgan, toast master of the evening, who presided with becoming ease. After several brilliant sallies at the expense of Mr. Diekema and a brief outline of his public life. He introduced Congressman-elect from northern Michigan. G. J. Diekema, just seven years ago. Mr. Diekema spoke at the first banquet of the club held in "Light Guard Armory The Campaign of 1912" was the subject of his address which he handled in a very able manner.

After paying a deep tribute to Lincoln and McKinley, the speaker traced the forward march of the party and the welding of growing principles into the present policy.

"Those who have watched its growth through the last 50 years," he said, "have seen the handwriting of progress on the wall and that same spirit must move us in our future course.

Warren J. Harding, the editor, orator, thinker and politician from Marion, O., delivered an address so far above the ordinary that at times the audience actually sat spellbound, the dropping of a pin could easily be heard and applause was even delayed by the magnitude of his statements.

His talk on the subject of "Our Country" was classic. The subject is threadbare from frequent usage but tactful handling of it by Mr. Harding presented nothing old and he grappled the subject in a free and easy way, the words of praise and of description flowing from his lips easily and forcefully.

Senator-elect Townsend was received with much enthusiasm, and spoke on "Reciprocity with Canada" in a very clear and decided manner.

W. W. Wedemeyer congressman elect from Ann Arbor was the last speaker and spoke on the 61st. Congress and in the course of his remarks said, "I am sure it is not my fault that I have not represented you in Congress before this," which was received with applause.

It is generally conceded that this was one of the best meetings in the history of the Club.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh Without Stomach Dosing, or Money Back

Yes, dear reader, catarrh can be cured; but not by pouring vile, nauseating drugs into the stomach.

You've got to kill the catarrh germs, that's all there is to it, before you can cure catarrh.

And catarrh germs thrive, flourish and multiply in the nose and throat.

Can you kill these tough and persistent little health destroyers by swallowing pills or nostrum? Any physician will tell you that it cannot be done.

HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) is a germ killing vaporized air which when breathed either through the mouth or nose, will kill catarrh germs and soothe and heal the inflamed and mutilated membrane promptly. It gives relief in two minutes.

HYOMEI is such a powerful germ destroyer that it penetrates every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat.

A complete outfit, which includes inhaler, a bottle of HYOMEI and simple instructions for use, costs $1. Should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI the price is only 50c. Leading druggists everywhere and C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich., sells HYOMEI.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lightness of step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to know what to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Cathartics are too strong and salts and other purgatives are not only too strong, but the child refuses them because of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child, but there is nothing better to be found for children. They like its taste—you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this way you can try it before buying. Later, when convinced of its merits, you can get it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of other families are doing. The family of Mr. D. W. Spangler of Strattonville, Pa., as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn., started with it in that way and now write that it is their one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello Ill.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve —I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Terse Chronicle of World's Happenings During Past Week.

Portland, Ore.—The gasoline schooner Oshkosh was wrecked on the south spit of the Columbia river here. The schooner turned turtle in the mouth of the Columbia river. The captain was saved, but seven of the crew lost their lives.

Salem, Ore.—In spite of the fact that it has been twice defeated at the polls, the legislature adopted a resolution submitting to the voters the question of granting equal rights to women. It was rejected last November by a majority of 24,000.

New York.—The annual report of the Grace Episcopal church, at Broadway and Tenth street, shows that it ranks among the richest parishes in the world. The corporation has property worth more than $6,000,000 and income producing endowment funds to the value of nearly $2,000,000. The income of the church last year amounted to $415,000.

New York.—On the body of a white-haired old man who dropped dead in an uptown street, the police found a well-worn leather pocketbook containing 135 pennies. The collecting of rare coins apparently had been the old man's fad, and the examination of a coin dealer's catalog showed that some of the pieces were quoted at a premium of more than $10 each. Death was due to heart failure.

FOREIGN.

Cape Haitien, Haiti—A courier who has returned from Trou reports that the town of Ouanaminth has been completely burned by the revolutionists. After setting fire to the town, the revolutionists withdrew to Fort Vallieres, with arms and supplies.

Managua, Nicaragua—In some way, at present unknown, an explosion occurred in the ammunition barracks. This was followed by a series of explosions, which killed three sentinels. It is estimated that 7,000 rifles and 10,000,000 cartridges were destroyed. All the artillery, many rifles and a large amount of ammunition were saved.

Paris—The Liberator made its appearance. Edward H. James, the editor, in an eight-column review of the trial of Edward Mylius, the Liberator's London Agent, for seditious libel, says he proposes hereafter to try the case in his own time and his own way. He publishes anonymous letters avering that a Catholic priest performed the alleged morganatic marriage of King George.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Washington—Senator Bailey of Texas, in a speech in the senate chamber, defended the title of Senator Lorimer of Illinois.

Washington—Rear Admiral Winfield S. Schley fractured two ribs by a fall on an icy sidewalk here a few days ago. He is resting well, and no complications are feared.

Washington—Unless relieved, 2,000,000 people in China will die of starvation. This is a calamity predicted by American Consul General Wilder, at Shanghai, in a cablegram received by the American National Red Cross society. The consul general says $500,000 is needed immediately.

Washington—To assist the Persian government in reorganizing its finances, Morgan Spuster of this city will be appointed treasurer general of the empire. Mr. Spuster, who reorganized the Philippines customs service and revised the Philippine tariff law, is one of five Americans who will be employed by Persia in its financial rehabilitation.

Washington.—Sheng Hsuan-Huai, a man of broad experience and known to favor the reforms which are engaging the attention of the Chinese government, has been appointed president of the board of communications of the empire, according to a cablegram to the state department from American Minister Calhoun at Pekin. He replaces Tang Shao-Yi, who has resigned because of ill health.

OBITUARY.

Ex-Governor H. A. Tuttle.

Pittsfield, N. H., (Special).—Hiram A. Tuttle, governor of New Hampshire from 1891 to 1893, is dead of a complication of diseases at his home here. Mr. Tuttle's benefactions were many, one of the principal being a school building, reputed to be the best appointed in the state, and which he gave to the town in memory of his only child, who died a few years ago.

Brigadier General Smith.

Philadelphia (Special).—Brigadier General J. R. Smith, U. S. A., retired, is dead in this city. He passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Dr. Richard A. Cleeman.

WILL GODFREY'S LAST LEAP.

It was a sultry afternoon in the middle of August. The hot air, which had a slight haze, hung like a transparent curtain of light and heat. The couch on which Will Godfrey had lain ever since his hunting accident in the spring had a view of a flower garden richly decked with scarlet and gold, and beyond it of the sun-scorched park where oaks, elms, and chestnuts spread great branches, clad in the tintless foliage of late summer. The deer were huddled together in the shade; there was little sign of stirring life, all Nature seemed asleep.

The doctor was sitting near Will. His eyes at the present moment were so full of sorrow that he dared not raise them. There had been a consultation that morning with a great London surgeon, and the result was supposed to be favorable—life might possibly be prolonged under certain conditions.

Will was a man of almost gigantic build. He looked like Goliath laid low. Goliath dying by inches instead of by one swift stroke from his own sword.

"How long will this go on, doctor?" he said, abruptly, looking at his friend with great wistful eyes.

The doctor did not speak for a moment. He raised his eyes, but not to his patient's face; they wandered round the room, the walls of which were full of pictures of hunting scenes.

"How long will this go on?" he repeated, insistently.

"It may be for months—even years. You are suffering from creeping paralysis, but that is often very slow."

"There is no hope for recovery, not even of partial recovery, doctor?"

"God knows I wish there were: that's one of the hardest parts of a doctor's life, the being unable to do more than patch up a magnificent frame like yours."

"There was a rabbit once, half-killed and quivering—we knocked it on the head and put it out of its pain; we didn't leave it in its misery; we didn't feed it up to prolong the anguish. And the very horse which fell with me, whose legs were broken, was shot, that very hour; it wasn't left to linger. Man is less cruel than God. Man understands—God does not."

"Hush," said the doctor gently. He was a man of great reverence of though and feeling.

Evelyn Godfrey came in at that moment, a beautiful woman with a singularly young, girlish face and an extraordinary expression of vitality. She was pale, with a soft, creamy paleness and had black eyebrows and intensely gray, black-fringed eyes.

She waited till the doctor had gone, and then knelt down by her husband and stroked his hand.

"I was thought an idle man, wasn't I, Lyn?" he said, softly, smiling at her—oh, what a sad smile it was!—"but I made a business of sport and active games; there was no season of the year when time hung heavy on my hands. There was hunting in the winter and early spring, fly fishing in May, grouse shooting in August, partridge and pheasant shooting afterward, and between whiles golf."

"Doesn't it hurt you to talk about it?" said Lyn, with a break in her voice.

"No—it's the only comfort I have. I never knew I had such a strong imagination. I shut my eyes and see the very scenes where I have been so happy—the golf links, the meet at the crossroads, the moors, the covers—but sometimes all the pictures run into one another like a kaleidoscope."

"Shal I read to you?" said Lyn, gently.

"No—talk to me. You're a good woman, Lyn, aren't you?"

"Do you know what I said to the doctor?"

She shook her head.

"I spoke of a rabbit that had been wounded to death, whose condition was hopeless. I said if a man saw that animal he would immediately put it out of its pain; he would be thought a brute if he didn't. The mere brutes are better off than men—they're not allowed to live when existence means torture. And yet the two cases can't be compared for suffering; the brute has a certain amount of physical pain, but that's all; it has no imagination to paint pictures of never-to-be-had-again delight, no highly strung nerves to increase its agony tenfold."

"But the mere brute isn't taken care of, nursed tenderly," said Lyn.

"That's only a refinement of cruelty when there's no hope, Little woman," he went on, gravely looking at her with very kind eyes, "you married a strong man fond of sport, full of the joy of living, to whom life meant health and strength and a roaring good time; this cripple lying on a stretcher is really a stranger to you."

"Ah, don't say that," she cried, imploringly, stretching out her hand.

"It must be true. I'm a stranger to myself. I can't imagine myself chained to this stretcher unable to move without pain. It's not Will Godfrey who is lying here—no, Will Godfrey is the man I think about in my dreams, leaping the ditches on a chill spring morning, or marching over the grouse moors with a gun—not this corpse of a man, dead to everything he loved."

"But am I nothing to you?" sobbed poor Lyn, who felt that her cup of anguish was indeed full

"I'm not, so to say, a good man," Will went on dreamily. Churchgoing bored me, and that's the truth. I went because you liked it, darling, and because it was the right thing for the squire at the Hall, example and all that; but I was confoundedly bored—I've nothing to cheer me now.

"If—if I might even go on dreaming about the sport; things are deucedly real in a dream, Lyn! I vow last night I saw the meet clear and distinct—the bare trees and the hedges standing out against a yellowish sky—and I was coming up with the rest, tearing, galloping in a mad sort of way—and it was real, Lyn, much more real than this—"

At that moment the two were interrupted by the entrance of Priscilla Stainforth, Will's aunt, his mother's sister. She was a terrible woman, with a genius for administering spiritual consolation to her relations and friends at supreme moments in their lives. With the best of motives, she made herself extremely objectionable, and in times of trouble and difficulty was avoided like the plague. She had called very often for the purpose of seeing Will, but had been refused admission. On the present occasion she entered the bedroom uninvited, and advanced to the couch.

There had been no time to make any preparation for her arrival. The table was strewn with papers of a sporting character, a yellow-backed novel lay on the pillow.

"Will, I could not restrain myself; I was obliged to come," she said, with almost piteous earnestness. "You are my own sister's child. Could I ever forgive myself if I neglected my duty toward you at such a time? You have led a selfish pleasure-seeking life, but it's not too late to seek for mercy." She paused, and looked at Evelyn. "Where is you Bible?" she said, sorrowfully. "I see sporting papers in profusion, but the one Book which will give your husband comfort. The river of death is very near, Will," she went on solemnly; "it flows at the bottom of the valley. Soon you will be at the margin. I hear the time is prolonged in which to prepare for the crossing. I beseech you, use it well."

"Go away, Aunt Priscilla," said Evelyn, fiercely. "Go away—leave him to me. Will, do you remember father?"

Will looked at his wife, and his face lighted up.

"He was a good man, a saint upon earth. There's no one could throw a stone at father. I am the youngest and quite different from all the rest, and people said I was fast because I liked hunting and sports of all kinds, and some one spoke to father and said that it was a scandal that an Evangelical clergyman's daughter should care for such things. And father"—Evelyn's voice broke—"he took me into his study—I was seventeen then—and he made me tell him just how I felt, and he said I had my grandfather's blood in my veins. (Grandfather had lived in the bush, and that was where father was born.) And father said it would be cruel to stifle all the desires and instincts which were mine by nature, and he saved up and bought me a horse, and, as you know, I used to go to the meets, and it was there I met you, Will."

She paused a moment out of breath, trying to choose the right words, for the many thoughts which crowded in.

"I want to try to remember what father said—the very words; they were something like this: He said he could understand because he was my father, and that was why God understood. He knows all about us through and through, and He wishes us to be our best selves, as we are. You are a sportsman and an outdoor man, and He cares for you like that, and He'll make you happy in your own way, not in some one else's way. And you don't want any teaching about some things."

After that Will lay quite still with his eyes half closed. In a few minutes he was fast asleep, breathing regularly like a child. It was evidently a happy slumber. He was dreaming, and the dream was vivid and intensely real. His lips were curved in an almost joyful smile.

After a short interval he began to speak.

"The mare is fresh today, Evelyn," he murmured in his sleep. "This is our first ride together since my accident. Oh, it's good to be well!"

"Yes," she answered, in a low, clear voice, which had the ring of laughter in it, "it's good to be riding together again, you and I, you on the Black Princess and I on Star."

But the radiant look vanished, a shadow crossed her husband's face like the wing of a dark cloud.

His Aunt Priscilla's words were evidently haunting him.

"The river," he murmured, in a distressed tone of voice. "I'm close to it now."

"Leap it!" she cried, suddenly. "You can do it, I'm certain. Why, I could do it, Will!"

Only for an instant did Will hesitate. Then his expression changed to a joyous ecstasy of resolve.

"By Jove! I'll have to try, Lyn," he whispered, still in his sleep.

He raised his head with eager expectancy, his left hand was outstretched, grasping invisible reins.

His pulse gave one tremendous bound. It was the last. His head fell quietly back—his left hand relaxed its hold. His lips still smiled! It was a smile of triumph.

Will Godfrey had leaped!—London Onlooker.

Water With Juniper Berry Flavor.

That sailors at sea find the waters of the Dismal Swamp the most potable of any to be had is not wholly explained by the fact that they have the quality of keeping sweet in barrels on shipboard longer than others. What keeps them sweet is a large infusion of juniper berries; and water with a moderate flavoring of juniper berries is better than any gin that can nowadays be bought in the open market.—Providence Journal.

Narrow minded man—The Indian.

Garments to Delight The Outdoor Girl

There are sweaters that are more stunning than ever, for the makers have determined to bring the sportswoman into an attractive class, and from models shown in some of the stores they have succeeded.

These sweater coats are obtainable in any color. They are trimmed with chamois, suede and patent leather, the first two washing and the last being adjusted under a linen tape with long stitches and removed when the woolen jacket is cleaned.

At last an enterprising maker has exploited blue denim walking skirts by which many athletic women swear, and which have been absent from the collection of rough-and-ready garments.

Although winter has hardly begun, they are showing practical khaki riding-skirts for early spring jaunts. These have a comfortable sweep at the bottom and immense patch pockets. For riding they are divided at the will of the rider by buttoning over to one side the front gore.

Tailored shirtwaists that are of linen or pongee are made to be worn with linen or stock collars. Some women who are emphasizing comfort in their outfits are having flannel shirts made with soft turned-down collars; pockets on each side are used, and the soft black tie is worn with the boyish style of blouse.

Stocks for shirtwaists are of pique, linen and leather. The riding whip or golf stick of gold is still the accepted stickpin.

A man who is admired for being "masterful" in the book is abused for being "bossy" when found outside its covers.

A woman is never really busy so long as she can pass a mirror without looking in, or put clean newspapers on the cupboard shelves without reading the love stories they contain.

If you can't afford to go to the seaside and hear the ocean's roar, take a dose of quinine and sit on the bank of the river.

Wage Earners and Families Can See Performances at Reduced Prices.

New York, Feb. 20.—Julius Hoppe, who has had charge of the distribution of tickets to workingmen and their families for performances at the New theater at prices ranging from 15 cents to half a dollar, announced that the movement to provide theater tickets at a low price has spread until now an organization known as the Wage Earners' Theater league has been formed with a main office on Broadway and sixty branch offices scattered about the city.

Mr. Hoppe, who is in charge of the main office, says that the Shuberts, Director Altschuler, and the Metropolitan Opera House officers have told him that they will join the New theater management in providing blocks of tickets for one concert, play or opera a week to be sold to members of the Wage Earners' Theater league at a small price.

STUDENTS HAVE MUMPS

Cornell University Authorities Looking for Accommodations for Sick.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb 20.—Because of the large number of cases of mumps among Cornell students the university authorities are looking for additional accommodations for the sick and are advertising for houses which can be rigged up as temporary contagious wards. Only last fall a new contagious ward was opened.

There are over thirty cases of mumps now in the infirmary and its accommodations are taxed to capacity. Physicians say the number of cases of mumps in this city this winter is extraordinary.

PAYS RAILROAD BONDS

Wipes Out Old Indebtedness of $10,000 at a Cost of $300,000.

Dixon, Ill., Feb. 20. — After thirty-nine years of litigation, citizens of Amboy are rejoicing over the payment of the last of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad bonds.

The tax was voted on April 5, 1872, and consisted of 200 bonds of $500 each, due in ten years at 10 per cent interest. The taxpayers believed Amboy would be a terminal of a division of the company, where shops and a roundhouse would be built, but this did not prove to be the case. When the first installment became due the taxpayers rebelled, but were beaten eventually in the courts. The total cost of the original $10,000 indebtedness was $300,000.

ALBANY MECCA OF SUFFRAGISTS

Battle Royal on in Capital of New York State.

PROMINENT WOMEN IN THE CITY

Joint Assembly and Senate Judiciary Committees Will Give the Suffragists a Hearing—Reception at the Ten Eyck.

Albany, Feb. 20. — Suffrage week through which members of woman suffrage clubs throughout the state hope they may demonstrate to the legislators the necessity of passing the bills granting women the right to vote, opened here with special services in some of the churches.

The joint assembly and senate judiciary committees will give a hearing on the matter Wednesday afternoon, when hundreds of women for and against the extension of suffrage will be present.

All through the week every conceivable scheme cauculated to bring the question before the public will be employed, from advertising in the newspapers and with electric signs to the exhibition of women's suffrage films in local moving picture shows.

To cap the climax of the week's activities Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, England's famous militant suffragist, will address a gathering at the Ten Eyck hotel on the night of Feb. 28. Her talk will be on "Prison Experience of a Young Suffragette."

The real work will start Monday, when a drawing room talk will be given by Mrs. Charles Park of Boston. Other women will make speeches before labor unions holding meetings that night. These labor union talks will be kept up during the entire week.

There will be a reception Tuesday night at the Ten Eyck, to which Governor and Mrs. Dix, the legislators and their wives, state officials and others have been invited, including not only suffragists, but those opposed to the movement. Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch will receive, assisted by the members of three suffrage clubs of Albany.

Wednesday, the day of hearing, will, of course, furnish the greatest interest. A special train bearing about 100 anti-suffragists, among them Mrs. Gilbert Jones, representing the National League for the Civic Education of Women, and Miss Alice Hill Chittenda will come up from New York and suffragists from all over the state are expected to crowd the big assembly chamber to the doors.

Among those who will present the suffrage side of the question to the committee are Mrs. Minnie Reynolds, who has voted in Colorado; Mrs. Vladimir Simkovitch of the Equal Franchise Society, Miss Pauline Goldmark, Woman's Political Union; Miss Mary Drier, Woman's Trade Union; Max Eastman, Men's League for Woman Suffrage, and Rev. Anna Shaw, of the New York State Woman's Suffrage Association. Mrs. Shaw will also be the speaker at the mass meeting to be held in the senate chamber in the evening.

Police Chief Orders Arrest of All Seen with Cigarettes in Kansas City.

NAVAL OFFICER DISAPPEARS

Capt. Matthews, Prison Warden, Not Seen in Two Weeks.

MAY HAVE BEEN MURDERED

Missing Man Is Thirty-Two Years Old, Had Clean Record and Was in Direct Line for Promotion to Rank of Major.

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—Capt. Arthur J. Matthews, of the United States marine corps, who has been stationed at Mare Island navy yard for two years as warden of the prison for naval convicts, has been missing for two weeks. After vain search by comrades and other officers of the navy yard Rear Admiral Osterhaus of Mare Island, has called on the police of San Francisco to help in a search for the missing officer whose description is given.

There are three theories of his disappearance. One is that he has been murdered by some naval convict who came under his severe discipline and who secured $300 in cash that Capt. Matthews had drawn on a warrant from the naval pay office on the day he dropped out of sight. A second is that he got drunk and was "shanghaied" on the Frisco waterfront after being robbed of his money. The third is that he overstayed his leave and, fearing censure and loss of credits, went south and joined the Mexican revolutionists.

Capt. Matthews was in direct line for promotion to major and as his record was good he was morally certain of higher rank.

The only thing that would have led him to drinking and any vagary that drink might bring, was the recent death of his father, Rear Admiral Matthews, of Concord, Mass., of whom he was passionately fond.

Admiral Osterhaus has reported on Capt. Matthews' disappearance to the navy department and he has appointed a new warden of the yard prison. What indicates that Capt. Matthews' disappearance was voluntary is the fact that he conversed with Maj. R. L. Roosevelt, of the marine corps, in this city two days after his leave had expired. Maj. Roosevelt met Capt. Matthews at the Palace hotel Feb. 6 and the captain's leave had expired Feb. 4. He did not say anything to Roosevelt about having overstayed his leave, but said he was then on his way to board a boat for Mare Island.

Capt. Matthews is 32 years old. Within a short time he would have been promoted to the rank of major and he would have been one of the youngest majors in the marine corps.

He was born in New York and was appointed to the corps from Rhode Island in 1899. He served eight years in the tropics and was transferred to Mare Island Nov. 17, 1909.

MUST VOTE ON RECIPROCITY BILL

Taft to Use "Utmost Efforts" to Bring About Passage.

EXTRA SESSION IF NECESSARY

After Visit to White House Representative McCall Gives Out Statement Defining President's Views on Present Situation.

Washington, Feb. 20. — Through Representative Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts, President Taft notifies congress and the country of his intention to call a special session of congress in the event of the failure by the senate to vote on the Canadian reciprocity agreement. The president's determination in this matter is clearly disclosed in a formal statement given out by the Massachusetts representative as he was leaving the White House after a conference with Mr. Taft. Opponents of the reciprocity plan in the senate have been hoping that the special session talk would prove groundless, but this statement knocks the last prop from under them on this score.

Representative McCall, obviously speaking by authority of the president, not only makes it clear that congress will be called back if the senate fails to vote on the agreement, but also serves notice that members who block action on reciprocity at this session will be held responsible for any business depression or disturbance that may result from attempted tariff revision by the Democrats in a special session.

The McCall statement goes further. Through it President Taft emphasizes his warning to the Republican party that unless they are prepared now to yield something in the interest of a reasonable policy of protection an opposition will spring up that will wipe from the statute books "the last trace of a protective tariff."

Mr. McCall's statement makes it apparent that Mr. Taft is not talking special session by way of a threat.

The agreement between the governments pledges each to use its "utmost efforts" to bring about the passage of the legislation. The president feels that his power to call an extraordinary session of congress is included in this "utmost efforts" pledge and that he is in honor bound to fulfill it.

Here is the statement that Representative McCall handed out as he was leaving the White House:

"I believe Republican senators are gradually coming to recognize that with the certain prospect of an extra session unless they bring the reciprocity bill to a vote, there will be very serious inconvenience and embarrassment, if not danger, to the business and industrial enterprises that are really entitled to protection. The president feels that he is under an international obligation to summon an extra session. He will do this reluctantly because it is bringing into power a Democratic house and a senate much more nearly Democratic than the present senate. But if the senate should fail to act, the president feels that under his agreement with the Canadian government to use his utmost endeavor to have the reciprocity agreement confirmed he will be compelled to call the session immediately.

"But what an extra session is likely to mean is a constant agitation and a continuous investigation into the industries that are made possible by protection and interference with their business that bodes no good for business at large. The consequence is that if any one should prevent action on the reciprocity bill he would be in the position of helping to bring about a condition most injurious to these industries which really need protection. What follows in an extra session will not be the president's fault. The president is a protectionist and expects to use the veto so far as he properly may, to maintain the party's protective principles. But it would be a misfortune to have this inevitable conflict come nine months ahead of the time when it is naturally due."

It is expected that the measure will be reported out of the senate finance committee on Thursday without recommendation.

B. FAELK

AN ENTHUSIAST

GIVES HIS VIEW OF CALIFORNIA AND ITS ADVANTAGES.

For a number of years, I have read the articles contributed by W. P. Stocking to the Herald with a great deal of interest. They are pemeated with the spirit of peace on earth, good will toward men. He sees beauty in all things and the soft balmy air and the beautiful flowers of California will awaken that spirit if a trace of it exists in a man.

The several replies to Mr. Stockings letters that have recently appeared in the Herald and in which the writers have presented a different view of California are also interesting. They are interesting to me, not because they are in accord with my views but because they show how easily a persons impressions may be swayed by their individual interests. We find articles printed in which one little disagreeable phase of the existing conditions in one little city or over a small area cause the writer to condemn the whole state of Cal. Those writers need to take a weeks vacation in a tent on the summit of Mount Wilson, Mount San Jacinte or Mount Hamilton or even some point in some lower mountain range would prove to them what a wonderful world of beauty, activity and varying conditions lies below them and how small their individual interests are in comparison with the wonders of the territory within their range of vision.

No single picture, however large or beautiful could epitomize the meaning of the word California. The seal of Michigan presents to you a vision of a beautiful peninsula for a few weeks in the summer. No motto, however lengthy, could convey a mental picture of a beginning of the beauty, the sublimity or the varied resources of the state of California The state of California has a coast line 1000 miles long and 300 miles wide. It possesses every condition of climate found in the United States with its 150 degree temperature at Yuma to its perpetual snow and ice on Mount Shasta and Mount Whitney No matter how exacting the person, he can find any climate he wants within the state He can live where the temperature does not vary 40 degrees in the twelve months and he can employ himself at any occupation or producing any crop that is raised within the United States

It is claimed that it costs as much to properly heat a home in California as in Michigan If this were true, would it not be an advantage to be able to step out of doors into a temperature in which flowers were blooming on every hand rather than to have to cover your ears and wade in snow banks, even if a small amount of very expensive coal was being consumed in your grate? But does it seem as though keeping warm would be an expensive task when city gas sells for 80c. per thousand feet, electricity 3 to 5c. per K. W. and petroleum on every hand at 75c. per barrel? Would you expect to find humanity suffering from the cold in-doors while calla lillies, geraniums and heliotrope bloomed in the garden and several colors of roses clambered over your bungalow? It would be an impossibility to visit the beaches any day in the year and not find many people bathing in the surf at some or all of them. That sport would certainly loose its popularity if the bathers' teeth were always chattering with the cold.

Competition in business and labor may be keener than in the East. The Mexican and the Hindoo are doing the lower-class labor; the Hebrew, the Jap and the Italian are helping to make the smaller business enterprises interesting; John Chinamen brings your vegetables to your door-and such lettuce' radishes, or any other vegetable, you can have fresh any day in the year. To the man who expects to find gold lying around on the ground for him to pick up, the best advice would be, don't go with that intention, it dosent lie around that way. Someone else has preceeded you in the quest for gold. Some of the best brains of the East have gone West and you will have to compete with them. But if you go and dont make good, don't blame the State. Of course it is true that a man is usually contented where he is successful and his home is where his heart is but if you are distanced in the race, dont blame that beautiful clime where nature has been most lavish when you look for an excuse for having left it.

To the pleasure-seeker, the opportunities of the vicinity of Los Angeles are unlimited-baths, theatres, trolly-trips without number. To the sportsman, the opportunities are no less inviting. He can take a car to within 2 miles of the haunts of deer, mountain-lions and wild-cats. He can kill keyotes within the limits of the city of Los Angeles. He can climb a different mountain each day in the week and by a different trail each day in the month and what air he has to breathe, it seems to pick him right up off the trail. He rests after a days tramp as he never rested anywhere else.

If you want unusual sights and experiences, this is the place to find them. Nature is exerting herself to her utmost for the benefit of the thousands to be entertained and man is ably aiding nature. Eighty acres of solid flower gardens with nearly every specimen on earth like Busches Sunken Gardens in Pasadena, Carnegie's observatory on Mt. Wilson where new worlds are being discovered, the of the 310 mile Owen Lake aqueduct which will develop 150000 horse-power of electricity and supply water enough for 5000000 people, are at least worth noticing. A visit to the old Missions and a study into their history would be more or less enlightening to anyone The story of the old Franciscan Monks who came into an Indian country empty-handed and in a few years won the Savage from a degraded barbarism to the uses of husbandry and the nobility of toil and established a system of 21 Missions and innumerable Chapels connected by the El Camino Real-Kings Highway-700 miles in length and surrounded by fertile ranches with numberless herds and flocks will show the most devout that good men have lived in other ages as well as ours and that a people of a little different belief than ours have surely accomplished great good.

The weary traveler, easily making the distance from one Mission to the next in a day, was received as a brother and after the tenderest care and a Fathers blessing was passed on to the next.

Santa Ana does have her alkali laden winds. Mt Wilson also has her snow-storms but you can engage in snow-battles on her summit and in 2 hours by the foot-trail reach the orange groves and pick roses in Sierra Madre An especially severe Santa Ana may reach Los Angeles once in 10 years but the absolute absence of thunder, lightning and cyclones will compensate for that a million times.

Mr. Stocking went to California an elderly man, looking for peace and happiness and you need read but little from his pen to know that he has found it He has no motive for over-praise of his adopted State He is not a real-state man, he has nothing to sell except his daily labor. His songs gush from his heart.

Beautiful Hawaii or distant Japan may be more heavenly than our own land of the setting sun but that seems hard to believe. I hope to know from observation, some day, but until I see with my own eyes, my daily hope shall be that ere my days begin to shorten and my sun begins to approach the western horizon I may be permitted to take up my abode in that beautiful land of sunshine and flowers from which only a few steps would seem to lead to that haven of rest where we all hope to spend our eternity.

Y. M. C. A CONFERENCE

LENAWEE COUNTY ASSOCIATION HELD CONFERENCE IN TECUMSEH

Saturday and Sunday, February 18-19, 1911.

Not the least pleasing of all the pleasant things connected with the Y. M. C. A. conference held in Tecumseh Saturday and Sunday, was the arrival of the boys from adjacent towns, and the hearty handshake with Mr. May testified to the esteem in which he was held—his cheerful "Hello, Tom," "How do you do, Jim" "Glad to see you, Rob," calling each one by his given name, was the key to the good fellowship that exists between them. The boys of the local order were also on hand to meet their guests and escorted them about town and to the various homes where they were to be entertained.

The Sixth Annual County Boys' Conference held here Saturday and Sunday was the largest attended of any yet held. There were more than 100 boys, leaders and speakers, mostly from Lenawee. The following towns were represented:

Clinton	5
Britton	3
Onsted	4
North Rome	5
Addison	16
Rollin	6
Clayton	1
Medina	1
Morenci	4
Blissfield	9
Charlotte	1
Petersburg	1
Adrian	1
Tecumseh	40

The following prominent leaders were in attendance:

Dr. Frank A. Poole, City Boys' Secretary at Jackson.

Caspar L. Rowe, State Secretary for County Work

J. A. VanDis, Secretary for Boys' Work

Prof. F. S Goodrich, State Sunday School Secretary

Wm. G. Mason, Special Evangelistic Secretary of the International Committee

David R. Porter, International Secretary for High School Boys.

One of the most noticeable things about the conference was the work of the boys themselves. There were boy officers, boys who read papers, boys who talked and a boy toastmaster. The following officers were chosen:

President—Dale Hodges, Tecumseh.
Vice President—Orel Young Clinton
Secretary—Ray Redfield, Onsted.

One of the most interesting papers was that on "The Corn Contest" by Donald Gorham of Britton who is but 10 years of age and who won first prize upon his essay and fifth on his corn at the contest. Harold McWilliams gave a strong paper on "What a County Y. M. C. A. Group is" Arthur Ackland one of the seven Juniors at the summer camp told of "Camp Life" and the effect of the camp upon his life. Harry Stoddard, who comes from a country group of 30 told what was done in his group. Orel Young of Clinton wrote upon "Boys being out of the Sunday School."

The afternoon talks by Rev. Weld and Superintendents Reed and McAlpine were helpful. The afternoon session was interrupted by the Conference Photograph taken by Coller at the Library. Prof. Goodrich of Albion talked on "Bible Study" and the State Scout Master conducted the discussion on "The Boy Scout Movement" which now enrolls about 300000 American boys.

Many Lenawee lads had their first banquet experience Saturday evening. Much credit is due to the young ladies older ladies and Messrs. Henderson, Weld and Rector, who helped make the banquet a success.

Sunday was started out by a Leaders' meeting in charge of C. L. Rowe. Mr. Porter also talked at this meeting On Sunday morning Tecumseh citizens were given the opportunity of hearing the Conference Speakers as well as in the evening. Messrs. Van Dis and Goodrich left on Saturday evening.

Perhaps the most important meetings were on Sunday afternoon when Dr. Poole talked to 50 men at the Presbyterian church on "The Man and the Boy." At the same time 23 younger boys heard Big Mason, and 50 older fellows listened to David R. Porter. The results of these meetings may never be known to the workers but in a single one of them more than a score signed Decision Cards.

A large congregation gathered at the Presbyterian church at the mass meeting. Chairman Hodges reported for the Credential Committee; Elmer Camburn of Morenci for the Resolution Committee. Dr. Poole spoke on "The State Boys' Conference"; C. L. Rowe on "What This Conference Should Mean to Lenawee" and "Big" Mason closed the service with one of his stirring addresses

A Delegates' Meeting was held just following this meeting in charge of County Secretary May. Delegates in attendance told how they had been helped. Rev. Weld closed the Conference with prayer.

Who Was There That You Knew?

IN the shadowy ranks of those who marched to defeat or death or victory fifty years ago in the mighty conflict that convulsed this great nation, is there father or grandfather or uncle of yours? Would you like to see a photograph of him in that long ago day of his youth—a photograph that he never knew was taken? Perhaps we can show you one; and in any case, we can tell you a story, stranger than any detective fiction, of 3,500 priceless photographs that were lost and are found again.

3,500 Long Buried Photographs of the Civil War

THEY were taken by the greatest photographer in the United States of that day; they were bought by the United States Government for $30,000; they were buried in the War Department for 50 years—they are buried there still. But a duplicate set was kept by the photographer—who died poor and broken down; that duplicate set was knocked from pillar to post for nearly 50 years, until it was discovered by a New England collector. J. Pierpont Morgan tried to secure the collection—Ex-President Garfield and General Benjamin F. Butler said it was worth $150,000—yet with the help of the Review of Reviews, the entire collection has been gathered into 10 great volumes and is placed within your reach at less than the value of one of the photographs. It is the one accurate, impartial history of the Civil War—for the camera cannot lie. It tells the story of the War you never heard before. Taken under protection of the Secret Service, these photographs bring to light thousands of littleknown phases of the war; they penetrate to strange places and record strange things.

FRATERNAL VISIT

FROM ADRIAN CHAPTER NO 10 R. A. M

Monday Night

In the years gone by Tecumseh Masons have enjoyed many fraternal visits from neighboring Lodges and Chapters, have entertained their guests with bountiful and elaborate banquets, in fact have established a wide reputation as royal entertainers. But never has there been "pulled off" anything in this line to equal or even approach the banquet and subsequent program of music and toasts that featured the fraternal visit of Adrian Chapter No. 10 to Tecumseh last evening.

A special from Adrian brought about 60 of the visiting companions from that city, arriving at 5 p. m., being met by a large delegation from Tecumseh Chapter. Visitors were also present from Clinton, Onsted, Marshal, Britton and other neighboring towns.

The hall was most beautifully decorated and lighted and the long tables with their snowy napery, fine china and shining silver, were made more effective by the arrangement of the napkins, menu cards and souvenier hatchets, and when the crowd was seated and the feast spread there could be no doubt of the success of the banquet. Never was a banquet served in such perfect order and so quickly as this. When the company was seated, the Ladies who were to serve marched into the room to the strains of stirring music and in a moment the vast company were quickly waited upon without a break in the order.

After the last course had been served, Companion F. B. Wood, who by the way, has few equals in "this neck o' the woods" as a toastmaster, under the nom de plume of "Troublemaker" called upon a number of the visiting fraters, whom he designated as the "Troubled" all of whom responded with short, witty and entertaining after-dinner speeches. Mr. Wood interspersed his introductory remarks with many humorous and applicable stories and the wonder is where the gentleman ever garnered such a fund of funny stories

Among the "Troubled" who responded to the Troublemaker's happy introduction were W. H. Jones, H. P. Geo. W. Armstrong. P. G. H. P., and Wm. Payne of Adrian; Geo. W. Leedel P. G. H. P, of Marshal; Joseph H. Smith and Prof. D. P. McAlpine of Tecumseh, the latter being one of the candidates in the work that was to follow.

The Chapter Quartet, composed of Messrs. Dickenson, Slater, Elmer and Percy Slayton sang a beautiful selection and were vigorously encored, and the orchestra gave a continual concert of instrumental and vocal selections during the banquet, which were highly appreciated.

After the program at Witherell hall had been completed the companions repaired to the Masonic Temple where the Royal Arch degree was conferred in a very efficient and impressive manner upon Candidates, D. P. McAlpine, H. J. Stahl and O. D. Freer, by the following officers of Adrian Chapter: W. A. Jones H. P; A. Peavey, K; Chas. Adler, S.; A. Kinear, C. H; J. B. Richards, P. S.; A. Breunig, R. A. C.; Wm. Strobeck, M. 3 V.; Joseph Merrett, M. 2 V.; Frank Bachrach, M. 1 V.

Too much praise can not be given the ladies of the Star and the wives and daughters of the Masons, who assisted so nicely at the banquet.

Taken all in all the occasion was one of the red-letter events in the annals of Tecumseh Masonry.

LUCIUS LILLEY

CELEBRATES HIS 88TH. BIRTHDAY TO-DAY FEBRUARY 21

Alert as a school boy, alive to every interest of his day and now reminiscent of almost everything that pertains to the history of Tecumseh, Lucius Lilley is celebrating his 88th. birthday today. He has proved what can be done by perseverance and resolution being a selfmade man, starting out in life when only 17 years old, he has worked his way up until he is now one of the wealthiest and most influential bankers in the state. He came here in 1855 and has been identified with the interests of Tecumseh ever since, especially has his heart been open to the call of the needy, always responding in a quiet and unobtrusive manner and many have recieved help that never knew the hand that bestowed the gift.

He is of a very social nature and a good and interesting conversationalist, and a most delightful hour can be spent with him, listening to his fund of stories and the history of his early battles fought and won.

He has today to help him celebrate, his son Raynor Lilley and wife of New York and his son and daughter Col. and Mrs. Cummins who complete his family circle.

Congratulations and best wishes for a happy day and that he may have many more of them is the wish of the Herald and his many friends.

FRATERNAL VISIT

To Manchester Friday Feb 17.

In answer to an invitation from Adoniram Council No 24 of Manchester about 50 members of Tecumseh Council responded leaving on the 1:30 train. A delegation of companions met them at the train and escorted them to the temple.

At 3 o'clock p. m. the Tecumseh officers exemplified the super excellent degree on a class of 18 candidates receiving many compliments for their fine work. Blanchard Council has the reputation of being among the finest in Southern Michigan in doing the work. A splendid banquet was served at the Manchester house to about 150. The best vocal and instrumental talent of Manchester furnished delightful music during the banquet.

Toasts and short speeches from a number of Grand Officers filled in the hours until the time came to leave for home. Each one feeling that it was good to be there.

WRECK READING TRAIN

Miscreants Place Obstruction on Railway Track.

Engineer Caught Under the Locomotive and Crushed to Death—No Passengers Hurt.

Tamaqua, Pa., Feb 20.—A desperate and successful attempt at train wrecking in which one man was killed, occurred near Lofty station on the Philadelphia and Reading road.

According to railroad officials an investigation showed that miscreants had placed an obstruction in a switch, causing the locomotive of a local passenger train to jump the track at an embankment. The engine ran along the ties for a short distance and then toppled over and plunged down the incline.

Samuel Giltner, the engineer, aged fifty years, was caught under the locomotive and crushed to death. His fireman was not injured, nor were any of the passengers, who were principally men on their way to work. When the engine leaped the rails it tore loose from the tender. The latter remained on the roadbed and only one car left the track.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lightness of step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to know what to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Cathartics are too strong and salts and other purgatives are not only too strong, but the child refuses them because of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child, but there is nothing better to be found for children. They like its taste—you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this way you can try it before buying. Later, when convinced of its merits, you can get it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of other families are doing. The family of Mr. D. W. Spangler of Strattonville, Pa., as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn., started with it in that way and now write that it is their one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello Ill.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

BAN ON TEA COLORING

New Regulation Approved All Over the Country.

After May 1 Artificially Colored Tea Cannot Be Brought Into the United States.

New York, Feb. 20.—Popular brands of low priced teas, including "gunpowder" and other time-honored favorites, will don a motley garb after May 1, according to wholesalers and importers in this city.

After that date, according to government direction, no more artificially colored teas can be imported and as a result many of the teas which have appeared in beautiful green shades for 100 years or more will come in hues of brown, yellow and green.

According to a statement from the Importers' association, "the trade all over the country is unanimous in approving the new regulation." Green tea will still be green, but the color will be more natural. The artificial coloring heretofore used by the Chinese to emphasize the greenness of the product and to impart a uniform color and gloss to the leaves, a harmless one, will be eliminated.

BERESFORD RETIRES.

Gallant Admiral-Politician Has Rounded Out Notable Career.

London.—(Special.—Admiral Lord Charles William de la Poer Beresford, perhaps the world's biggest naval figure, is 65 years of age, and by virtue of the age limit clause, is retired from the active list of the British navy. He has held no appointment since his surrender on March 24, 1909, of the command of the channel fleet.

There were no official formalities, but most of the daily papers take occasion to eulogize the admiral's notable career. The radical press criticizes his political activities.

When Admiral Lord Charles Beresford hauled down his flag as commander of the channel fleet he had rounded out 50 years of service in a career distinguished for professional ability and personal gallantry which made him one of the most popular men of England and a figure of world importance.

The Apocalypse.

There is no other book in the New Testament about which so much has been written and to so little purpose. Dr. South said of it, "It either finds a man mad or makes him so." It is said of Calvin that he showed his wisdom in not writing a commentary on this, as he did on other books.—Chadwick.

Disadvantage In Last Resort.

If you must write love letters, wait until after you are married and write them to your wife. Then you may feel perfectly safe—unless she decides to sue you for divorce on the grounds of insanity.—Puck.

Long Life To Death

The colonel's ruddy countenance beamed like a summer's moon as the rising tide of voices broke into peals of laughter across the table.

"No, no!" Latimer protested, breaking in upon what promised to be the colonel's hand-hour homily to the hot blood of youth. "No crown of years and honors for me, please."

"A short death and a merry one is good enough for Latimer," Burke interrupted.

"With a quick death and a sure one," some one else supplied.

"And a large cold bottle and another one," Burke continued, running the toast down to a finish.

Above this uproar of protest and applause a clear soprano lifted.

"For he's a jolly good fellow," and the colonel, having gotten only so far as the battle of Gettysburg in his remarks, joined with a will in the chorus and forgot to finish the rest of his one, time-honored speech.

Whether the drawn lips framed the words or the cry of her soul thrilled the question to his own, Latimer could not have said, but against his will his eyes turned to those of the woman beside him.

"For a send-off," he explained with overdone nonchalance. "I got my orders yesterday."

Other than an all but imperceptible straightening of her shoulders the girl gave no sign she had heard.

"Azalie is more radiant than ever to-night," a plump matron leaned across the colonel to say to a red-haired girl, noting the effect of the unwonted pallor and burning eyes.

"Why shouldn't she be?" the red-haired girl snapped in answer, "with a two-million-dollar count for a husband?"

"Is it announced?" the plump woman gasped. "I had heard nothing of it. She has decided then between the count and General Espendola?"

"The mere fact of the colonel's sending her in to dinner with a nobody-in-particular like Lieutenant Latimer points to the fact that she has decided upon one of them but is not going to announce it yet," the red-haired announced with an air of superior wisdom.

"Ah, yes," agreed her fat friend with something like a sigh; "I suppose even Azalie could not stand out long against two millions."

Here a sudden outburst of laughter at the other end of the table gave Latimer the further chance to add: "Of course, this is sudden. A soldier's movements are bound to be, you know."

The shadow of the waving, interlacing vines fell in delicate tracery like the meshes of a net upon the man and the woman at his side, and the heavy fragrance of the air drugged it with bitter-sweet memories that would not down.

"But you are ordered back to the United States—not to Mindanao?"

The voice of the questioner and the terms of the question brought Latimer up with a pride in the sporting blood of the Dons. He could not see the wicked little half-moons her nails were cutting into her palms.

Noting their apparent lack of interest in each other, a man leaned across the table with a story meant to stimulate conversation, at which Azalie parted her lips in a smile that seemed to pass for mirth. A scarlet camelia had fallen from its high estate in the blue-black masses of her hair and hung rakishly over her ear, but she did not care.

"Latimer is at it again, making hay with the last ray left," the colonel bent toward the plump matron to say, who, seeing farther than the happy faces and the gleaming shoulders dimpling into the fluffy whiteness against the uniforms of the men, nodded, adding: "The days of our youth are the days of our glory," and the two gray heads leaned closer to mourn together their lost paradise.

"This is an exchange of your own seeking?" a lifeless voice at his elbow aroused Latimer.

"I am acting under orders," Latimer repeated, reaching for the tray in front of him, but the hand that rolled his cigarette was not now the hand of the man who held medals for marksmanship.

The red-haired girl, springing catlike upon Latimer's unguarded moment, caught, too, Azalie's futile effort to raise her fork to her lips.

"Why, what's the matter with you, Azalie?" she asked, directing the others' attention to the girl's nerveless hand; "your ring positively clatters against your plate," trying to hate her for her beauty and great luck.

And Azalie, darling of the gods, looking into the glitter of light and color before her, saw only swirling blackness. The night was sultry to suffocation, but the erect, white figure shivered. Twirling the heavy seal ring on her finger, "this is a most interesting ring," she said quietly, turning the point of contact from her hand to the heavy ring upon it. "It has a history."

"And that is—?" Burke questioned, carrying on an animated conversation with his neighbor and hearing everything else that was said.

"The poisoner's ring given my grandfather by Maximillian when he found their cause was lost," she answered briefly.

Latimer, listening to the cool tones and steady voice, went down on the knees of his soul to this daughter of a hundred Dons, although he thanked his stars for this chance to make his final adieux in public. She might weep and swoon or snap her fingers in his face, Latimer had fancied, but this high-handed counter-play had never suggested itself in connection with the mercurial Azalie. An unwelcome vision of the thin-souled little wife at home turning him back to Azalie, Latimer whispered softly, "I hope the gods have another meeting in store for us, and that you will not—forget."

The rubies in her breast flashed like a jet of blood from a thrust, but the smoke wreath she blew from her lips interposed a moment's merciful veil before her eyes.

"Here's at you again, Latimer," Burke, always to be relied upon to do the right thing at the wrong time, chipped in. "Here's to your safe voyage home and sure return to the Philippines." And as the evening waned and the toasts went around the table, the soprano girl sang to a three-string accompaniment something about love and death and evermore, sometimes on and sometimes off the key.

At last Azalie poised her glass in mid-air.

"Is it a pas seul?" the red-haired girl asked, noticing the tension of her poise.

"Long life to Latimer," some one proposed, seeing the girl's instant's hesitation.

"Long life to the girl I left behind me!" the mal-apropos Burke again interrupted, having caught something of the side-play between Azalie and Latimer during the evening.

With eyes dilating, bosom heaving, radiant, reckless, Azalie faced Latimer.

"Long life to—death!"

The next instant glass and ring crashed upon the table, the wine stains streaming like blood upon the floor.—MARGUERITE STABLER.

Crows as Enemies of Terrapins.

The crow is the evil genius of the turtle just as of the diamond back and other terrapins. When the warm days of spring come and the female terrapins and turtles leave their beds in the marsh, the crow goes on guard, knowing that a season of feasting is at hand. Both terrapins and turtles seek the warm, sandy uplands near the shore to deposit their eggs. A hole is dug several inches deep and from 20 to 30 oblong white eggs are deposited and then the nest is filled or covered with sand. Having neatly piled the sand over the eggs the turtle raises herself just as high as it is possible, then comes down with a heavy thud on the sand. This is continued until the sand is quite hard, when the eggs are left for the sun to hatch.

In the meantime the crow has been on guard, and by means of his sharp bill and strong claws the work of breaking into the treasure house of the unsuspecting turtle is quickly accomplished and the feast is soon over. The crow is considered by many to be the greatest enemy the diamond back has. It is an easily established fact that the crow destroys thousands of the eggs of all kinds of terrapins, not making an exception of the diamond back.

Physicians' Confessions.

"I often wonder," said Dr. Jay F. Schamberg at a recent meeting of the Philadelphia County Medical Society, "how many of our cures are psychological. Some time ago I had a patient with a severe case of eczema. I sent her to another physician to take sea water treatment. I kept her under inspection, seeing her twice a week. Immediately she began to tell me how much the sea water was helping her. She said she was getting better every day, and yet the eczema kept getting worse so far as I could see, and I could see that she was scratching it more all the time."

"I have a better one than that," rejoined Dr. C. E. de M. Sajous. "A man brought his daughter to me for treatment. She had lost her voice. I tried the battery on her, and her voice returned perfectly in a short time. The father was in such glee that he hugged me. When they had gone I happened to look at the battery and saw that the current had not been turned on."

Theology In the Highlands.

The minister's class at the kirk of Tobermory had been reading the story of Joseph and his brethren and it came to the turn of the minister to examine the boys.

The replies to all his questions had been quick, intelligent and correct.

"What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Quite correct. And for how much?"

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad brothers?"

A pause.

"What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?"

Then a bright little Highlander stretched out an eager hand.

"Well, my man?"

"Please, sir, they sell't him ower cheap."

Too Great a Loss.

Whoever knows anything about the small boy and his pride in his first pair of trousers will recognize the truth of a story the Philadelphia Public Ledger prints.

Tommy was at Sunday-school in his first "real" clothes. A picture of a lot of little angels was before the class, and the teacher asked Tommy if he would not like to be one.

"No, ma'am," replied Tommy, after inspecting the picture.

"Not want to be an angel, Tommy!" reproached the teacher. "Why not?"

"'Cause I'd have to give up my new pants," said Tommy, sagely.

Stewed Red Cabbage.

Needed: One red cabbage, a small slice of ham, one-half ounce of fresh butter, one pint of weak stock or broth, one gill of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste, one tablespoonful of pounded sugar. Cut the cabbage into very thin slices, put it into a stewpan, with the ham cut in dice, the butter, half a pint of stock, and the vinegar; cover the pan closely, and let it stew for one hour. When it is very tender, add the remainder of the stock, a seasoning of salt and pepper, and the pounded sugar; mix all well together, stir over the fire until nearly all the liquor has dried away, and serve. Fried sausages are usually sent to the table with this dish; they should be laid around and on the cabbage, as a garnish.

Any man who will tell his wrongs will exaggerate them.

Great Britain owns more than one-half of the world's ocean shipping.

There are more than 30,000 vessels in the world of one hundred tons or more.

Last year's output of coal in England showed a decrease of over six million tons.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed.

Bees sometimes fly two miles from the hive and find their way back without difficulty.

Dogs, horses, cattle, mice, even fish, have cancer. In Tunis and Abyssinia cancer is unknown.

Recent experiments seem to indicate that bees have the homing instinct like the pigeon.

BRADLEY'S SENATE SEAT IN DANGER?

Hearing of Greenville Solon's Case Comes Up Feb 28.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 21.—The senate is beginning to take sides on the case of Senator Bradley, who was accused by ex-Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms Townsend of charging him a sum of money in return for Bradley's influence in helping him to a job at the state capitol.

SENATOR BRADLEY.

A number of the senators are outspoken in declaring that the Greenville solon must vacate his seat, while others take the view that the testimony is so conflicting that it is not strong enough to cause his dismissal from the senate.

A final hearing of the matter has been set for Feb. 28, as a special order.

SPEAKER WILL RULE SUPREME

Suspension of Rules Follows Remarkable Filibuster.

40 MINUTE LIMIT ON DEBATES

With End of Session Close at Hand House Members Adopt Drastic "Gag" Measure to Force Legislation—Many Important Bills, Appropriation Measure Among Them, Still Unpassed.

Washington (Special).—The great majority of the Democrats in the house voted with the Republicans Monday, 173 to 43, for the adoption of a rule providing that all house rules can be suspended on a two-thirds vote during the remainder of the session, so that appropriation and other measures can be rushed through without amendment after forty minutes' debate.

The adoption of the rule, which was characterized by Mr. Bennet of New York as a "gag," had the effect of ending the three days' filibuster against the war claims bill.

The war claims bill then was passed in the house, after having been under consideration since last Friday because of the filibuster

The house sat all night Saturday and until 4 p. m. Sunday in one of the most spectacular filibusters in congressional history. When the exhausted members could scarcely keep their eyes open a truce was reached, it being agreed to resume the debate at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

When the house met at 10 o'clock Monday morning it was still the legislative day of Friday, Speaker Cannon having ruled to that effect.

The "gag" rule adopted by the house practically puts the entire conduct of affairs for the next two weeks in the hands of the speaker.

STATE CAPITAL NOTES.

After a long debate on third reading the house passed Representative Rankin's bill forbidding fraternities or sororities in any of the public or high schools of the state. The vote was 75 to 12.

Representative Smith has introduced a bill providing that after Jan. 1, 1912, the railroads in Michigan shall not be permitted to construct or use for the first time any car not built of steel.

Representative Haviland introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $6,000 to fill in the Gratiot turnpike near Belle river in Columbus township, which is in a dangerous condition.

Washington—The "full crew" act of Arkansas, regulating the size of crews on freight trains, has been held to be constitutional by the United States supreme court.

Washington—Official notice has been given to clerks of the railway mail service that on lines where their work is heavy continuously for six days each week the standard service hours shall be considered as six hours.

Washington—The supreme court of the United States has granted a request that it review the conviction of officials of the naval stores company accused of having violated the Sherman anti-trust law.

Washington—Representative Fitzgerald of New York, a member of the committee on appropriations, has announced in the house that the sundry civil bill will carry a provision for the fortification of the Panama canal.

Washington—If the Sulloway pension bill, increasing the pension roll about $45,000,000, goes through the senate and is signed by President Taft, the treasury department will be obliged to issue bonds, perhaps to the amount of $100,000,000.

ALDRICH FAVORS RECIPROCITY PACT

Senate Will Consider Measure This Week.

Washington (Special).—Senator Nelson W. Aldrich favors the reciprocity agreement with Canada, and Senator J. W. Bailey of Texas, heretofore a bitter opponent of the measure, has now decided not to oppose consideration of the measure in the senate.

Senator Aldrich, who is chairman of the finance committee of the senate, and one of the joint authors of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, has written to President Taft, promising his support of the measure.

The bill will come up for consideration in the senate this week.

It is the opinion of Senator Cummins of Iowa that the McCall bill putting into effect President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada cannot pass the senate before March 4, and that there will be an extra session of the sixty-second congress following shortly on the adjournment of the sixty-first.

Washington (Special).—Hearings on the McCall bill have been begun by the senate committee on finance. The only witness who has testified so far was John Strange of Neenah, Wis., a paper manufacturer and former lieutenant governor of his state. Mr. Strange opposed the reciprocity bill.

A petition containing the names of over 50,000 farmers and business from every township in Michigan is being rushed to Washington from the Wolverine state by G. H. Slocum, who is fighting the reciprocity treaty through the Gleaner organization.

COX INDICTED.

Cinninnati's Republican "Boss" is Charged With Perjury.

Cincinnati (Special).—George B. Cox, for years head of the Republican organization in Cincinnati, a prominent factor in state and national politics, president of the Cincinnati Trust company, and known widely as an owner of treatrical property, has been indicted by the Hamilton county grand jury on a charge of perjury.

The basis of the charge is that Cox allegedly testified falsely before a grand jury March 21, 1906, in denying that he received any of the interest money which several banks, according to disclosures before the Drake investigating committee, paid to county treasurer as recompense for the deposit of county funds.

Langford Wins on Foul.

London (Special).—Bill Lang, who once held the heavyweight championship of Australia, was no match for Sam Langford, the American colored pugilist, in a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Olympia here. Langford won in the sixth round, when Lang was disqualified, but the contest could not have gone much longer, as Lang was almost out when he committed the foul.

Elwood Snow by the attorneys for the Saginaw Power company that the case of the Saginaw Power company and the Eastern Michigan Power company and the Bartlett Illuminating company will be heard in open court during the March term. The case is the one in which the city is trying to dissolve an electric light merger.

Morrow Again Will Head League.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—After a four-hour session of the Michigan state board of trustees of the Anti-Saloon league, during which all the evidence against Superintendent Morrow that was placed before the headquarters staff on the Jackson colonization charges, was reconsidered, and all the leaders who have been opposing him recently heard, Superintendent Morrow was re-elected to [illegible] here.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BISHOP WILLIAMS

At the Episcopal Church Tuesday Evening.

The Subject of the Lecture given by Bishop Williams Tuesday evening, Wealth, productive, pretation and parasitic was given in a most able manner.

He was strong in his commendation of wealth produced by labor. He maintained that the natural treasures of the earth belonged to everyone and that they should be entitled to all the benefits arising therefrom. He also advocated the adoption of the single tax, recommending his hearers to read the works of Henry George the great exponent of Single tax. His was one of the ablest lectures ever given in Tecumseh.

ECZEMA CURE A BEAUTY WASH.

Although D. D. D. Prescription has been recognized for years as the one remedy for Eczema, Psoriasis, and all other forms of skin diseases, it is now known that there is no other wash, even those used by the beauty specialists that can compare with this mild liquid for cleansing the skin of pimples, blackheads, rash, and all similar skin affections.

For this reason alone, a bottle of D. D. D. should be kept on hand in every household. A trial 25c bottle will show you the merits of this great remedy as a complexion wash.

D. D. D. seems to remove the cause whatever the trouble may be, cleansing the skin, and leaving it as soft, as smooth and clear as that of a healthy child.

Visit Manchester Tuesday Evening.

About 60 of Tecumseh Knights' of Pythias made Manchester a fraternal visit Tuesday night. They marched from the depot direct to the hall where they conferred the 3rd. rank on eleven candidates. After the work was over the company adjourned to Manchester House where a fine banquet was served. Among the visiting members was, Dept. Grand Chancellor Clisby who made a few pleasant remarks both at the hall and banquet. The Tecumseh boys reached home at 3 o'clock in the morning, tired but happy.

FRATERNAL VISIT

About 25 members of Tecumseh Masonic Lodge visited Clinton Lodge Wednesday evening, the occasion being "Past Masters' Night," the past masters of Clinton Lodge exemplifying the 3rd. degree. The work was done in excellent manner by the old time officers of Clinton Lodge and was followed by a splendid banquet served in the town hall, the ladies of Goldenrod Chapter, O. E. S. being in charge. About 100 fraters were gathered about the tables and instrumental music was furnished during the feast. The Tecumseh Masonic Male Quartette was present and sang both during the work and at the subsequent banquet. Short speeches followed the banquet.

Guests were also present from Manchester and neighboring towns. The occasion was a very enjoyable one and was a great success in every way.

MICHIGAN MASONS IN WASHINGTON.

The Detroit News has quite an account of our Michigan Masons and their doings at the Capital who arrived in the city Monday night. They had a special train of nine cars direct from Detroit and they are creating quite a sensation in Masonic week in Washington. Alexandria, Va. is holding its annual meeting of all the Grand Masters of the United States.

It is claimed that Michigan excells all others in their manner of exemplifying the work where other lodges do the work by simply going through the solemn situal in citizens clothes. The Michigan delegation have the whole paraphernalia and the whole allegonical story is worked out in full costume and stage effects. There are about forty characters in the cast and it is estimated that there were nearly $2,000 of robes alone for the display.

Michigan exemplified the work at Alexandria on Washington's birthday.

It is estimated that over 900 Americans visited the grave of Washington on Wednesday the anniversary of his birth. Two beautiful memorial wreath marked the grave. Flags draped the open work fron doors and evergreens further decorated the place made sacred as his last resting place.

U. OF M.

February 22, 1911.

Washingtons birthday was fittingly observed on the Campus at Ann Arbor on Wednesday last by a Mass meeting in University Hall in the afternoon. This was addressed by President Emeritus Angell. As he appeared on the platform the entire audience of 2000 people arose with one accord and applauded him. The influence of lawyers outside of their profession was his chosen subject and he spoke to the law students as a father to a son and urged them to keep from growing narrow in their lives and thoughts, following it up with much good advice. Dr. A. S. Warthin and Dean V. C. Vaughn were the speakers of the evening.

Another feature of the day was the anniversary of the founding of the School of Medicine, who met in Sara Caswell Angell hall in the evening.

An enthusiastic crowd greeted both meetings.

MENS' BANQUET

M. E. CHURCH

February 22,

The banquet given by the men of the M. E. Church on Washington's birthday was a great success, if one judges by the large and enthusiastic crowd of people who gathered for the occasion.

The abundance of good things to eat appealed to the inner man, and the program that followed was the feast for reason. George and Lady Washington were hobnobbing with the common people in a manner that made them quite famous. There were a number in costume which added to the entertainment.

The program consisted of musical selections by Mesdames Kendrick, McCoy, the Misses Edith Wilson, Stella Brush and Gertrude Kreidler. One of the sweetest numbers of the program was a duet by Lillian Kennedy and Gertrude Peters with Marie Ellis at the piano, the little Misses were heartily applauded. Little Miss Edna Taylor gave two fine recitations in a very pleasing manner, Rev. Kennedy favored the audience with two selections and H. C. Daniels also gave a selection which with his Colonial dress was quite effective. Wilford Waldron's Trombone Solo was fine the Piano Solo by Mrs. Hedges was given in her usual delightful manner. Every number on the program was of the best.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh Without Stomach Dosing, or Money Back

Yes, dear reader, catarrh can be cured; but not by pouring vile, nauseating drugs into the stomach.

You've got to kill the catarrh germs, that's all there is to it, before you can cure catarrh.

And catarrh germs thrive, flourish and multiply in the nose and throat.

Can you kill these tough and persistent little health destroyers by swallowing pills or nostrum? Any physiwill tell you that it cannot be done.

HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) is a germ killing vaporized air which when breathed either through the mouth or nose, will kill catarrh germs and soothe and heal the inflamed and mutilated membrane promptly. It gives relief in two minutes.

HYOMEI is such a powerful germ destroyer that it penetrates every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat.

A complete outfit, which includes inhaler, a bottle of HYOMEI and simple instructions for use, costs $1.

Should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI the price is only 50c. Leading druggists everywhere and C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich , sells HYOMEI.

Judge Refuses Guilty Plea.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 15—Frank Fox pleaded guilty in circuit court to the murder of Ella Blade, his sister-in-law. Judge Wisner remanded Fox to the custody of the sheriff for one week and refused to accept his plea of guilty until the expiration of that time. Counsel was appointed to look after Fox's interests. Fox, in his statement to the court, repeated the confession that he made last week in respect to the motive for the crime, maintaining that the participation of his sister-in-law in an alleged criminal operation performed on his wife seven years ago, was responsible for the crime.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This emptying of the bowels is very important, as with it comes a clear head, a lightness of step, good appetite and sound sleep. But it is equally important to know what to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Cathartics are too strong and salts and other purgatives are not only too strong, but the child refuses them because of their bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid tonic that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child, but there is nothing better to be found for children. They like its taste—you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this way you can try it before buying. Later, when convinced of its merits, you can get it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of other families are doing. The family of Mr. D. W. Spangler of Strattonville, Pa., as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of Walnut Grove, Tenn., started with it in that way and now write that it is their one family necessity next to food itself. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sickly child, one given to constipation and indigestion, you should send for a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R 500 Caldwell building, Monticello Ill.

How to Cure Chronic Colds and Bronchitis

Bluevale, Ont., May 4, 1910.

"I was sick for two years with a chronic cold and bronchitis and a consequent run-down condition. I received no benefit from doctors, and had to give up work. VINOL was recommended and from the second bottle I commenced to improve—I gained in weight and strength, my cold and bronchial trouble disappeared, and I am at work again. I want to recommend VINOL to anyone who is in need of such a medicine."—THOMAS HIGGINS.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in VINOL which makes it so successful in curing stubborn colds and bronchitis.

VINOL is a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary troubles, not a palliative like cough syrups.

Try a bottle of VINOL. If you don't think it helped you, we will return your money.

A Fine Talker.

"I like the looks of this parrot," said the lady who had stepped into the bird store. "Is he a good talker?" The proprietor replied that the bird was an excellent talker, and it was evident the customer was favorably impressed.

"What is your price for him?" she asked.

"The man had noticed the rich apparel worn by his customer, and he judged that there was a chance to make a little "easy money" at the expense of one who would never miss it.

"Ten dollars," he said, with just the slightest possible hesitation.

"Five dollars, madam," instantly croaked the parrot.

"The lady looked at the proprietor, who had turned red.

"He certainly is a fine talker," she said, "and he also seems to have good sense. I am willing to take him at his own valuation. Do I get him for that?"

"You do," answered the bird man sadly.—Youth's Companion.

The Early Drum.

Drums are probably an eastern idea introduced by the crusaders into Europe. They are frequently mentioned in accounts of the first crusade. When Edward III. of England and his queen made triumphal entry into Calais in 1347 "tambours" were among the instruments which were played in their honor. Another of these was called a "nacaire" or kettledrum, taken, together with its name, from the Arabs. The poet Chaucer also mentioned this instrument in his description of the tournament in "The Knight's Tale." The king generally kept a troop of these bandsmen or minstrels in his employ, and we read that Edward II. on one occasion gave a sum of 60 shillings to Roger, the trumpeter; Janino, the nakerer, and others for their performances. Another minstrel was called the "cheveretter," or player on the bagpipe.

His Retirement From Presidency of M. P. R. R. Marks Passing of Gould Power In Financial World.

GOULD POWER DISAPPEARING

Passing of George J. From M. P. Presidency Marks Last Step.

New York (Special).—With the retirement, last week, of George J. Gould from the presidency of the Missouri Pacific railroad the Gould family disappears from a dominant position in the larger affairs of American finance and business. While the financial district recognizes that the Gould fortune at present is larger than it was when left by Jay Gould, founder of the family, it regards the Gould influence as not as potent in the empire of money as it was when the pile was small.

One by one the great interests owned by Jay Gould, father of George Gould, have passed out of the hands of the Gould family, either wholly or in such part that the Gould name is not the controlling one.

JUNKET VICTORIOUS.

Baker Twice Overruled, and Resolution Is Adopted.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 22.—Fifty-seven members of the house formed a flying squadron last Tuesday afternoon, after the merriest row of the session, and carried through a resolution for junketing. In doing so they twice overruled decisions of the speaker.

Representative Ashley of Detroit offered the resolution for all committees on state institutions to go on week-end junkets.

When Speaker Baker ruled out of order the Ashley resolution on the ground that the house had previously declared against junkets, his decision was overruled, 52 to 42.

The Plague and the Tan Pits.

Bermondsey's association with the tanning industry was originally due partly to its fine oak woods and partly to the fact that the London slaughter-houses were to a large extent situated in Southwark, on the unfashionable side of the river. For a brief period, however, it enjoyed a certain fame as a health resort. That was, as Sir Henry Trueman Wood reminds us in "Industrial England in the Eighteenth Century," when "terror stricken creatures fled from the ravages of the great plague in the city of London to the Bermondsey tan pits to find strong medicinal virtues in the nauseous smell."

SENATOR TILLMAN.

Overcome by Emotions, South Carolinian Is Forced to Discontinue Speech In Senate Chamber.

TILLMAN WEPT.

"Pitchfork Ben" Sinks to His Seat Sobbing, in Senate Chamber.

Washington (Special).—So affected by his emotions and weakened by the illness with which he was stricken during the last session of congress as to be unable to continue, Senator Benjamin R. Tillman of South Carolina sank sobbing into his seat, shortly after having begun a speech in eulogy of the late Senators Alexander S. Clay and Jonathan P. Dolliver.

Senator Bacon of Georgia moved hastily over and took a seat by the South Carolinian. A few words from Mr. Bacon in a measure restored the control of his nerves to Mr. Tillman, and shortly afterward he feebly walked from the chamber.

The attempt to speak at length was the first Mr. Tillman had made since his return to his duties.

WILL OPPOSE HARMON.

Liquor Interests Hold Him Responsible For Defeat of Dean Bill.

Columbus, O. (Special).—The defeat of the Dean Bill, to amend the Rose county option law, so as to permit municipalities to decide for themselves whether liquor shall be sold in the house, will have an adverse effect on the presidential aspirations of Governor Harmon, according to the friends of the measure.

The liquor interests hold the governor responsible for the defeat of the bill, although they refuse to disclose what proof they may have of any interference by him.

65,000 Chinese Fall as Victims to Fatal Pneumonic Malady.

Pekin (Special).—The viceroy of Manchuria estimates that the fatalities in Manchuria from the pneumonic plague already have reached 65,000, while the foreign office believes that inside the great wall there have been 1,000 more deaths. The relief committee at Shanghai believes that the minimum number of deaths from famine is 10,000.

Washington.—A report has reached the American National Red Cross society here to the effect that the pneumonic plague is fatal in every case. Death follows the infection of the lungs in a few hours.

Boilermakers' Strike Spreads.

Cleveland (Special).—The strike of the boilermakers employed on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern division of the New York Central railroad, between Chicago and Buffalo, ordered by Vice President Weyand of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders of America, is spreading to other roads.

At Jackson, Mich., about sixty in the Michigan Central shops have laid down their tools and quit, following orders from headquarters in Kansas City.

Vega, perhaps fatally wounded, has reached his old camp at Las Juntas with barely a bodyguard out of his former forces, according to advices received here.

Chicago—Trailed through the snow to his refuge on top of a four-story building at 718 West Randolph street, Bicoloc Trapani, declared by the police to be a member of the Black Hand society, engaged in a desperate battle with six detectives. They climbed to the roof while he fired upon them. Trapani was captured. He was wanted for the murder of Vito Cappitelli.

Columbus, O.—Acting under the provisions of the Valentine anti-trust law, Attorney Hogan has instituted quo warranto proceedings in the circuit court to oust from the state the Hocking Valley, the Kanawha & Michigan, the Zanesville & Western, the Toledo & Ohio Central, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad companies.

Cordova, Alaska—One of the worst storms ever experienced in Cordova and the Copper river country has just ended after three days of continuous rain and of wind reaching a velocity of eighty miles an hour. Snow melting on the mountain sides caused bad landslides on the railroad running up the Copper river, but they are now cleared. The river is bank full, and it is feared that the flood will start the glaciers moving long before the Alaska winter is ended.

Origin of Firewater.

When the Hudson Bay Trading company began its trading among the Indians it was found that by selling the Indians liquor they could more easily be induced to trade their peltries. The first whisky or intoxicant of inferior quality was distilled in England and brought to America in large barrels, but in transporting it overland it was found more convenient to divide it into small kegs. The traders soon became aware of the fact that by diluting the whisky with water more furs could be obtained. This was practiced for some time, but the Indians learned that good whisky poured on a fire would cause it to flame up, whereas had the whisky been diluted the fire would be quenched. It was by this simple experiment that the term "firewater" became a common word among the Indians. A chief who had experienced the bad effects of whisky among his people said it was most certainly distilled from the hearts of wildcats and the tongues of women from the effects it produced.—Red Man.

Symbolism Didn't Appeal.

"Charlie," sorrowfully sighed the young lady in the parlor of the concrete house on Washington avenue, "it is nearly 12 o'clock."

"Yes, Belinda," was the breathing response of her poetical companion, who was stifling on the sofa beside her, "the minute hand is drawing closer and closer to the hour hand, and when the time of midnight is chimed the two hands will be even as one. Oh, darling Belinda," he continued as he literally simulated the action of the minute hand, "may not the coming together of those two hands be symbolical of us?"

She broke away and stood firmly on her feet. "No, Charles Henry Smith," she retorted angrily, "those two hands will remain as one but a single second, and then the minute hand will divorce itself and go on its way alone. No, Mr. Smith, a minute hand that doesn't stick isn't the kind of symbolism I want!"—Boston Post.

Sebewaing—While Fred Haist was cleaning out one of the centrifugal machines at the sugar factory with a steam hose, the hose broke loose from its fastening overhead. It was wound around the shaft, and Haist, before he could let go, was drawn into the machine. He was instantly killed.

Pontiac—The jury in the case of Justice James B. Godfrey of Stoney Creek against Justice Henry L. Wood of Rochester awarded Godfrey a verdict of $50. Godfrey sued for malicious prosecution, his arrest growing out of his refusal to cash a school order when he held the position of school treasurer.

Muskegon—Byron Brisban, aged twenty-five, a lineman for the Bell Telephone company of this city, met a tragic death. An electric wire had become crossed with a telephone wire, and Brisban went up a pole to remedy the trouble. He had no more than reached the top when he came in contact with the heavily charged wire and was hurled to the ground, dying instantly.

Pontiac—In jail on the charge of forgery and held for trial in the circuit court, unable to give bail, is the plight of seventeen-year-old Stanley Sherman, whose mother says he forged a check for $1.70. Stating that he had been in trouble on similar charges previously, the mother asked Deputy Richmond to prefer the charge of forgery. The lad has been arraigned and held for trial.

LIGHT PLANT IN RUINS

Ossining, N. Y., Will Be Without Current for Month.

Most of the Streets and Residences Will Be in Darkness—Sing Sing Prison Also Suffers.

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 27.—A short circuit in the power house of the local electric lighting company started a fire which, within an hour, had swept through the plant, destroying everything inflamable and wrecking all the machinery. The city will be without electric current for nearly a month, officials estimating that it will require at least that time to get an emergency plant in operation.

As a result most of the streets and important residences will be in darkness and a dozen small factories that depend upon the electric system for power will be crippled.

One of the sufferers will be Sing Sing prison, where the current is used, not only in the electric chair but also for light and power.

SHEPARD OUT OF SENATORIAL RACE

Announces Withdrawal in Letter to Manager.

CALLS CAUCUS VOTING TRUST

Senators and Assemblymen Who Permitted Murphy to Pool Votes Did So, Shepard Charges, to Save Their Political Lives.

New York, Feb. 27.—Edward M. Shepard is out of the senatorial race. He announced his withdrawal in a long letter to Montgomery Hare, who had been acting as his political manager.

The letter was written at Mr. Shepard's Brooklyn home after a series of conferences with his political advisers, his personal friends and the insurgents who are opposing William F. Sheehan.

The statement was made for Mr. Shepard that the senators and assemblymen who have combined under the leadership of Senator J. Franklin Roosevelt to produce a deadlock, were aware of the general terms of the letter and that it was issued with their advice and concurrence.

After discussing his own course, Mr. Shepard takes up the legitimacy of the caucus that pronounced for Sheehan. In effect he says that the caucus did not represent the majority but a device by which the minority attempts to control the majority. The caucus, he says, was a pool, a voting trust in the hands of one man and that it was against the true principles of Democracy. The senators and assemblymen who permitted Murphy to pool their votes did so, Mr. Shepard writes, because they knew their political lives depended on it. In the days of up-state leadership of the party, such caucussing would have been impossible.

Elsewhere in the letter he says that he will continue to be identified with the party and hopes to be able to express himself for the party good. He holds nothing against the Kings county men for turning to Mr. Sheehan after a complimentary vote for himself.

BUILDERS FACE PROBLEM

Rockefeller's Three-Ton Chimney Top to Be Removed.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 27. — Contractors who have begun work on pushing the roof of John D. Rockefeller's new mansion at Pocantico Hills ten feet in the air have the problem on their hands of removing the three-ton concrete top to the massive chimney in the center of the house. This chimney is so large that when it was first put in use it sucked the red hot coals out of the boiler and shot them up into the air like a volcano. Mr. Rockefeller's home stands on a high hill and the chimney has an exceptionally strong draught.

It was seen at once that something had to be done, for as fast as the firemen shoveled coal into the furnace it would be sucked up the chimney. The architects decided to put some fireproof lining in the flue, reducing its size, and then a three-ton cement cap was placed on the front. This solved the coal problem. Now the contractors are puzzling as to the best way of getting the concrete top down. It is almost impossible to use a derrick.

He will pilot a group of regulars to Hot Springs, Va., and there they will take baths, play golf, tramp the hills and otherwise try to fit themselves for actual practice, which will not be begun until Athens is reached two weeks later.

In the meanwhile, however, younger players and new players will assemble at Athens, leaving that port next Saturday and under the direction of Arthur Irwin and Duke Farrell begin practice and get in some work before the regulars join them.

IN MEXICAN PRISON

Three American Lads Incarcerated at Ciudad, Juarez.

Gen. Navarro Says Prosecution Is Necessary as Warning to Others Not to Join Insurgents.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 27. — "Oh, my son," exclaimed Mrs. C. H. Converse, of Glendora, Cal., as she embraced her boy, Lawrence, in a private room in the Mexican prison in Ciudad, Juarez. She sobbed convulsively but the boy was cool.

T. F. Converse, father of the lad, who arrived from Lewiston, Ill., where he had been on a visit with his wife's relatives, took the meeting coolly, but shook his son's hand heartily.

United States Consul T. E. Edwards, of Juarez; Mayor C. E. Kelly, of El Paso, and Postmaster J. A. Smith, of El Paso, were present. Edward Blatt, of Pittsburg, arrested with Converse, was also brought in. Postmaster Smith showed the lad telegrams from his father advising him to secure counsel for the youngster and stating that Secretary Knox had interceded with Mexico in his behalf. The two boys had been arraigned before Judge Herrerara a few hours previous—Mexican courts operate on Sunday as well as other days—and had been asked to plead to the charge of sedition. Both pleaded not guilty and were told to secure counsel.

Another American boy arrested Saturday, Richard Brown, who had been with the insurrecto hospital corps, was in communicado all the time Blatt and Converse were receiving their guests.

The same American officials paid a visit to Gen. Navarro, whose force had arrested the two boys and he informed them that the matter was out of his hands, but even if it were not, he would feel that their prosecution was necessary as a warning to other Americans not to join the insurgents. The American officials express the belief that the two boys will be sentenced and held in prison until the insurrection ends and that President Diaz will then pardon them.

BRIAND READY TO STEP DOWN

Premier of France Finds Himself on Shifting Sands.

SMALL VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Onslaught on the Premier Led by the Radical Socialists Malvy and Meunier — Ministry Discusses the Affair.

Paris, Feb. 27.—Premier Briand, for the first time in his brilliant career as the controlling influence in the government of France, finds himself on shifting sands. It is probable that the resignation of the cabinet will be presented to President Fallieries.

If this course is not adopted it will be more because of the urgency of personal friends and the fact that no other strong leader appears available than because of any desire on the part of the premier to continue the fight against the radical socialists and the anti-clericals.

The premier's friends describe him as "sick of it all, worn out phisically and weary in spirit over the bickerings and petty distractions." Only a broad sense of duty will hold him if he remains at his post.

But beyond the matter of his personal inclinations there is the unquestioned weakening of the premier's power and of confidence in his ministry. The leader, who has before survived grave crises and come out with a triumphant vote of the chamber of deputies, has just escaped censure of the government by a bare majority of sixteen votes.

The socialists, who have never forgiven the premier for modifying the extreme ecclesiastical views which he championed when he first entered public life, attacked him persistently and all but forced his immediate retirement.

The discussion arose through the interpellations blaming the government for not having applied the laws against religious bodies with proper severity. The onslaught was led by the radical socialists, Louis Malvy and Paul Meunier.

For a time Briand fought back with his old-time vigor, defending every step of the government and declaring that the deeply rooted congregations could not be eradicated in a few months, but that the orders had not been reconstituted.

In the heat of the debate he made the master-stroke that had before confounded his opponents, challenging the opposition that if it could not give the government its full confidence to say so, as the ministry would not continue its task undermined by petty intrigues. The vote of confidence was 268 to 252.

Following the adjournment of the chamber the cabinet met in the premier's office and discussed the situation. Foreign minister Pichon and Minister of Commerce Dupuy were for resigning at once.

All the other ministers were opposed to an immediate retirement unless further developments should make this move imperative.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Sound Fraternal Order

Knights of the Modern Maccabees Make Excellent Showing.

Unique Features of this Popular Home Beneficial Society.

The annual statement of the Life Benefit Fund of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees, Dec. 31, 1910, makes a very good showing for this popular home beneficiary association. The assets total over $605,000, of which upwards of $84,000 is real estate. Its balance in the treasury, after deducting death claims not yet adjusted, is over $493,000.

GEO. S. LOVELACE, Gt. Commander

During the year 1910 it paid 1,050 death claims, amounting to $1,393,500; paid disability claims $63,770.35; and paid old-age claims of $107,806.99. Three death claims are resisted and 91 were reported but proofs had not been filed. No claims of any kind in which proofs had been received were unpaid.

Attractive features of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees, many of which are peculiar to this association, are term insurance, whole life insurance, old age annuities, special disability certificates, health and accident certificates. Its rates are based on the National Fraternal Congress Table. An examination of the rates of assessment would indicate that the society does not offer the bait of cheap insurance, which has lured to ruin so many fraternal orders, but offers protection at the lowest rates consistent with safety.

The Knights of the Modern Maccabees, Michigan's own fraternal order, number in their ranks men in every walk of life. The banishment of everything connected with alcoholism from the membership and social functions of the association has made the order exceedingly popular with wives and sweethearts, who appreciate the fact that the social gatherings of the Knights will always conclude with sobriety.

WASHINGTON LETTER

The opinion in regard to President Taft as a politicion and a statesman has risen considerable since the beginning of the present session. It is conceded that he is in the main master of the situation and when reciprocity with Canada is established, as the better minds of the country think it will be, there is prospect of reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Mexico and with the Central and South American republics. With these ends accomplished close on to the completion of the Panama Canal the administration is sure to finish with eclat if not with another term for President Taft.

There is much favorable comment from all parties in reference to what is called the "blundering blatherskite diplomacy" or rather the lack of it, of the Democratic heir-apparent to the speakership of the House of Representatives. Nothing could have been more inopportune than the statement that reciprocal trade relations were prelimary to the annexation of British America and a foolish remark may be the ruin of what promised to be a most beneficent trade arrangement. It is yet time for the Democratic majority to pause and reconsider the propriety of electing a political marplot to a high office. A hundred or more years ago there was a ducking stool in England for silencing old women who talked too much An appropriation for such an instrument as a water tank would not be bad for the National Capitol

It is something more than opportune that the exposure of the great lumber trust comes fast upon the heels of reciprocity with Canada and the proposed free importation of lumber from that country. The Bureau of Corporations has just furnished the information that 40 years ago 75 per cent of the timber of the country was owned by the government and 80 per cent of it owned by private persons. It is apparent that the United States must conserve with greatest care the small remaining supply of timber and furthur it must if possible, scotch the the trust that is monopolizing with a view to increasing still further the exorbitant cost of such timber as is not at present under their control.

President Taft has issued a proclamation, not as President of the United States but as President of the Red Cross Society, asking contributions for the relief of the famine stricken region in China. John D. Rockefeller has contributed $5000 and there have been many contributions from other sources and charitable people are also contributing food stuff and clothing which will be sent by a U. S. transport to Shanghai and thence up the Yangtsekiang River where millions of Chinese inhabitants are in dire distress. It is said they are selling their children for food. This however, is no particular measuring of their suffering because it is common with the Chinese in that part of the world to kill or sell their daughters. The selling of daughters, however, is not confined to the Chinese. It goes on with more or less obscuration in all the hot-beds of Christian civilization. We are spending millions annually in China for the conversion of those people while our exclusion laws keep them from the United States. That is practically telling them that they are good enough for Heaven but not good enough for this country. They are an amiable, temperate, industrious people. Their country is greatly over-populated and it is not their fault that they are not able to get enough to eat.

BAD DREAMS

Nightmare, Restlessness and Night sweats all Caused by Indigestion

Half of the nervousness in the world all of the disturbing dreams and nightmares can be ended in a few weeks by a simple, inexpensive treatment guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

Upset stomach is the cause of nervousness and bad dreams. Your food is lying in your stomach undigested and fermenting; it is forming poisonous gases which irritates the pheumogastric nerve, that leads direct from the brain, and ends in a network of tiny branches running through the stomach.

It is also the irritation of this great pheumogastric nerve that causes headaches. Many times people have severe headaches and know they are caused by the stomach but do not know how.

If you are nervous, have dreams or nightmare and do not sleep sound at night, get a 50 cent box of MI-O-NA stomach tablets and take one or two after or with meals. MI-O-NA stomach tablets relieve distressed stomach in 5 minutes. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, and druggists everywhere—who guarantee MI-O-NA to cure indigestion, or money back.

BASE BALL NOTES

Manager Jennings of the Detroit Tigers, in commenting on the N. Y. Giants, has a good word for Merkle, so well known in Tecumseh. He says "the Giants have an excellent infield, Merkle on first base I like as well as any man playing the position to-day and that lets them all in. He is a big rangy fellow and is good on either batted or thrown balls and he can run the sacks.

Merkle is entitled to a lot of credit for the way he has lived down his reputation as a numbscull. Of course that play when he failed to make second will never be forgotten but the man has more than atoned for his error by subsequent good work.

Billy Cook has secured a shortstop for Adrian in the place of Cook, who was released at the end of last season. His name has not been given yet by the local magnates, but they claim he is a genuine professional who is sure to make good and is ready to play at a moments notice.

TROUBLE WITH THE TOWER.

Among the engravings that adorned the walls of a Toledo woman's home was one big one, of the leaning tower of Pisa.

One morning, shortly after the advent of a new maid, the mistress of the house noticed that the picture of the tower hung crooked. She straightened it, and said nothing of the matter to the new servant, who had evidently shifted it while dusting.

The next day the picture was again crooked; the same thing happened the next day and the next. Finally, one one morning, chancing to be in the room where the picture was, the mistress said to the maid, as she dusted:

"Mary, you've hung that picture of the tower crooked. Just look at it."

"That's what I say, mum," returned the domestic. "Look at it! The only way I can get that tower to hang straight is to hang the picture crooked."

THE JOHN R. HAILEY CARRIAGE FACTORY

RE-OPENED FOR BUSINESS BY FRANK J. HAILEY, WHOSE FATHER ESTABLISHED AND CARRIED ON THE BUSINESS FOR 40 YEARS

It will be of much pleasure to Tecumseh and the people in its vicinity to know that the John R. Hailey Carriage Factory is now opened for business, fully equipped in every department to serve the people.

It is owned and operated by Frank J. Hailey, who was for so many years manager of this business for his father.

He is fully qualified in every way, both in knowledge, ability and in stock, to furnish up-to-date carriages of every description. In looking over the factory, it seems good to hear the sound of the blacksmith's hammer, to see the woodmakers at work, and the painters and finishers busy in their departments.

We noted among the new carriages, whose outlines seemed the most artistic, two styles of stanhopes, for the family use the extra wide surrey and many other styles of vehicles, with the most beautiful upholstery and rugs.

Mr. Hailey is fully prepared to do all sorts of repairing, carriage and automobile painting and makes a specialty of putting rubber tires on buggies.

That Mr. Hailey will have no trouble in selling his goods is a foregone conclusion, as the name "Hailey" speaks for durability, style and finish.

Everyone will wish him success in his business.

OPEN MEETING

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY AT MRS. J. D. SHULL'S, FRI., FEBRUARY 24th.

75 Guests—Elaborate Program—Interesting Business Session

The open meeting of the Town Civic Improvement Club was held at the home of the president, Mrs. J. D. Shull, Feb. 24, with about 75 members present

The meeting was called to order promptly at 3 o'clock, by the president

A short business session was held previous to giving the program, in which was discussed, the giving to the village a sanitary drinking fountain by the club, the ways and means of raising the money in order to obtain these advantages for the town.

The program was then taken up, with the business matter deferred until later. The program was given as follows—

Solo, Mrs. McAlpine, with Mrs. Wood, pianist

Mrs. Andrew Wilson, whose subject was, Rochester the Model City, remarked, "with 1200 factories and with 46,000 working men, through the efforts of the Ladies' Clubs and the co-operation of the Business Men's Association, they have brought the city up to a high standard, both Artistic and Sanitary, their slogan being "All for Rochester." She brought out some excellent points, both for cities and towns to adopt. One especially as being something new, at the minute the child was sent to school there was present a physician, nurse and dentist, the child was thoroughly examined and a written statement given that governed the position of the child in the school and home. Their teeth attended to, medicine given and everything done for the health of the child. This was a talk listened to with deep interest.

Miss Edyth Wilson followed with a vocal solo, Mrs. Wood at the piano.

Mrs. Weld whose paper was on a Model City, chose her home town, Minneapolis, where she was born, as the subject of her talk, the work done for the working class and beautifying the city, being similiar to that done in Rochester, although they had paid more attention to parks and drives, the natural condition of the country lending itself to this line of improvement. The unique idea in regard to school children which was carried out in the Minneapolis schools was the establishment of savings accounts, a penny even being accepted. Once a week a man was sent from the bank, who gave stamps to the children in return for their money and it was astonishing the amonnt the children would save in one week. She spoke of the artistic lighting of the city which has been so widely imitated. Mrs Weld showed great enthusiasm over her home town which is a trait of character it would be well for all of us to imitate, what ever you do, don't run down your own town.

Solo by Mrs. R. S. Moore

Mrs. C. A. Wright's talk which followed gave great pleasure to every American Citizen present, for she compared the old world with the new and it was hurrah for the U. S. A. In our manners we were the most courteous—children were better bred and the condition of the working woman was much better. Mrs. Wright stated that she had learned the value of the common flowers and how they could lend themselves to the beauty of the landscape, especially the merigold, the golden glow and the common red geranium. The artistic seems inborn with the people of the old country. She remarked that we were a young country and were just getting where we have leisure to cultivate the beauty in life.

By request Mrs. F. B. Wood and Edyth Shull, gave the Swedish Bridal Song.

A short business session followed by a pot luck supper, with so many good things to eat, that spoke well for the culinary ability of the members, showing that they were proficient in more ways than one.

Guests from out of town were, Mrs. Downing of Pittsburg, Pa., Mrs. Elsworth of New York and Miss Crego of Brooklyn

DELAY LORIMER VOTE

Several Senators Yet to Speak on the Matter.

Despite the Oratory Friends of the Illinois Statesman Hope to Get Vote This Session.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The Lorimer case is now the "unfinished business" before the senate. Several members are yet to speak on the matter. They are Senators Stone, LaFollette, Owen Crawford, and probably some others.

Despite all this oratory, it is probable that Senator Lorimer's friends will force a vote this session. Chairman Burrows of the committee on privileges and elections succeeded in having the Lorimer case made the "unfinished business" on the senate calendar. In that status it can be pushed to a vote without reference to anything except the oratorical endurance of the opposition.

As matters stand, the Lorimer vote can be pushed to the exclusion of everything else, unless it is displaced by a majority vote of the senate, and that is very unlikely.

KERN IN WASHINGTON

May Advocate Policies of Bryan in United States Senate.

Indianapolis, Feb. 27.—United States Senator-Elect Kern has left here for Washington and expects to be sworn in as a member of the senate immediately after a session of congress is called by President Taft. It is pretty well understood among his friends here that he will be the spokesman for William Jennings Bryan in the senate and that he will begin at once to inaugurate the policies that Bryan has so long advocated. Kern is one of the few Indiana Democrats that has always been loyal to Bryan no matter what the Nebraskan said or did.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic touble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 325 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

What To Do —FOR— Sickly Children

Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

Contempt For the House of Commons.

There is nothing noble or exalted in the history of the house of commons. Indeed, a devil's advocate had he the requisite talent could easily deliver an oration as long and as eloquent as any of Burke's or Sheridan's, taking as his subject the stupidity, cowardice and, until recent times, the corruption of the house of commons. I confess I cannot call to mind a single occasion in its long and remarkable history when the house of commons, as a whole, played a part either obviously heroic or conspicuously wise, but we all of us can recall hundreds of occasions when, heroism and wisdom being greatly needed, the house of commons exhibited either selfish indifference, crass ignorance or the vulgarest passion.—Augustine Birrell's "Essays and Addresses."

The Swedish Almanac.

The Swedish name almanac differs from English almanacs in giving, besides the usual information, a Christian name for each sex for every day of the year. The names set forth have to receive the approval of the king. The object aimed at is to secure a greater choice of names for parents and to avoid the endless repetition of a dozen of so names. A similar name almanac is issued under royal authority in one of the German states.—London Graphic.

Sounded Bigger.

"How did you get that new clerk? He wouldn't accept an offer from me."

"Probably I offered him larger inducements."

"I told him his wages would be $10 a week."

"That's it, then. I told him his salary would be $40 a month."—Cleveland Leader.

Moral Courage.

Obituary

On Friday morning, Feb. 24, 1911, just as the sun was coming up to bring light and joy and sunshine to earth, the beautiful spirit of Anna J. Underwood took its flight from the frail body.

Mrs. Underwood (nee) Hoagland was born in Alabama but in early life came to this community

On March 12, 1896, she was united in marriage to Glen Underwood and to this union were born three children, Milburn, Dora and Eleanor, who together with the husband, one sister and one brother and many other more distant relatives and friends mourn the loss of a mother of the highest type, a wife of responsible sensibilities, a friend to everybody.

For a year deceased has been a brave patient sufferer until

Thru the gates into God's city,
She, redeemed, was ushered in,
Washed white in the blood of Jesus
Cleansed from every stain and sin;
No more sickness, pain or sorrow,
No more night but endless day;
All her toils and trials over,
All her tears were wiped away
At the early age of 32 yr. 10 mo. 5 da.
"No single virtue we could most commend,
Whether the wife, the mother, or the friend;
For she was all in that supreme degree
That as no one previled so all was she
The several parts lay hidden in the piece
The occasion but exerted that or this."

The funeral services were conducted from her late home on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. S. S. Main, pastor of the Christian church. The interment was at Ridgeway cemetery.

Vernet In a Storm at Sea.

Vernet, the celebrated painter of sea pieces, eager in the study of nature, made several long voyages in his younger days in order to observe the various scenes which the changeful elements exhibit. In one of these excursions undertaken merely for the love of the art a most violent gale of wind arose, when Vernet, without attending to the perils with which he was surrounded, desired one of the sailors to lash him fast to some of the rigging. Soon after this request was granted the storm increased, attended with thunder and lightning and with every circumstance that could add to the horror of the scene, and consternation and terror sat on every countenance, but in the young painter every emotion was lost in that of admiration, which so wholly engrossed his attention that he every now and then exclaimed in the most enthusiastic terms, "Good heavens, what a noble scene!"

An Exciting Contest.

Grocer—Good morning, Mr. Popple. How are those eggs I sent you? Popple—Better, thank you. They are gaining strength every minute.

STRENUOUS TIME AHEAD OF SENATE

Important Bills Now Before Upper House.

M'CALL BILL MAY BE PASSED

Proceeding on Theory That It Will Be Necessary to Convene Lawmakers In Special Session President Acting Accordingly.

Washington, Feb. 27.—An unprecedented condition of affairs now obtains in the United States senate. That body is jammed with legislation, certain members, notably Senator Hale of Maine, having blocked the orderly channels of business with a view of preventing a vote at this session on the Canadian trade agreement. Only five days remain of this session. The two houses will adjourn on Saturday, thus terminating the life of the Sixty-First congress.

Among the measures pending in the senate or yet to be acted upon by that body, there are eleven that carry appropriations to keep the wheels of government in motion. The failure of any one of them would make it necessary for the president to call a special session without regard to the fate of Canadian reciprocity. Embraced in some of these bills are provisions that have provoked controversies that have tended to further complicate the situation growing out of the bitter factional fight precipitated by the submission of the Canadian agreement to congress.

President Taft has not yet lost hope that the senate will concur in the action of the house, which declared by an overwhelming vote for Canadian reciprocity as laid down in the McCall bill. He is hopeful that the opposition will reach the conclusion this week that while it may delay, it cannot defeat Canadian reciprocity.

Friends of the administration have pointed out to the opponents of the McCall bill that the measure will be stronger in the new senate than it is in the present body. A number of men who qualify as senators on March 4, have indorsed the Canadian agreement.

The new senators-to-be who have declared for it will in a number of instances take the places of those who are identified with the present opposition. Notable among these is Mr. Johnson, of Maine, who will succeed Senator Hale; Mr. McLean, of Connecticut, who will take the place of Senator Bulkeley, and Mr. Bryan, of Florida, a Democrat, favorable to Canadian reciprocity, who will succeed Senator Taliaferro. Representative Poindexter, of Washington, will transfer his activities to the senate on March 4. He was one of the house Republicans who voted for the McCall bill.

Proceeding on the theory that it will be necessary for him to convene the lawmakers in special session the president is making his arrangements accordingly. If the senate adjourns next Saturday without coming to a vote on the agreement the president will in due season issue a proclamation for a special session to begin in April.

TENLEY WILL SET ASIDE

Counsel for Clark Plans for New Trial of Contest.

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 27.—A jury in the circuit court returned a verdict setting aside the will of Mrs. Sarah A. Tenley. The decision was a victory for Mrs. Edith Tenley Norton, of Chicago, daughter of the testator, who was practically cut off from any share in the estate of her mother.

The contest was brought on the charge that the will was drawn while Mrs. Tenley was unduly influenced by George H. Clark, of Kenosha, former husband of Mrs. Norton. Clark was left $50,000, while Mrs. Norton received only $500. Following the return of the verdict counsel for Clark announced that an appeal for a new trial would be filed immediately.

PANAMA HAS CARNIVAL

During Celebration Business Will Be Practically Suspended.

Panama, Feb. 27.—The carnival this year is being celebrated on a grand scale. The city is gaily decorated, and there is much enthusiasm displayed everywhere. Isabel Espinosm, the carnival queen, arrived on board the "Royal" yacht and was received with all the honor due her rank and popularity.

The coronation ceremonies took place in the evening at the National theater, which was packed.

The king and queen and many other high personages spent Sunday in the country.

RUN ON BERLIN BANK

Crowds at Norden Savings Demanding Deposits.

Placard on the Institution's Doors Says All Accounts Will Be Paid by Christmas.

Berlin, Germany, Feb. 27.—Depositors of the Norden Savings bank, a run on which institution caused much excitement, continue to clamor for their money. A placard on the bank's doors, which were kept shut, informed the depositors that all accounts would be settled by Christmas.

A rush of thousands of women of the poorer classes to draw out their savings was caused by a rumor of extensive losses through speculation.

The managers of the bank, which is one of the largest and most popular of Berlin's private savings institutions, assert that the depositors are secured fully. The incident was without significance on the bourse.

Raw Musk.

Musk in the raw looks a good deal like axle grease and smells worse. The popular notion that the musk of commerce is obtained from the muskrat is a mistake. There is obtained a somewhat similar perfume from the muskrat, but most of the supply comes from the musk deer, a creature that is carefully reared in India for the sake of the secretion. The secretion is shipped in the crude state and is used not only in the manufacture of the liquid perfume sold as musk, but also in very small quantities to give strength and staying power to many perfumes made from the essential oils of flowers. Curiously enough, the blossoms of two native plants have a noticeably musky odor. One is the small yellow blossom of a creeping vine known as the musk plant. Its odor is marked and is counterfeited in the commercial perfume called musk. The other is the bloodroot. The pure white blossom of that early spring plant has a distinct though delicate musky odor. A bean known as the musk bean is a cheap substitute for animal musk.

Fine Language.

In the school year of 1866-7, in the town of Topsfield, Mass., there was at least one committeeman whose command of language was unusual. This is shown by the annual report of the school committee for that season, part of which is quoted here:

"The primary center school was instructed by Miss ——. Under the guidance of this master hand in genuine philosophic simplicity the school presented the same phase of unvarying successful advancement as in former years, from the dissonant mouthings of half fledged juvenile articulation, through the winding passages of syllabicism to the Mount Hope of spelling reading, the same grateful interspersion of gymnastic, vocal, recessive and studious enaction rendering every exercise equally a pastime and romancing the reality of the first efforts in dry study."—Youth's Companion.

An Ancient Die.

In the museum at Athens is shown what is probably the only genuine antique die used for coinage that is now extant. It was found in Egypt in 1904 and consists of bronze, engraved with the owl that was stamped on Athenian tetradrachma pieces, which contained about as much silver as three quarter dollars. The die is of scientific interest on account of the evidence it gives of the skill of the ancients three or four hundred years before Christ in metallurgy. It contains about 22½ per cent of tin and nearly 70 per cent of copper. It is extremely hard, but at the same time possesses a certain malleability, due to the great purity of the copper and tin, which were carefully freed from all traces of lead and zinc to preserve the hardness and from arsenic and antimony to avoid brittleness.—Harper's Weekly.

Making a Locomotive.

A young lady once visited the Baldwin Locomotice works and then told how a locomotive is made.

"You pour," she said, "a lot of sand into a lot of boxes, and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and then you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out and let it cool and pound it, and then you put it in a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together and paint it and put steam in it, and it goes splendidly, and they take it to a drafting room and make a blue print of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one outside, and they pound frightfully, and then they tie it to the other things, and you ought to see it go!"

Napoleon's Peepholes.

A curious Napoleonic relic still preserved in St. Helena is a pair of shutters, each with a peephole. St. Helena was strongly garrisoned in Napoleon's time for divers reasons, and the British soldiers exercised on Deadwood plain, close to Longwood.

Napoleon liked to look at them, but did not like them to look at him; hence those two shutters, one with a hole on a level with his eye while standing and the other with a hole adapted to his vision while seated.

Hard to Deny.

As Miss Hypatia Squaretoes reached the culminating point of her lecture on "Woman's Rights and How to Wield Them" she threw back her head and stood in an attitude of defiance.

"Talk of man!" she cried. "What has man ever done for woman?"

"He's furnished the model she's trying her best to imitate!" boomed a manly voice from the rear of the hall. And then a palpitating silence reigned for nearly a minute.

Found a Rhyme.

A bold poet once tried to overcome the difficulty of finding a rhyme for carpet by the following: "Sweet maid of the inn, 'tis surely no sin to toast such a beautiful barmaid; believe me, my dear, your feet would appear at home on a nobleman's carpet!"—London Mail.

A Fine Haul.

"Back from your fishing trip, I see."

The Cook Ignored.

The prodigal son's father got a lot of applause for killing the fatted calf, but his mother didn't get a line of praise for cooking it.—Galveston News.

The Suicide of Hannibal.

Defeated at Zama, Hannibal fled to the east to avoid falling into the hands of the Romans and found temporary security in the dominions of Mithridates. He incited this monarch to engage in a Roman war, and, his advice as to its conduct being rejected, the war proved unsuccessful, and Mithridates was required as one of the conditions of peace to deliver up Hannibal to his enemies, the Romans. The unfortunate Carthaginian heard of his approaching fate, swallowed the poison which for years he had carried about his person and expired just as the envoys arrived to take him in charge.

Ancient Repartee.

A union of discordant particulars is laughable, as, What is wanting to him except fortune and virtue? Similar to this is friendly admonition by way of giving advice, as when Granius persuaded a bad pleader, who had made himself hoarse with speaking, to drink a cold mixture of honey and wine as soon as he got home. "I shall ruin my voice," said he, "if I do so." "It will be better," said Granius, "than to ruin your clients."—From Cicero's "Oratory."

JEWEL WEARING ART FEW UNDERSTAND

Individual Beauty Must Always Be Taken Into Consideration.

JEWEL wearing is an art which few women understand. To wear the different precious stones successfully the complexion and individual beauty of the wearer should be taken into consideration, and when this is done the effect is always good.

The woman with dull eyes should shun diamond earrings, for these will detract from whatever brightness the eyes may have. So, also, the sad, pale woman should not select pearls, for they will only accentuate her paleness.

Although more popular than almost any other stone there are but few women who can really wear diamonds to advantage. There are brunettes who can wear them in their ears and appear well; also a pale blonde, but the average woman should wear her diamonds elsewhere.

Turquoises, also, are difficult to wear well. The clear skinned baby face with eyes of shining blue looks well with turquoises near it, a string of turquoises around the neck or pendants in the ears, but the black-eyed woman should not attempt to wear them.

Topazes and other yellow stones are for those who dare not wear the more brilliant jewels. And the beauty of a creamy complexion with a faint rose in the cheeks is very much heightened by the wearing of these stones. The possessor of a creamy complexion with just a touch of olive in it will look lovely with earrings of rubies, also the topaz will enhance this style of beauty which pearls would mar.

Heart and Home Talks.

WHEN we were children, it used to be: "Let's play Indian," or, "Let's play bear," or, "Let's play pirates." "Let's play," was a most familiar and enticing expression.

But when we grew up, "Let's play" became a part of the dead languages. And yet if some of the things we undertake to do as grown-ups could be undertaken in the "Let's play" spirit, what better results we would accomplish and how much more enjoyment we would get out of the undertaking!

Many a married couple, for instance, could say "Let's play a home drama of self-improvement."

It would accomplish the same purpose as nagging, or scolding, or twitting about unpleasant habits. But how much pleasanter it would be!

After marriage many a husband or wife starts in to reform the other. In fact, family life generally is looked upon by some as conferring the privilege of telling others of the family their faults.

Kindly Criticism Is Really Helpful.

Things are said to each other by husbands and wives, brothers and sisters, that would never be said even to the most intimate friends.

Relationship to some seems to confer the right to criticize.

Criticism is helpful. There's no doubt about that. Many a person has been told by some member of the family of a fault of which he was blissfully unconscious. He is really thankful to know it and he bends himself to the task of correcting it.

But the manner of telling of faults counts much. And here, if one could just get the spirit of "Let's play," it would be a good thing.

"Let's play," when one was a child, was always serious business. One was terribly in earnest about being a pirate, or an Indian, or a bear. But one was happy and jolly about it, and kindly to the pirates or Indians, or bears, or his band or tribe or family, so to speak.

Real Spirit of Home Criticism.

And that really should be the spirit of this home criticism. It should not be spit out in anger, or given with acrimony, but with gentleness, love, even jollity.

The single purpose of helping the other toward greater perfection should be so apparent that no offense could be taken.

A little home drama of self-improvement might be played in many a family to the enjoyment and benefit of every member.

It could be a real jolly performance, and yet at its conclusion the members of the family be quite different persons, so far as speech, manners and dress were concerned, from what they were before the curtain went up. And such a method would leave no hurt feelings in its wake.

Popular Fabrics.

Poplins, cashmeres and henriettas are popular materials for dressy costumes. Velvets and velveteens, together with a wide variety of transparent fabrics, are used in conjunction with satin messaline or brocaded silk underbodies.

In some towns the men are always telling what others should do for the town, but do nothing themselves—(Atchison (Kan.) Globe.)

Bad Luck.

"George, mother writes that she is coming to spend the holidays with us."

"How'd that happen, did you break a mirror?"—Houston Post.

The Rossel Islanders in New Guinea hold the number 7 in great awe. A native policeman when asked what the numerals in the local dialect were "gave them readily enough, but hesitated at the number 7."

When woman has reached that stage of wealth and artistic development where she can afford bow-legged furniture, all the recognition her poor kin give is the claim that she got it to match her husband.

Everytime a man is caught doing something he shouldn't, all trusting wives double their vigilance.

No one on earth but a widow can shed tears with one eye, and look around with the other.

It is a pretty safe bet that the man who likes to go visiting wore curls when he was young.

AMUSEMENTS

Realism in stage effects is the constant aim of theatrical producers, and the latest innovation is the use of the phonograph in securing realism in their productions. The aid of the phonograph was sought in the case of Eugene Walter's stirring and virile drama of the Canadian Hudson Bay country, "THE WOLF," it being used to reproduce the howling of a pack of wolves, thus carrying the effect called for in the last act of "THE WOLF." The last act of "THE WOLF" is laid at the portage of the Little Bear River, and the time of day is just after sun-down. The stage is darkened and the figures of actors move ghost like across the scene, the dialogue being spoken to the accompaniment of the swish of the waters of the river as they wash up against the banks, and in the distance one hears the howling and mournful crying of a pack of timber wolves crossing the range of hills in the background. To better realize the possibilities of the scene, Mr. Walter cast around for some means of producing the howling of the wolf pack than was possible by the ordinary mechanical means used for such purposes, and finally got in touch with Director Hornaday of the New York Bronx Zoo, who arranged that a phonograph record be made of the howling of the pack of gray timber wolves that made the Zoological Gardens their permanent abode. Accordingly the experiment was tried, and hereafter the audience witnessing "THE WOLF" will have the satisfaction of knowing that the atmosphere of the Canadian back woods is really something more than mechanical, and that the blood curdling howls emanate from the throats of real wolves, transported to the stage via the record of the talking machine. The success of this experiment in attaining realism means that other managers will now seek the same means in staging their pieces when the exigencies of the piece demand the voices of real animals, thus doing away with the aid of "traps" in the orchestra or the off-stage assistance of some obliging stage-hand, who up to this time have been the means of producing the effects desired.

"THE WOLF" will be presented at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY MARCH 8th. with all its wealth of special scenery and a first class company. The same company that played at the Auditorium, Toledo Xmas. day.

D. T. & I.

To be Reorganized at Once.

At a conference held in Judge Swans Chambers in Detroit on Monday, it was made clear that the D. T. & I. must reorganize at once. If something is not done at once to improve the road and to pay the employees steps would be taken to compel the road to discharge its public duties. Judge Swan allowed 45 days for the presentation of plans for reorganization by some one or all of the interests involved.

The Judge was willing to issue $500,000 receivers certificates to discharge the pay roll, bridges purchase new cars and do anything reasonable to make the road safe and remunerative.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS IN PROSPEROUS CONDITION

THE HISTORY OF THE LODGE FROM ITS ORGANIZATION DECEMBER 11, 1895 WITH 26 CHARTER MEMBERS TO PRESENT TIME WITH A MEMBERSHIP OF 225

The K. of P. lodge is among the strongest of the many lodges in the United States and has a large membership. It is strictly a benevolent institution and in many lodges has an insurance plan for those who wish to carry it. Its social life is a most pleasing feature and gives an added zest to their meetings.

Tecumseh Lodge No. 190 ranks among the best in the state and is in a most prosperous condition. They cultivate the social life and through the winter months have many social gatherings with the Pythian Sisters and their friends. They hold their meetings in the old Union Hall and have just been fitting up a fine dining room and kitchen on the floor below where they can entertain their guests in fine style. In order to fill their treasury they have given suppers, plays, dances and other entertainments, the proceeds all used for the benefit of their members.

The relief committee of the lodge have done much good among the sick and needy and a stated sum is always given to the family at the death of a Sir Knight as a funeral benefit. It is an order of which every member is proud and each one strives to keep its record up to the highest standard.

The Officers of the Lodge at the present time:

In 1895 through the efforts of Jas. T. McKinney, who wrote to Deputy Grand Chancelor Clisby and secured the necessary papers and co-operating with other, a new lodge was instituted on Dec. 11 of that year, with 26 charter members, as follows—C. A WOMAN NOMINATED FOR SCHOOL COMMISSIONER BY DEMOCRATES

At the County Convention of the democrats at the Court House in Adrian Saturday last. Mrs. Kate Baker-Knight recieved the nomination for school commissioner to run against M. W. Hensel. Mrs. Knight is willing to make the run. The nomination comes as a complete suprise and puts a peculiar phase on the political situation.

Mrs. Knight is a daughter of Cass Baker who is well known in Lenawee County as a fine farmer, and was a school teacher before her marriage.

J. W. Helme made the nomination which was unanimiously accepted. Evidently the democrats are following the example set by the Eaton Co. democrats who at the last election put Mrs. Cynthia Green up for school commissioner. In a county that usually goes 1,500 majority for the Republicans she was elected by a majority of 928 which was a surprise to all the politicians.

This year the Redublicans pay her the compliment of leaving the place vacant on their ticket.

Peoples' Caucus

Notice is hereby given that the Electors of the Village of Tecumseh, will meet in caucus on Friday evening March 3, 1911, at 7:30 o'clock P. M., at the Council Building in said village of Tecumseh to put in Nomination village officers, to be supported for election, at the village election on Monday, March 13, 1911.

By Order of Committee.

WOMAN VERSUS MAN

Men are always making fun of Women's Clubs and the many plans made by them. But it is not alone women who do all the foolish things judging by the different states.

What woman ever thought of such an absurd idea of convicting a surgeon of malpractice if on performing an operation for appendecitis the apendix is found in a healthy condition such is purport of a bill now about to be introduced in Colorado.

In NewMexico the widowers and bachelors are to be taxed. In Texas they are considering a proposition to put you in jail if you use bad langauge to the telephone receiver. A man in Missouri is trying to take revenge on the station agents who have not always answered all his questions by proposing a law to fine them $25 to $50 for any offence in that direction. And the state of Washington is talking to make the voting precincts, so very pretty with flowers easy chairs and polite attendants for the woman voter.

Did ever woman think of such absurdities?

WRONG IMPRESSION.

Some people think that Powdr Paint wets through. I have $50, that says it will not, challenge open to any one.

Testimonies from two parties one of 8 years and the other of 6 years that claim perfect satisfaction. Why pay $1 or more for oil when you can get Powdr Paint for 12c that will cover from 50 to 150 square feet, a saving of 75 per cent on paint bill.

We rely on it for croup and for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble." So do thousands of others. So may you. Briton's Afternoon Tea

Time was, not so very long ago, when a scornful, and, it may be, unenlightened, American public made good-humored sport of the Briton's "afternoon tea."

"Tea" in this country was a formality of only occasional occurrence. "A tea" was an affair of severe social significance. It was a little like a reception. It was a function.

It had to be prepared for, and literally fussed over. One sent out invitations. It was as different as anything could be from the easy 5 o'clock tea of English families.

And most markedly a change is coming over the spirit of our dream as regards afternoon tea.

We are "having tea," too. Men and women both, we are following an example that we once lightly scorned.

In the majority of fashionable families this winter tea is served at 5 o'clock. Callers drop in and have tea. Relatives stop to chat, and have tea. The men of the house join the little group in the drawing room, and have tea. In quite the English fashion, we all of us drink tea in the afternoon, and talk with our hostess as we watch her make strange passes with a tea-ball, and pour steaming amber-colored liquid into fascinating little cups.

In big houses and tiny two-room apartments, on wide country-place verandas and in cosy living rooms, women who keep house and women who board, women who are very rich and women whose incomes are by no means large, are yielding to the pretty habit of a new hospitality.

Instead of being in itself a formality, the custom of serving afternoon tea has made the stiff "call" of a few years ago a far less formal matter, far more a friendly affair.

Basta Embroidery Now In Favor for Cushions

There is to be seen nowadays a striking revival of basta embroidery, that many-colored work on heavy canvas somewhat resembling the old tapestries, and which may be utilized for everything, from an arm chair to a pincushion.

Usually the figures are geometrical ones in long straight stitches giving a somewhat stiff and formal effect. But variety is now being introduced by means of quaint figure subjects reproduced in the primitive delineation of costumes and manners inspired by the ancient art. In such instances the faces are worked out in the beady tent stitch and the long, typical stitch is carried slantwise to form tapestry panels sets of chair backs and seats.

The coarse canvas foundation used originally in this rustic embroidery had invariably to be wholly covered with the plain stitch mostly in the natural sandy or khaki shade of the basta strands; hence the work could be easily utilized for rugs, mats cushions, screen panels and bath slippers.

Modern workers in the quest of light conceits have managed, however, to dispense with the heavy background by employing a close fancy canvas in delicate art tints which stands as a pretty foundation in which are well-defined motifs in the rainbow tints and the stitch peculiar to this Dutch work.

Many a young couple agree to marry who never agree about anything afterward.

When you start to do a thing don't pat yourself on the back. The world is full of starters.

There are times when every man makes a fool of himself, but some few of us get over it.

You can generally tell that a man is a big gun from the way he doesn't shoot off his mouth.

The dignity of labor may be all right, but lots of men are not hankering after dignity.

The Wilson farm west of Clinton, after seventy-eight years of ownership has been puschased by Herman Halladay, whose farm it joins. This land was taken up from the government by James Wilson in 1833. The farm was handed down to his sons George W. and Charles, from them to the farmer's son, Thomas Jefferson Wilson. His death occured on April 12, 1878, his wife and one son surviving him. Then the farm passed on to George Smith Wilson, its last owner. This is the only farm hereabouts for so many years in one family. The old homestead, a hewed log house, still stands but has been sided, giving it a more modern appearance.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. P. Wisher's of Sycamore, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Culler's of 315 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R.500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

What To Do —FOR— Sickly Children

Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try your delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—MRS. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

Science and the Future.

Prof. Edward L. Nichols, in his address as retiring president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, used these suggestive sentences: "With the development of the doctrine of energy has come the conviction of an end of the world, inevitable, as the death of the inevitable. In neither case, however, is longevity to be regarded as necessarily beyond human control." Professor Nichols then went on to say that biologists are beginning to intimate the possibility, remote but thinkable, of a considerable extension of the term of bodily life, and that it is equally conceivable that the human race may so modify and control conditions as greatly to prolong its career. The means to this latter end, he indicated, are the checking of wastefulness affecting animals, the soil, the forests and the streams; the solution of the problem presented by the gradual exhaustion of nature's supplies of coal and petroleum; and the search for ways to utilize, in the form of mechanical energy, the radiation of the sun.

"A Sound Box."

Take an ordinary rubber band and stretch it between the thumb and forefinger of your left hand. If you pick it with the fingers of the right hand and let go suddenly, it will make a sound which you can hear distinctly enough yourself, but which will not be audible to any one a few feet away. But if you were to fasten the elastic, with a pin at each end, to an empty wooden box,—only not so as to touch the wood,—and then twang it, the sound would be much louder than before. That box is the "sound-box," or "sound-board," and all stringed instruments have one, in some shape or other.—From "From the Drum of the Savage to the Great Orchestra" in the St. Nicholas.

Playgrounds In Boston.

Boston women established the first playground in 1902. Last year there were eight, and nearly $2,000 was expended, or about $1 for each child, a very cheap price for the amount of good obtained. The Playground league is the name of the society of the playground boys themselves, who wear buttons and discipline all bad boys thus making the government easy enough for those in charge. Not the least important result of the playgrounds in that city is said to be that involved in the self-government.

When Tecumseh Citizens Show the Certain Way Out

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most postive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says

Mrs Jeanett Teachout, W. Oneida Street, Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I again take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to persons afflicted with kidney trouble Last fall my kidneys became disordered and I suffered from pains in the small of my back. If I stooped, sharp twinges seized me and for a few seconds I was unable to straighten. Too frequent passages of the kidney secretions also annoyed me greatly and the doctor was unable to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly spoken of that I procured a box and began their use I was so promptly relieved that I continued taking the medicine until my trouble disappeared."

Typist and Trifler

"I want to know," said the Trifler, "I just want to know how long he is going to be—that's all."

He seated himself comfortably as he spoke—that is to say, as comfortably as the limitations of office furniture permitted—in the only arm chair in the room, and, crossing his legs, directed a gracious smile at the typist, who sat with the fingers of one dainty hand poised impatiently over the keys of the typewriter at the other side of the table which divided them.

"I am sorry I cannot tell you," replied the typist, gazing pointedly at a heap of unanswered letters before her. "I do not know how long Mr. Calthrop will be exactly."

"Ah," observed the Trifler in a meditative tone, "there are so very few things—are there not?—so very few things in the world that anybody does seem to know 'exactly.' Perhaps it has never struck you how difficult it is to acquire exact knowledge of almost anything?"

"No," said the Typist, "it never has."

"I thought it probably hadn't," admitted the Trifler affably. "Yet, take quite a common illustration. If you ask a passerby the time, he will either tell you off-hand, or he will glance at his watch—if he is a polite person—and tell you that it is about half-past three, say, or twenty minutes to six—as the case may be—whereas, in point of fact, it never is within five minutes of the time he asserts. His watch is wrong, or he hasn't taken the trouble to count the divisons on the dial between each five minutes. What a wonderful thing that typewriter of yours is!"

"This typewriter!" She looked up at him with mild surprise. "Why, it is quite an ordinary one."

"I suppose so," agreed the Trifler, a little regretfully. "And you really can write with it?"

"Well, I should not be here if I could not," retorted the Typist, "should I?"

"I don't know," said the Trifler. "I'm here, and I can't."

"Oh, that's quite different. Besides—" she glanced at him defiantly—"what are you here for?"

"For the matter of that," replied the Trifler, meeting her glance with unruffled composure, "what are you here for?"

The Typist colored violently, and her eyes dropped again to the pile of letters in front of her.

"I think that is rather an impertinent question," she said in a low tone.

The Trifler gave an audible sigh.

"It seemed to me rather a pertinent one," he remarked, in a disappointed voice. "Of course, you know what I'm here for?"

"To see Mr. Calthrop—you told me. But he's not in—I told you."

"It doesn't matter at all," rejoined the Trifler airily. "I'll wait. I have nothing to do for the next hour or so, and this is—er"—he gazed round the room with expansive appreciation—"an extraordinarily comfortably office."

"Hadn't you—better go?" asked the Typist in a low tone.

"Go! Before seeing Calthrop? Why, he would never forgive me," protested the Trifler. "I couldn't really dream of going yet. Besides—"

"I don't see that there is any 'besides' to keep you here," said the Typist.

"They say love is blind," murmured the Trifler, with an air of philosophic abstraction.

"I don't understand you!" said the Typist, drawing herself up.

"I am not in the least surprised at that,' said the Trifler amiably. "Very few people do. It has long been my fate to be misunderstood. Yet I hoped"—he paused and looked at the Typist a little uneasily. "I hoped," he repeated—by-the-bye, there is no harm in hoping, is there?" he broke off to inquire.

"None that I am aware of," she replied, with her chin in the air.

"Well, then, I hoped you did," he explained in italics.

"Hoped—I—did?" She affected an admirable bewilderment. "Hoped I did what?"

The Trifler spread out his hands with a gentle deprecating gesture.

"You compel me to be explicit," he expostulated. "It's so much less embarrassing to approach these—er—preliminaries in the elliptical manner. Except," he added as an after thought, "when you have a typewriter handy."

"I have no wish to compel you to be anything," retorted the Typist. "And it is quite time I returned to my work; so if you will kindly allow me, Mr. Clavering—" She made him a little ironical bow, and was in the act of sweeping past when the Trifler, with incredible dexterity, caught her by the wrists and drew her back sideways so that she faced him involuntarily.

"How dare you?" cried the Typist, struggling to free herself.

"I am a man of simply extraordinary courage," he explained. Now, look here—look at me—look me straight in the eyes! You know it—and you have known it, you obstinate, willful girl, for months past! I love you. Oh, yes, I love you—there isn't the least mistake about that whatever. But what I want to know is whether you love me? And I have come here today for the purpose of finding out. And—and I believe"—he gave a loud chuckle—"believe I have found out! Tell me—have I?"

"Oh, let me go! I don't know what you have found out, or what you haven't!" pleaded the Typist, her cloak of dignity falling suddenly from her and leaving her defenceless and exposed to the arrows of the one great enemy whom never girl vanquished yet. "Let me go—please!"

"I thought so," murmured the Trifler. "You do."

"I don't," she protested.

"Then I can't let you go till you do," he remarked judicially. "I'm very sorry."

"Oh—well, then, if you must—if you insist—"

"I insist," said the Trifler firmly.

"Well, then, you—you have."

"You mean—you do?" he inquired.

"It's—it's the same thing isn't it?" faltered the Typist.

"Practically," he admitted, after an instant's reflection. "The proposition therefore stands thus: I love you—you love me. Ergo, we love each other. The proposition, by a logical sequence of ideas becomes converted into a proposal. Which you accept."

"I didn't say so," answered the Typist.

"Say so now, then," directed the Trifler.

"What do you want me to do?" she asked, temporizing.

"I want you to marry me. I hope you don't mind marrying me? It is, I believe, the usual thing under the circumstances."

"Marry you!" She gave a low little laugh. "But you know I am only a poor Typist, and you—you are—what are you, I wonder?" She paused to reflect.

"My friends," he replied, "have most unwarrantably got into the habit of calling me a Trifler. A man's friends are rarely distinguished for an exaggerated courtesy in their estimates of him. My enemies"—he considered an instant—"well, I cannot at the moment recollect that I have any enemies. In actual fact, I am an individual of extreme earnestness and with an absorbing passion for acquiring knowledge—and other things; you among them. Since you left home a week or two ago, and decided to exist independently in a small though luxuriously suite of apartments of your own, you see I could not very well, being a young and giddy bachelor, call upon you, being a young and bewilderingly lovely spinster, at your own private residence, without running some risk of offending the proprieties. And so I was obliged, you understand, to come here to this office in order to—well, to find out what I wanted."

"You said you—you came to see Mr. Calthrop!" retorted the Typist a little resentfully.

"I shall see him—later," replied the Trifler, with an airy gesture. "The fact is, I have already seen him. Calthrop is a pretty intimate friend of mine, and he arranged to give me a clear hour alone with you in the office this morning; he won't be back for"—the Trifler carefully consulted his watch—"for another ten minutes at least."

"Oh!" exclaimed the Typist, "you—you wicked fraud! Then you actually had the audacity to arrange it all with Mr. Calthrop beforehand?"

The Trifler smiled with infinite complacency as he folded the Typist closer into his frock coat.

"Actually!" he replied. — Emeric Hulme-Beaman in the London Sketch.

"Incognito"

"The meshes of matrimony seem to be closing about me," thought Lady Julie, as she finished the letter she had been reading. "Poor Aunt Caroline! She aims to be diplomatic, but it is written between every line that the sole object of her house party is for me to hear, heed and wed the fabulously rich American. I wonder why it is Americans are always rich. What a novelty a poor American would be!"

Further pondering on this subject was prevented by the entrance of Lady Julie's elder sister, who presided over the household.

"I suppose you and papa leave directions after I take my train?" she asked.

"Papa will, but my plans are changed. Aunt is making another desperate effort to marry me off, and I am to go to Oak Wilds in a week. In the meantime I will stay with Cousin Dorothy."

When Lady Julie had seen her father and sister depart on their respective trains, she felt a delicious sense of elation at her unwonted freedom.

"I am so tired of Lady Julie!" she thought. "How I would like to be some one else for a week—some poor, obscure, untitled person. I believe I will—yes, I will do it!"

The next morning Lady Julie with simple articles of attire packed in a steamer trunk drove to the station. When the coachman had driven away she took a cab and went to an address she had secured from the Times. Here she engaged a sitting room front with a bedroom back, and proceeded to unpack her belongings. She paid a week's rent in advance to the voluble landlady, who, volunteered full information regarding her lodgers.

"Those hupstairs har all clerks, but the sitting room across the 'all is let to han Hamerican. 'E 'as just arrived. I will say for the Hamericans, they don't 'aggle."

"Don't they?" asked Lady Julie, interestedly.

The next morning Mrs. Todds, her landlady, made a suggestion.

"Being has 'ow you har a stranger, miss, and the Hamerican being here to see the sights, hit would be nice for you to get acquainted. Hafter breakfast, if you say so, Hi will introduce you."

Lady Julie reflected.

"Very well, Mrs. Todd, I should be pleased to meet your first floor front."

Accordingly Mrs. Todd ushered in a good-looking youth, well-tailored and well set up.

"You are from the State of Misery, Mrs. Todd informs me," began Lady Julie, when the landlady had left the room.

He stared at her in wonder, and then broke into a clear, ringing, infectious laugh.

"The State of Missouri," he corrected.

"I must confess," said Lady Julie, smiling, "that even 'Missouri' conveys nothing to my unenlightened mind."

"Never heard of Missouri!" he exclaimed aghast. "But you have surely heard of St. Louis!"

"Oh, St. Louis!" she cried with unfeigned interest. "Yes, I've heard of St. Louis," recalling the place mentioned in her aunt's letter as the home of the rich American. "But is this your first visit to London?"

"Yes; I remain here for a week. Then I am going to a house party at some friends in the country," he replied.

A sudden inspiration came to Lady Julie, and her dark eyes shone with interest and mischief.

"I, too, am here for a week, and then I go to the country. I think if you are to see the sights here, you should begin with the zoo. I think that is where tourists begin."

"Will you accompany me?" he asked, eagerly. "Will you be my tourist guide for the week?"

"Yes," she replied with dancing eyes.

So they went to the zoo in a 'bus, and Lady Julie, viewing the polar bear, the elephants and the monkey house, felt like Alice in Wonderland. The next day was spent in the park, and successive days found them at the museum, library, cathedral, Westminster and numerous river excursions. It pleased and flattered Halden that his fair companion always turned the conversation to St. Louis and the United States.

"Miss Brent," he said, earnestly, as he came into her sitting room for his farewell call, "will you not relent and tell me where you go to-morrow?"

"No, Mr. Halden. You must be content with the assurance that you will see me within a short time, and when next we meet, should it be in the presence of others, do not allude to this week, or to the fact that we have met before."

A cloud of doubt came into his frank eyes.

"Can you not trust me?" she asked, softly. "I will explain—when I can."

"I trust you entirely; and, Miss Brent—Julie—, may I tell you what this week has been to me?"

"Wait!" she advised, "until we meet again. Then you have my permission to do so."

The next day she returned home and made all her preparations for her visit with a joyous expectancy.

"You are looking your best, Julie," said her aunt, when she beheld the shining eyes and happy glow of the youthful countenance.

Later, with beating heart, Lady Julie entered the library. Her aunt presented her guest. As Lady Julie raised her eyes to his, a pang of disappointment went through her. This was not Jim Halden, the man she had expected to meet. At dinner she rallied from the shock. "At any rate they are from the same city," she thought. "They may know each other."

"You are from the state of Missouri, Mr. Booth?" she asked.

"How clever Julie is!" thought her aunt, approvingly.

"Yes, from St. Louis," he replied.

"Naturally. Every one from Missouri claims St. Louis."

"What do you know of St. Louis?" he asked, laughing.

"A great deal," she replied, and launched into a description of his home city that delighted him and raised high hopes in Aunt Caroline.

"I met a man from there once," she admitted.

"What is his name?" he asked, interestedly.

"Jim Halden. Do you know him?"

"Indeed, I do! The best fellow living. He is visiting not 10 miles from here."

"Aunt Caroline," said Lady Julie that night, "Mr. Booth has a friend from St. Louis visiting the Sheffields. I think he would like to have him here for a few days."

"Of course," replied her aunt, heartily. "I'll write at once."

. . . .

"I don't see," said Halden, gravely, as he and Lady Julie were in the rose garden on the night of his arrival, "how you could foresee my presence here when you promised to meet me again."

"Why, aunt wrote me to come to this party to meet a man from St. Louis. She failed to mention his name. I had a whim to see what life in lodgings was like. When I met you I jumped to the conclusion that you were the man aunt was expecting. You can imagine my discomfiture when I saw Mr. Booth."

Halden was silent for a moment.

"Oh, yes; aunt dwelt on that fact at length when she wrote."

"I am not," he continued. "I have only a modest income. I learned from Mrs. Todd that you were an orphan in modern circumstances, and I had hopes of winning your love and giving you a home. Now it's all changed. I see your aunt's plans, and that you were only enjoying a week's respite."

He turned and walked away. He had gone but a few steps, when her voice rang out clearly:

"Jim!"

He was at her side.

"Mr. Booth told me you were—not rich, and—I asked aunt to invite you here."

"Julie!"

"I lived a whole week without a maid," she said, when they were making future plans, "and I learned to buy the cloth."

Gondolas and Windmills Going.

As the gondolas of Venice have been supplanted by the electric launch, so the equally picturesque windmills of Holland are falling in the face of the march of modern invention. In Venice the few gondolas that are seen on the waters of the city are maintained merely to answer a demand on the part of tourists who think a visit to that city is incomplete without a ride in one of these ancient crafts propelled by a gayly-clad gondolier. They have long since been abandoned by the natives, who make use of modern launches.

And now the word comes from Holland that gas engine pumping plants are taking the place of the historic windmills. As the latter are principally used for the purpose of pumping water out of drain ditches, which must be done regularly in order to keep the fields and meadows dry, their uncertainty for this work is now recognized, and gas motors are gradually being introduced. Like the Venetians, the thrifty Dutchmen will probably maintain windmills enough to offer attractions for the artists and tourists who flock there from all parts of the world in search of novel sights. Indeed, the statement has been made that the natives of this section have long been inclined to depart from their old-time style of apparel, but they realize that it is a drawing card for travelers, and for this reason they cling tenaciously to the baggy breeches and voluminous skirts which the men and women of that country have affected for centuries.

A School Boy on Domestic Economy.

My idea of a good income and how to spend it is to get forty-four shillings a week from every male in the house if he was working, and in spending it I should get a book and put all the provisions I had in the house in it and the cost of them. I should first see that I and our family would get their stomachs full every meal time, so I should buy meat that would last. Every holiday time we should go for a day or two to a seaside resort. For a family of good eaters it takes a lot of bread, especially if you do not bake, and shop bread takes a lot of butter. But they should have it. I would also buy plenty of coal, with good shoes and stockings; also I would buy two beds to sleep on at night.

Gladstone's Four Great Masters.

The figure of Aristotle by the eminent sculptor, G. Walker, has recently been placed in the niche prepared for it outside the south wall of the residence. It is the gift of Dean Lincoln and Mrs. Wickham. The four niches outside St. Deiniols are intended for the figures of those four great men who were regarded by Mr. Gladstone as his chief masters—Aristotle, St. Augustine, Dante and Bishop Butler. Three of them are now in position, all of them the work of Mr. Walker. It only remains for that of Bishop Butler to be given to complete the set.

The principal use that the lazy man has for his legs is to aid him in dodging work.

HILLES IS TAFT'S NEW SECRETARY

Norton Makes Announcement At Informal Luncheon.

SCRIPTURAL ADVICE OFFERED

A Virginia Lady Cites New Secretary to the Bible and Norton Is Facetiously Denominated the Goat.

Washington, March 6.—Formal announcement that Charles D. Hilles, at present assistant secretary of the treasury, will be the next secretary to the president, was made at a luncheon given here by Charles D. Norton, the retiring secretary, to Mr. Hilles and newspaper friends. Mr. Norton will leave the White House some time this month and on April 5 will become vice president of the First National Bank of New York.

The luncheon was given by Mr. Norton at his home here. President Taft looking cheerful and happy over the finish of a session that has been trying came in to shake the hand of his new secretary and of the newspaper correspondents.

In the course of the luncheon, Mr. Hilles created a good deal of amusement by reading a letter which he received several days ago from a woman in Virginia. The writer said:

"One good turn deserves another, and in order to obtain the consolations of philosophy please allow me to suggest that after you have taken the oath of office and have been introduced to your duties that you quietly read and ponder. Leviticus chapter, 20th to 22nd verses. If you have difficulty in finding such a book as the Bible around the White House possibly one could be secured for you at the congressional library, where one copy at least must be filed to comply with the copyright law. You will have no difficulty in securing the use of this one copy, for no congressman ever calls for the book."

Here are the verses that Mr. Hilles found in Leviticus and the reading of them interested the president and Secretary Norton as they had Mr. Hilles:

"And when he hath made an end of reconciling the Holy place and the tabernacle or congregation and the altar he shall bring the live goat.

"And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness.

"And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited; and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness."

The fun at Secretary Norton's expense was increased when somebody recalled that he had been "let go" into the "wilderness of Wall street."

In making the formal announcement that Mr. Hilles would become the next secretary to the president it was said that he had agreed to take the post only after he arranged with Edmund Dwight, of New York, general agent for the Employes' Liability Assurance company of London, to cancel a contract entered into with Mr. Dwight months ago to go with that concern.

Mr. Dwight, it was explained, came to Washington by invitation on Feb. 20 and after a conference with President Taft and with the assent of Mr. Hilles agreed that the contract should be nullified.

PARAGUAY IN REVOLT.

American Minister Cables De- To Wasaington.

Belief Is Prevalent That the Insurrection Will Overthrow the Jara Government.

Washington, March 6.—An inserrection has developed against the Jara government in northern and southeastern Paraguay. Edwin V. Morgan, American minister to that country, advised the state department by cable that the city of Conception is in the hands of the rebels. The Argentine government ha staken a hand in the revolution by demanding the return of three of the Mihanovich river boats which were seized on Feb. 25 last by Jara's orders. The Argentine minister at Ascuncion, who has been on leave of absence is returning to his post on board a gunboat.

Mr. Morgan also reports that the insurrectionists are in control of the country half way from Conception to Ascuncion and have taken possession also of the south end of the railroad.

Three thousand government troops, he added, have beent sent to oppose the revolutionist. Traffic has been suspended on the railroad. An expedition has started north, consisting of five vessels, including three vessels under the Argentine flag, which have been compelled to enter the service of the Paraguayan government. The belief is that the revolution will be successful in overthrowing the Jara government.

EDDY ESTATE INVOLVED

George W. Baker, Nephew, Intervenes in Pending Suit.

Supports Contention of Glover and Foster-Eddy, but Denies Their Equity in Estate.

Concord, N. H., March 6.—George W. Baker, of this city, a nephew of Mary Baker Eddy, filed a motion to intervene in the suit in the superior court for Merrimack county for the possession of the fortune left by the founder of the Christian Science church.

No attempt is made to question the capacity of Mrs. Eddy to make a valid will, but on the contrary all the bequests except that of the residue of the estate to the mother church in Boston are admitted to be effective. It is claimed that this latter gift is invalid under the laws of New Hampshire, which limits the amount which may be given by will to any one church to such a sum as will yield an income not in excess of $5,000.

So far the contention is the same as that of George W. Glover and Dr. E. J. Foster-Eddy, the son and adopted son of Mrs. Eddy, in their bill in equity already filed in the court here.

Baker contends, however, that such being the case the residue cannot legally be claimed by Glover and Foster-Eddy as they had previous to the death of Mrs. Eddy relinquished all their claims to her estate by a family settlement which they entered into. As the next of kin after these two, he contends that he should now take the entire estate. Baker is a printer and has worked in almost every city of any size in New England.

VAULT RESISTS YEGGMEN

Big Roll Secure and Small Booty Is Their Reward.

Elwood, Ind., March 6.—The Bank of Frankton, five miles southeast of here, was robbed of $150. The combination was worked to the outer doors of the safe.

Parties returning home from this city saw two men leave the village, going east. They are thought to be a part of the gang that operated here a year ago and robbed the Lake Erie depot. The yeggmen left before securing the big roll, which was in the inside vault.

Retired Naval Officer Falls from Window in New York Sanatorium.

New York, March 6.—Major Walter A. Thurston, U. S. A., retired, fell from the second story window of a sanatorium on Lexington avenue, where he had been undergoing treatment.

He was found unconscious in the house yard, suffering from a fractured rib and possibly internal injuries. At the hospital to which he was taken his hurts were considered serious, but not necessarily fatal.

BAILEY RESIGNS SEAT IN SENATE

Peeved at Action of Democratic Vote on Arizona.

REFUSES COLLEAGUES' APPEAL

When Vice President Sherman Declines to Accept Senator Bailey's Resignation He Wires It to Texas Governor.

Washington, March 6.—Senator Bailey of Texas has resigned from the senate. He made no public explanation of reasons for his action.

Mr. Bailey first presented the resignation to Vice President Sherman, who refused to accept it. Then he telegraphed it to Governor Colquit of Texas. Mr. Bailey's term would not have expired before March 3, 1913.

Senator Bailey confirmed the report that he had tendered his resignation but refused to give to the press reasons for his action. In conversation with fellow senators, however, he based his reasons upon the vote cast by Democratic senators in favor of the approval of the constitution of Arizona, which, he said, was so contrary to his ideas of government that he did not believe he would be justified in continuing his services with senators who as members of his own party would take the position that had been taken in the vote on that proposition.

Immediately after the close of the session, Senator Bailey conferred for several minutes with his Democratic colleagues, but resisted all appeals to reconsider. He was then summoned by Vice President Sherman, with whom he went into consultation.

Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey was serving his second term as United States senator. He served five terms in the house of representatives and was chosen United States senator Jan. 23, 1901, to succeed Horace Chilton. He was re-elected in 1907.

CLERGYS' GIFT TO POPE

Cardinal Gibbons to Propose Plan to Increase Funds.

Contributions Are Not to Be Imposed but Voluntary and to Be Paid Annually.

New York, March 6.—At the next meeting of the archbishops of the United States Cardinal Gibbons will bring to their attention the plan which has already met with wide approval in Roman Catholic ecclesiastical circles of a yearly contribution to the pope by the clergy of this country. This proposed gift is not in any way connected with the Peters pence collection taken up yearly in the churches which concerns the laity alone, but is to be made by the priests and bishops.

The proposed gift is to come wholly from the clergy and is to be a voluntary contribution and not an imposed tax. Christmas has been discussed as a suitable time and members of the local clergy believe that the plan best be conducted along diocesan lines and the offering sent to a central bureau for transmission to the Holy See.

Cardinal Gibbons has approved the plan and several of the dignitaries of the Catholic church have already expressed their commendation.

BUILDING TRADES ORDERS STRIKE

This Action Marks Another Phase of the Jurisdictional Warfare Against Steam and Gasfitters.

Chicago, March 6.—A strike of all building trade workmen affiliated with the Chicago Building Trades Council has been called to take effect this morning.

The strike will affect all building operations throughout the city where steamfitters who are members of the International association are employed and marks another phase of the jurisdictional warware of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers against the Chicago Steamfitters' union.

President Alpine, of the United Association of Plumbers, declared that every trade affiliated with the building trades council is determined to stand by the plumbers in the fight against the steamfitters, and he added that the strike was ordered for the purpose of bringing the dispute to an issue.

SEIZE ARGETINA SHIPS

Failure to Restore Vessels in Twelve Hours May Bring War.

London, March 6. — A dispatch to the Times from Buenos Ayres says that the situation arising from the seizure of three Argentine ships by a Paraguayan vessel is grave. The Argentine envoy, who has been sent to Paraguay, will on his arrival give twelve hours for the restoration of the ships. Failing to receive satisfaction Argentina will enforce her claims. A war with Paraguay would not affect Argentine trade.

EXTRA SESSION CALLED.

Sixty-First Congress Has Adjourned Sine Die.

House Republican Leaders Withdraw the Tariff Board Bill After It Passes the Senate.

RESULTS OF SESSION.

Provision for $3,000,000 for fortification of Panama canal.

Provision for two new battleships.

Recodificaiton of judicial code—regarded as most important for amelioration of law's delays.

Establishment of forest preserves in southern Appalachian and White mountains.

Provision for construction of embassy and legation buildings abroad.

Requiring inspection of locomotive boilers.

Washington, March 6.—The Sixty-first congress adjourned sine die and President Taft issued a call for an extraordinary session of the Sixty-second congress to consider the reciprocity agreement with Canada.

Despite the peril that threatened some of the big appropriation bills almost up to the last moment, they all finally got through both houses and received the signature of the president.

The bill to establish a permanent tariff board passed the senate by a vote of 57 to 23 amid turbulent scenes. The apportionment bill goes over to the next congress.

After a bitter fight in the house the tariff board bill was withdrawn by the Republican leaders.

The senate was startled during the night to find that the general deficiency bill contained an item of $25,000 to reimburse Senator Lorimer for expenses incurred in defending his rights to a seat in the senate. How it got there no one could explain. The motion to strike out the item was carried.

The youngest member of the house in appearance, his step the sprightliest, Joseph G. Cannon ushered in his last day as speaker of the Republican house with a ringing declaration of his vigor and alertness. All night the speaker had ranged through the house chamber and lobbies, sitting for a time at the clerk's desk to sign bills that had been passed; poking fun at members who had gone to sleep on the lounges and in the chairs and taking an occasional turn at sitting in his place in the speaker's chair.

SIX PERISH IN FLAMES

Lives Lost at Center, Tex., and Two Others Fatally Hurt.

Center, Tex., March 6.—Six persons were burned to death or killed in other ways here at a fire shortly after midnight.

Many other people were hurt, at least two of them fatally.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Less than a week of the session remains and Congress will doubtless crowd as much legislation as possible in the final Saturday, and probably move the hands of the clock backward in order to secure a few minutes more time. The President will be busy on March 4th, affixing his signature to the delayed bills. Congress is working frantically in order to finish things before twelve o'clock March 4th. Men, legislators, statesmen, making laws for the greatest nation of the world, hurry scurry work in final fleeting minutes. So it has been, so it is, so it will be.

Whether there will be an extra session called immediately after March the 4th depends entirely upon the action of Congress on the reciprocity agreement which the President has made with the Canadian government. Much of the time has already been taken up listening to the selfish plaints of isolated interests—interests that have so long been favored that they imagine themselves the people and the nation. They are active and loud and like a scant brigade marching around a hill, by their activity and noise make an impression upon a one-sided onlooker of the whole army. They have their representatives in both houses of Congress, too, though some of them will not stay much longer. Bellweather Aldrich is at a southern resort having, as he says, the time of his life, and Bellweather Hale of Maine has just seven days more, but he is playing his role of obstructionist and will play it till the curtain falls. There will be no encores as far as he is concerned. After he is out of the senate his inability to learn or forget will hinder his progress no more.

I Rise to Remark.

Politics in the Post Office

The glaring impropriety of turning over the management of the postal business of U. S. to the manager of a Presidential campaign, has become obvious to all men of all parties. Mr. Hitchcock, as we have always admitted, could learn to manage the business of the Post Office Department as well as he has learned the ins and outs of party politics. He is the unhappy victim of a situation that he did not create. But it is impossible for him or any other man to serve these two divergent interests at the same time. How could any man, in so distracting a predicament, give wise thought and direction to postal affairs, or rid his mind of political motives when he has decisions to make? The scheme to penalize the magazines, though pretending to have a postal revenue motive, has no merits whatever from the revenue stand point. If second-class matter at one cent a pound is not paying enough, a very simple and obvious device would be to increase that rate by 25 per cent or even 50 per cent. Such an increase would immediately wipe out the existing deficit, would change no relative conditions, and raise no questions in that broad, shadowy zone between newspapers and periodicals, that no man can safely allowed to determine.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for March.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show the Certain Way Out

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most postive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says

Mrs Jeanett Teachout, W. Oneida Street, Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I again take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to persons afflicted with kidney trouble. Last fall my kidneys became disordered and I suffered from pains in the small of my back. If I stooped, sharp twinges seized me and for a few seconds I was unable to straighten. Too frequent passages of the kidney secretions also annoyed me greatly and the doctor was unable to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly spoken of that I procured a box and began their use. I was so promptly relieved that I continued taking the medicine until my trouble disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

The young ladies left a beautiful solid silver spoon as a token of their love for their friend.

SPRING

A very tame lion greeted the advent of March, but we are hoping that it will be all that is necessary in that line and that the lamb will assert itself for the rest of the month. Of course we expect to have disagreeable weather and hope it may come at once, if come it must and then we can welcome Spring in all its beauty.

According to the weather man's prediction we will have an an early spring, judging by the way the month of February conducted itself, no frost, a little snow and thunder in one day the temperature reaching summer heat one day, in fact it is reported as being the hottest February known in forty years.

LAKE SHORE CUTS DOWN ITS FORCE.

There has been ordered a 10 per cent reduction of the pay roll of the Locomotive Department on the Lake Shore Road. They claim that a decrease in business has made this necessary.

Only single men will be dropped, retaining the men with families as far as is expedient. Those who have lately struck among the boiler makers are considered as having resigned from the service and their places are being filled. A great number have their time reduced to 8 hours a day.

IMPROVEMENTS IN TOWN

We have watched with interest the improvements going on in windows of C. A. Wright & Son and to-day they are looking fine. The mirrors in the back ground reflect the window display in a beautiful manner. Kerr' bakery presents a very neat appearance with its new paper and paint and its re-aarangement of counters

At the approach of spring everyone is doing something to improve the appearances of their various stores.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINDENT GETS FOUR MONTHS LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The following clipped from the Ann Arbor Daily Times News will be of interest to many in town:

The March Workers' meeting of the Presbyterian Bible school was held last evening at the home of the Misses Drew and Price, 602 East Washington street.

Thirty or more teachers and officers of the school were in attendance, and the occasion was a very pleasant one. The business of the school occupied the early part of the evening, and the teachers gave reports of the past month's work. Rev. J. Leslie French gave a helpful review of the lessons for the month of March. The Misses Sweezy, Lauer, and McKenzie added to the pleasure of the evening with music and stories. Frank Goodrich, one of the superintendents of the school, who is to leave soon for a trip to Europe, was granted a four months' leave of absence, and was presented with a folding drinking cup suitably engraved, the gift of the officers and teachers. Geo. Stimpson was elected to fill Mr. Goodrich's place during his absence. Refreshments were served at the close of the evening. The next workers' meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary McClure on East Huron street.

G. A. R.

The rooms of Beers Post were thrown open Monday evening for a social entertainment in which both the Post and Auxillary took part.

A program was given as follows:

Speech, Dr. North, in which he, while honoring the hero's of the war, spoke on a hero in the medical profession, Ephriam McDowall who was first to discover the possibilities of a surgical operation for the removal of tumors. A duet by Ilene Kendrick and Gertrude Peters was given in a very sweet manner and Little Charlie Stevenson announced himself as a true soldier, Marie Ellis sang a solo most delightfully and Mr. Jones read a selection on Clara Barton and her noble work among the soldiers.

Miss Lucy Train gave an original poem on "Our Flag," and Miss Stella Brush gave a most charming solo in her usual effective manner. The program was closed by Mrs. Mary Camburn who read a most interesting article on the various National Parks in the United States.

The Ladies then served a fine lunch and after a social chat each one departed for their home, feeling it had been an evening well spent.

"THE WOLF" PLEASES PATRONS OF MISHLER'S THEATRE.

"The New York Lyric Theatre success at Mishler's Theatre, Wednesday afternoon and evening to large and appreciative audiences The cast, while not a large one, was an excellent one, being exceptionally balanced. Although seen here for the third time, the play as was attested by the attendance, has lost none of its drawing powers Rockcliffe Fellows played the part of Jules, the young French Canadian, and was ably assisted by Logan Paul as McTavish, the Scotch settler, and John M. Kline as the American engineer.

Miss Paula Wilkes acted the part of Hilda McTavish, and Harry A. Cassidy as Legrand, the Hudson Bay Trader, and Milton Nobles, Jr., as the American Engineer's assistant, were pleasing.

The play reaches its climax at the end of the second act, and no less than five curtain-calls were demanded on this occasion by the patrons of Mishler's, Wednesday evening. The scenery and lighting effects were excellent, making a series of pretty stage pictures, showing the Canadian wood at Indian summer time.

"THE WOLF" is booked for a one night's engagement at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th.

THE WOLF

The management of the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE wishes to offer a few words of explanation in regards to a company playing THE WOLF in Adrian on the same night that that attraction plays Tecumseh. If you will notice the ads in the Adrian papers you will see that they say "exactly as presented by Sam S. & Lee Shuberts Co." while the company playing here is SHUBERT'S own company.

The company playing Adrian plays Coldwater the night before playing Adrian, while the company playing here to-morow (Wednesday) night comes here from Jackson. Shubert's own company which appears at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE, WED., MARCH 8th, only plays four days in Michigan, viz: Battle Creek, Sunday (matinee and night); Kalamazoo, Monday; Jackson, Tuesday and Tecumseh Wednesday and it is only on account of breaking a jump from Jackson to Bowling Green, Ohio that we were able to get the date at all.

This is the same company that played at the SHUBERT AUDITORIUM, Toledo, Xmas day (matinee and night). The company carry a car load of special scenery and an all star cast and are guaranteed to be A No. 1 in every way. They have nothing to do whatever with the company playing in Adrian

THE WOLF was written by Mr. Eugene Walter, author of, Paid In Full; The Easiest Way and severa other pieces, but THE WOLF is considered his best work.

This same company played Toledo with $1.50 the highest price but the prices here are—25c-50c-75c-$1. Nothing over $1.00.

BAD DREAMS

Nightmare, Restlessness and Night sweats all Caused by Indigestion

Half of the nervousness in the world all of the disturbing dreams and nightmares can be ended in a few weeks by a simple, inexpensive treatment guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

Upset stomach is the cause of nervousness and bad dreams. Your food is lying in your stomach undigested and fermenting; it is forming poisonous gases which irritates the pheumogastric nerve that leads direct from the brain, and ends in a network of tiny branches running through the stomach.

It is also the irritation of this great pheumogastric nerve that causes headaches. Many times people have severe headaches and know they are caused by the stomach but do not know how.

If you are nervous, have dreams or nightmare and do not sleep sound at night, get a 50 cent box of MI-O-NA stomach tablets and take one or two after or with meals. MI-O-NA stomach tablets relieve distressed stomach in 5 minutes. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, and druggists everywhere who guarantee MI-O-NA to cure indigestion, or money back.

What Was The Matter With The Automobile Industry

IN an advertisement published two weeks ago we said we were going to disclose some interesting facts about the automobile business—and we are. We are going to call a spade a spade and tell you the truth about some things you may have suspected, possibly known, in part, or learned from sorrowful experience.

We, and we believe you, too, are disgusted with the way Circus Barkers, Stock Promoters and High Salaried Slingers of Rhetoric have been "pulling the wool" over the eyes of automobile buyers for their own profit and at the purchasers' expense. So many misstatements and downright falsehoods have been presented to the public as facts that we believe that they will appreciate a clear exposition of the conditions which have and are now governing the Automobile Industry.

Back in 1908 when the first popular priced cars made their appearance with the Regal as the Pioneer in this class, many manufacturers said "they can't build them at that price." There were, however, certain men in the industry who were wise enough to foresee that by using proper business methods, doing away with the enormous waste and overhead expense which had theretofore been a characteristic feature of the automobile "game," as it was called, that a Medium Priced Car could be produced if it were made in large quantities according to a careful design. Later events proved that their predictions were right. These men made a car, gave good value to the owners and were successful, financially.

There were, however, other men, some with very little experience in the industry, who thought that this was such an easy task that they could do the same thing. They immediately began, therefore, to order material for thousands of cars—erected factories over night—shipped their material in carload lots by express and started into the business also. Such was the enormous demand for cars at that time, that for several months these cars were sold in large quantities, in such large quantities in fact, that in order to keep up with the demand work was done in tents, old buildings and in fact in any way to get out the product. Everybody went wild—there was a great hurrah—Promoters saw what they thought was better than a gold mine—Capital was invested in almost fabulous sums in enterprises whose assets consisted, mostly, of a bunch of blue prints, a trade mark name and a smooth tongued, clever advertisement writer or salesman. During the whole year of 1908 the public fell for this "Buy tickets for the Big Side Show" talk. The factories apparently made money and the cars were sold. Some of the shrewdest manufacturers, however, at the end of this season saw that trouble was brewing—that something was bound to break, because no industry, however great, could stand such a strain, such a wasteful method of doing business, especially with such lax and unstable business organizations.

As soon as the alleged manufacturers (?) began to realize this, they saw their only salvation lay in adopting more daring methods, they came out with advertisements, boldly proclaiming their superiority, assuring the public of their sincerity and praising to the skies, the wonderful mechanical perfectness and ability which they claimed their cars possessed. Of course they had to do this. They had ordered thousands of parts—they had built enormous factories—had made large contracts with their dealers—made rosy promises to their owners. They had to do something and this seemed to offer the easiest loophole. But, although the "beloved public" may like to be fooled as P. T. Barnum says, yet it is hard to do it twice in the same place and the cars did not move in such overwhelming numbers as they had predicted and expected.

At the beginning of the 1910 season they found themselves in still worse straits—they put a new frame on the picture, re-gilted it and held it up to the public gaze once more—a beautiful (?) creation BUT at a SACRIFICED PRICE. As at the public auction that we see on our main street every day, only a few of the gullible bought—the rest were "cappers" and men paid to do the shouting. The majority of these cars had to be "carried over" another year.

In the meantime the well established manufacturers who had been doing business upon a safe and sane basis were proceeding slowly and carefully. They were obliged, of course, to enter into competition with the other so called "cars," but their real value and their straight forward and honest treatment of their dealers and owners soon enabled them to make still further inroads into the sales of their "fly-by-night" competitors.

The Regal "30"

1912 MODEL.

Price includes Dual ignition system with magneto. Complete gas and oil lamp equipment with generator, jack and tools. Wheel base 107". Tires 32 x 3½". Brakes—4 in number. Internal expanding and external contracting, acting directly on hub drums. Cylinders—4. Bore—4⅛". Stroke—4". Three speed and reserve selective sliding gear transmission. Road Clearance—10".

Every one knows what has happened—how these companies have been forced into still more desperate straits—how as a last resort they have thrown to the winds any semblance of price maintenance, fair treatment of customers and dealers—how they have attempted to market their product by giving their dealers still larger discounts—how they have given the automobile industry a reputation which it never deserved and never should have had—how they have destroyed the public's confidence and how they have caused the loss of thousands and thousands of dollars not only to themselves but to the industry at large.

A few of these companies have, at last, learned their lesson and are now beginning to put their business upon a safe and honest basis, but unfortunately it will be many years before they can again gain the confidence of those dealers and owners who once purchased their cars. Notwithstanding this fact, however, there are two or three companies who are still pursuing the same old circus methods—still attempting to fool the public in the hopes that they may save some of the thousands of dollars, that they have NOW invested in cars which they had hoped to market Two Years ago.

It is needless for us to call these by name, as their PRICE CUTTING FABRICATIONS, "DIRECT TO CONSUMER FROM FACTORY" OFFERS, "OUTPUTS SOLD IN A DAY" AND AUCTION METHODS are gradually becoming known to every one interested in the purchase of a motor car.

Now a word in regard to the Regal policy. The men who compose the Regal Motor Car Company are all men who have had a long and successful experience in the manufacturing business. They have been engaged in the manufacture of products where the margin of profit was so small that it was necessary for them to watch every expenditure and proceed with the utmost caution. This experience was, of course, very valuable to them when they started to manufacture automobiles and as a consequence, they decided that their policy should be one of safe and steady development.

The first year, after carefully studying the situation, notwithstanding the fact that the demand was large, they only built 500 cars.

These were distributed in such a way and at such points in the United States, as would enable them to most successfully study demands of the public and determine what was best not only in manufacture, but in organization, treatment of dealers and customers as well. As we have seen this cautious plan proved to be a wise one. We found that the public demand was constantly changing—that new materials were being adopted and we were therefore in a position to take advantage of all of the latest improvements and to produce not a Re-modeled, Patched Up Car, but a New One, up-to-date in every particular.

In the year of 1909, still in the face of a great demand, we only produced 3500 cars. These were ALL successfully disposed of and at the beginning of 1910 when the first sign of trouble began to develop with others, we were enabled to start with a CLEAN SLATE, adopting all the new improvements that had been developed in the industry and were not obliged, as were many of these other manufacturers, to use up OLD MATERIAL bought TWO YEARS previous. We developed a new, up-to-date line of cars, of which 6500 were sold.

Instead of building enormous factories, investing our money in hundreds of new factory machines we only added to our equipment such things as were absolutely necessary. In other words we have, from the very beginning, conducted our business upon a safe and sane basis—upon economical lines.

Our overhead expense does not exceed 5%.

We have tried to build the best cars that we possibly could for the money and still make a fair, legitimate profit.

It was not until this year that we have felt that the capacity and organized conditions of our business were such that we could, with consistency, conduct a large advertising campaign. The time has now arrived, however, when the organization, the cars, the manufacturing facilities, and in fact everything about our institution is in such a condition as to warrant a large and aggressive campaign such as we have now started.

Not until this time has the industry been in such a condition as to make it safe to come out with such plain talk as this, but we believe that the public now knows enough of the business and realizes the situation, to such an extent, as to see for itself why the automobile business is no longer a Game, but has at last arrived at the stage where it may, with propriety, be called, an Industry.

Because of our policy consistently followed we are in a position today to offer you in the Regal line, practical, efficient, economical Automobiles at a moderate price—cars which embody all the refinements and up-to-date features which can possibly be incorporated at the price—such a competitive price as only those who are using up their old material, purchased in 1908 and 1909, can meet.

That is why we wanted you to know the story of the Automobile industry—why we wanted you to become familiar with the foundation upon which we have built—know what our plans are—why Regal cars are best suited to your needs and represent THE BEST VALUE YOU CAN GET FOR YOUR MONEY.

OPEN MEETING OF THE RESEARCH CIRCLE

TUESDAY EVENING MARCH 7.

Mrs. Frank Clarkson, Hostess

One of the pleasantest open meetings of the Research Circle was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Clarkson, with the gentlemen as guests.

Delightful music was rendered by Mrs. Moore, Miss Brush, Miss Mingay and John Keeney with Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Hodges furnishing the instrumental part. A recitation by Mrs. Weld entitled "The Monk's Magnificat" with musical accompaniment was very much enjoyed, as was also a recitation by Miss Mingay.

A character monologue "The New Church Organ" by Mrs. Geo Sanford was humorously given. An oral sketch of the Italian tenor Campanini was given by Mrs. Belcher.

Refreshments completed a very enjoyable evening. About 60 were present.

Many things are well done that are not worth doing.

EAGLE LODGE

CHIEF'S AERIE, NO. 1563.

But few people in town realize that we have in our midst, a society that has brought so much help and comfort to the sick and dying. Their assistance is always rendered in a quiet unobtrusive way, the members often assisting in extreme cases, from their own resources.

The Eagles are a recent organization, only since 1907, but now have a membership of seventy and expect to initiate a large class this month.

The main feature of this lodge is their benefit fund of $7.00 a week, in case of sickness and at death the sum of $50.00 for funeral expenses.

When organized they occupied the Royal Arcanum rooms, and now have made arrangements to occupy the Odd Fellows Hall. Their first meeting will be held Monday, March 13, in their new quarters, from now on they will endeavor to make this more of a social organization

This lodge is in such a flourishing condition, that they have money in the bank and all benefits are paid from the home lodge.

Toledo Lodge on Jan 31, 1907 came here and organized this order with the following officers:—Worthy Pres. James Elliott, Worthy Vice President James McCann. The following have served since then, in 1909, Worthy Pres. W. E. Barrett, Worthy Vice Pres. B. A. Lawrence. For 1911, worthy Pres. B A. Lawrence, Worthy Vice Pres. Floyd J. Smith.

Their meetings are held the 2nd 4th Mondays in the month.

MACCABEES IN TOLEDO.

A numbers of the Maccabees from Tecumseh were among the many of southern Michigan who were entertained by the Toledo lodge Monday night.

At the meeting of the Great Executive Committee which was held in afternoon nearly 1,000 candidates were initiated into the order at Zenobea Hall, the degree team of Buckeye Tent Toledo doing the work.

The Uniform rank division from Detroit, Wyandotte and AnnArbor. A most enjoyable and profitable meeting was the raport of those who were in attendance.

BEAUTIFUL CANTATA

At the M. E. Church on Thursday, evening, March 16, at 7:30 p. m., a company of thirty voices will render Lorenz's beautiful parlor cantata, "The Flower Fete or the Rainbow of the Flowers." The church will be appropriately decorated and the music and dialogue will be charming.

At the close of the program the Rainbow Maidens will serve ice-cream and cake or tea and wafers. Remember the place and time, M. E. Church Thursday, March 16, 7:30 p. m

ACCIDENT

Monday morning while moving to the Dove house lately vacated by Robert McClelland, Mrs. Chas. Dixon met with a very painful accident She was driving in a buggy with her lamps and other fragile articles among them six dozen eggs, In some way the horse became frightened and overturned the buggy. Mrs. Dixon has a broken arm, and bruised face as the result. All but four of the eggs we re broken and a general mixup ensued.

"THE WOLF"

The play as given at the Opera House on Wednesday evening was the best of the kind ever given in Tecumseh. The story was laid in the wilds of Canada. The stern old father and his young and beautiful daughter taking their parts finely. All the characters were well carried out. An appreciative audience gave testimony to the success of the play.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

RICHARD S. CUMINGS AND WIFE WERE MARRIED IN TECUMSEH, MARCH 6th, 1861

R. S. Cummings and Lydia Liscombe were married in Tecumseh, March 6, 1861, by the Rev. Blinn. They were attended by Myron Hyde and Maria Cummings, sister of the bridegroom.

The 50th Anniversary was held at the home of their eldest daughter Mrs. Irwin Clark. The guests consisted of their seven children and their companions, eighteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Two sisters of Mrs. Cumings were present Mrs. Ella Lakins of Toledo and Mrs. Jennie Leonard of Jackson, also a niece and her husband Mr. and Mrs Bigbee of Jackson.

Many beautiful presents among which was a sum of money and boquets of flowers were received. The house was beautifully decorated with golden crepe paper, fifty golden bows which were carried away as souvenirs and the wedding bell added to the beauty of the scene.

A two course six o'clock dinner was served, and the time was pleasantly spent in talks of the olden times and music both vocal and instrumental.

The family have always lived in or near Tecumseh, one daughter in Clinton being the greatest distance from home.

There has never been a death in the immediate family. The eldest daughter sat by her father and the youngest son by his mother at the table

It is seldom that a whole family can gather on such an occasion and each one will cherish a pleasant memory of the event.

TRITONIAN LITERARY SOCIETY

The regular monthly meeting of the Tritonian Literary Society was held Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the High School Auditorium. A very entertaining program was given under the supervision of Miss Phillips, the chairman of the program committee.

The next regular meeting will be held the 2nd. Tuesday evening in April. A special meeting will be held Friday afternoon March 24. At this time a farce "Mr. Bob" in 2 acts will be given.

To The Voters of Lenawee County.

Before the Primaries, I said I was not a candidate for the office of Circuit Judge. In spite of such declaration I was nominated as the Republican Candidate for that office. I fully appreciate that this is an office that any attorney might well have an ambition to occupy and I am also grateful for the efforts of my friends along this line. I feel that as this nomination has come to me unsolicited it is a duty I owe to my party as well as to myself to be a candidate, and therefore I have concluded to allow my name to be placed upon the ticket and I will fully appreciate any support the voters of this County may give me.

DR. AKED TO QUIT NEW YORK CHURCH

Rockefeller Pastor Says Congregation Not Progressive.

Says That Consecration to Present Conditions Impossible, and Patient Hope for Awakening Is Beyond Forbearance.

New York, March 6.—Dr. Charles F. Aked told his parishioners of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church that his high hopes when he left Pembroke chapel in Liverpool four years ago to become John D. Rockefeller's pastor had turned to ashes and unless some member of his congregation can give him a reason why he should remain pastor of the New York church he will accept a call from the First Congregational church of San Francisco. The final decision, he said, must be made within two weeks.

The general tone of Dr. Aked's statement, which followed the regular Sunday morning sermon, left little doubt that he will accept a call from the Pacific coast. The failure of his plans for a big institutional church and his present "meager ministry" were set out in his statement. He can discover only reasons why he should go. "So far as we can see today there is no future for this church and for my ministry," he said.

Every effort, however, will be made on the part of the trustees to hold Dr. Aked here. A special meeting will be held within a day or two and the men responsible for the financial management of the church will look for a "reason" cogent enough to retain their pastor.

"We all agree that Dr. Aked is the finest preacher in New York," said Trustee Frank L. Froment, "and we all will make another effort to satisfy his ambitions. Whether or not we can build the grand church he desires must depend on the support of the congregation."

News that Dr. Aked would make a statement had been spread broadcast and brought almost every member to the morning service. The ushers admitted only members of the congregation and men and women stood in the rear and along the sides while others were seated on the steps of the pulpit platform.

"It is my duty to announce to you that I have received a unanimous and enthusiastic invitation to the pastorate of the First Congregational church of San Francisco. It is with a heavy heart that I go on to say that thus far I have not been able to find any sufficient reason why I should not accept the San Francisco invitation.

"We are not compelled hastily. We can wait a week or even two weeks pondering the situation. I can discover—it almost breaks my heart to say it—only reasons why I should go. And it is due to you and to my esteem for you that you should be told at once how the matter takes shape in my mind. Yet there is nothing now to tell you. From the very first you have known that I could not contemplate a permanent ministry under present conditions. This was made perfectly clear to me before I accepted the invitation to become your minister. It has been affirmed and reaffirmed by me with an emphasis which at times I feared might become offensive.

"I did not come from England to be minister of a small community of Baptists, meeting in such a building as this. I should not expect you to be satisfied with me if I could be satisfied by any such meager ministry. I came with great hopes—hopes which at that time I thought you shared. I believed that you were ready for vast enterprises. I fear now that these enterprises are such stuff as dreams are made of. The first step is to erect a great church building worthy of the name and of our ministry in this city. Other things will follow in their proper order. The first step we have not taken."

She Played the Green.

The attache of a European embassy was very much attracted by a western girl of great beauty and still greater wealth at a summer resort, and in order to interest her deeply he fell into the habit of discoursing at length on his family tree and telling her that ancestry was of great value to a man.

The girl from the west had been brought up in a section of the country where every man was accepted for what he was and not because of what his ancestors had been or done. She began to be bored by the attache's lectures on pedigree.

"Blue blood," he remarked one day, "is something not everybody can boast of."

"Oh, yes," she agreed indifferently, "but what's the use of blue blood if you haven't got the long green?"—Popular Magazine.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Tecumseh Citizens Show the Certain Way Out

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most postive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Tecumseh citizen says

Mrs Jeanett Te achout, W. Oneida Street, Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I again take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to persons afflicted with kidney trouble. Last fall my kidneys became disordered and I suffered from pains in the small of my back. If I stooped, sharp twinges seized me and for a few seconds I was unable to straighten. Too frequent passages of the kidney secretions also annoyed me greatly and the doctor was unable to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly spoken of that I procured a box and began their use. I was so promptly releived that I continued taking the medicine until my trouble disappeared."

OBITUARY

In the death of Millie Schmeler a bright and beautiful life has come to an early close. Mrs. Mildred Edna Baldwin Schmeler was born in 1876, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miles E. Baldwin of Lenawee Co. Mich., where she spent her childhood days in and around Tecumseh. She was converted under the preaching of Rev. David Lewis and from that time lead a patient and christian life in view of the many trials and disappointments that were strewn in her pathway.

In the year of 1907 she was married to Alexandria Schmeler of New York City. Her home was well nigh perfect, and it will be here where her loving kindness and congenial spirit will be most keenly felt. She united with the Century M. E. Church of which her husband is one of the officials, where she took an active interest in all that pertained to the welfare of the church organizations.

January 1st, 1911 she was taken sick with LaGrippe which settled in her head and in spite of the best surgical and medical care known, nursing included, early in the morning of March second she succombed to the grim messenger "Death," leaving beside her heart stricken husband a daughter twenty months old, an aged father, mother, two sisters, two brothers and a host of new-made friends who mourn her sudden death. Funeral services were held in the Chapel, conducted by Rev. C. A. Holla, who had united the two in marriage, so soon to be seperated, after which amid st sighs and tears her remains were brought to Tecumseh accompanied by her husband, arriving on the 9:09 train and taken to her parents home where a brief service was held Sunday afternoon. The floral offerings were many and of the choicest variety under which she was laid away in our beautiful Brookside Cemetery just as the flakes of snow so pure and white came to cover the last resting place of all that was mortal of our Millie. It may be truly said of her:

"She lived for those who loved her
For those whose hearts were true,
For the Heaven that smiled above her
And the good that she could do."

CATARRH GOES

So Does Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Croup and Asthma.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below, whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing low spirited at times, raising of mucus, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

C. A. Wright & Son have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) which is a vaporized air, so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life, gives relief in two minutes, and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber pocket inhaler, is only $1.00. The inhaldr will last a lifetime, so that should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI, you can get it for 50 cents. Ask C. A. Wright & Son.

What Was The Matter With The Automobile Industry

IN an advertisement published two weeks ago we said we were going to disclose some interesting facts about the automobile business—and we are. We are going to call a spade a spade and tell you the truth about some things you may have suspected, possibly known, in part, or learned from sorrowful experience.

We, and we believe you, too, are disgusted with the way Circus Barkers, Stock Promoters and High Salaried Slingers of Rhetoric have been "pulling the wool" over the eyes of automobile buyers for their own profit and at the purchasers' expense. So many misstatements and downright falsehoods have been presented to the public as facts that we believe that they will appreciate a clear exposition of the conditions which have and are now governing the Automobile Industry.

Back in 1908 when the first popular priced cars made their appearance with the Regal as the Pioneer in this class, many manufacturers said "they can't build them at that price." There were, however, certain men in the industry who were wise enough to foresee that by using proper business methods, doing away with the enormous waste and overhead expense which had theretofore been a characteristic feature of the automobile "game," as it was called, that a Medium Priced Car could be produced if it were made in large quantities according to a careful design. Later events proved that their predictions were right. These men made a car, gave good value to the owners and were successful, financially.

There were, however, other men, some with very little experience in the industry, who thought that this was such an easy task that they could do the same thing. They immediately began, therefore, to order material for thousands of cars—erected factories over night—shipped their material in carload lots by express and started into the business also. Such was the enormous demand for cars at that time, that for several months these cars were sold in large quantities, in such large quantities in fact, that in order to keep up with the demand work was done in tents, old buildings and in fact in any way to get out the product. Everybody went wild—there was a great hurrah—Promoters saw what they thought was better than a gold mine—Capital was invested in almost fabulous sums in enterprises whose assets consisted, mostly, of a bunch of blue prints, a trade mark name and a smooth tongued, clever advertisement writer or salesman. During the whole year of 1908 the public fell for this "Buy tickets for the Big Side Show" talk. The factories apparently made money and the cars were sold. Some of the shrewdest manufacturers, however, at the end of this season saw that trouble was brewing—that something was bound to break, because no industry, however great, could stand such a strain, such a wasteful method of doing business, especially with such lax and unstable business organizations.

As soon as the alleged manufacturers (?) began to realize this, they saw their only salvation lay in adopting more daring methods, they came out with advertisements, boldly proclaiming their superiority, assuring the public of their sincerity and praising to the skies, the wonderful mechanical perfectness and ability which they claimed their cars possessed. Of course they had to do this. They had ordered thousands of parts—they had built enormous factories—had made large contracts with their dealers—made rosy promises to their owners. They had to do something and this seemed to offer the easiest loophole. But, although the "beloved public" may like to be fooled as P. T. Barnum says, yet it is hard to do it twice in the same place and the cars did not move in such overwhelming numbers as they had predicted and expected.

At the beginning of the 1910 season they found themselves in still worse straits—they put a new frame on the picture, re-gilted it and held it up to the public gaze once more—a beautiful (?) creation BUT at a SACRIFICED PRICE. As at the public auction that we see on our main street every day, only a few of the gullible bought—the rest were "cappers" and men paid to do the shouting. The majority of these cars had to be "carried over" another year.

In the meantime the well established manufacturers who had been doing business upon a safe and sane basis were proceeding slowly and carefully. They were obliged, of course, to enter into competition with the other so called "cars," but their real value and their straight forward and honest treatment of their dealers and owners soon enabled them to make still further inroads into the sales of their "fly-by-night" competitors.

The Regal "30"

Internal expanding and external contracting, acting directly on hub drums Cylinders—4. Bore—4⅛". Stroke—4". Three speed and reserve selective sliding gear transmission. Road Clearance—10".

Every one knows what has happened—how these companies have been forced into still more desperate straits—how as a last resort they have thrown to the winds any semblance of price maintenance, fair treatment of customers and dealers—how they have attempted to market their product by giving their dealers still larger discounts—how they have given the automobile industry a reputation which it never deserved and never should have had—how they have destroyed the public's confidence and how they have caused the loss of thousands and thousands of dollars not only to themselves but to the industry at large.

A few of these companies have, at last, learned their lesson and are now beginning to put their business upon a safe and honest basis, but unfortunately it will be many years before they can again gain the confidence of those dealers and owners who once purchased their cars. Notwithstanding this fact, however, there are two or three companies who are still pursuing the same old circus methods—still attempting to fool the public in the hopes that they may save some of the thousands of dollars, that they have NOW invested in cars which they had hoped to market Two Years ago.

It is needless for us to call these by name, as their PRICE CUTTING FABRICATIONS, "DIRECT TO CONSUMER FROM FACTORY" OFFERS, "OUTPUTS SOLD IN A DAY" AND AUCTION METHODS are gradually becoming known to every one interested in the purchase of a motor car.

Now a word in regard to the Regal policy. The men who compose the Regal Motor Car Company are all men who have had a long and successful experience in the manufacturing business. They have been engaged in the manufacture of products where the margin of profit was so small that it was necessary for them to watch every expenditure and proceed with the utmost caution. This experience was, of course, very valuable to them when they started to manufacture automobiles and as a consequence, they decided that their policy should be one of safe and steady development.

The first year, after carefully studying the situation, notwithstanding the fact that the demand was large, they only built 500 cars.

These were distributed in such a way and at such points in the United States, as would enable them to most successfully study demands of the public and determine what was best not only in manufacture, but in organization, treatment of dealers and customers as well. As we have seen this cautious plan proved to be a wise one. We found that the public demand was constantly changing—that new materials were being adopted and we were therefore in a position to take advantage of all of the latest improvements and to produce not a Re-modeled, Patched Up Car, but a New One, up-to-date in every particular.

In the year of 1909, still in the face of a great demand, we only produced 3500 cars. These were ALL successfully disposed of and at the beginning of 1910 when the first sign of trouble began to develop with others, we were enabled to start with a CLEAN SLATE, adopting all the new improvements that had been developed in the industry and were not obliged, as were many of these other manufacturers, to use up OLD MATERIAL bought TWO YEARS previous. We developed a new, up-to-date line of cars, of which 6500 were sold.

Instead of building enormous factories, investing our money in hundreds of new factory machines we only added to our equipment such things as were absolutely necessary. In other words we have, from the very beginning, conducted our business upon a safe and sane basis—upon economical lines.

Our overhead expense does not exceed 5%.

We have tried to build the best cars that we possibly could for the money and still make a fair, legitimate profit.

It was not until this year that we have felt that the capacity and organized conditions of our business were such that we could, with consistency, conduct a large advertising campaign. The time has now arrived, however, when the organization, the cars, the manufacturing facilities, and in fact everything about our institution is in such a condition as to warrant a large and aggressive campaign such as we have now started.

Not until this time has the industry been in such a condition as to make it safe to come out with such plain talk as this, but we believe that the public now knows enough of the business and realizes the situation, to such an extent, as to see for itself why the automobile business is no longer a Game, but has at last arrived at the stage where it may, with propriety, be called, an Industry.

Because of our policy consistently followed we are in a position today to offer you in the Regal line, practical, efficient, economical Automobiles at a moderate price—cars which embody all the refinements and up-to-date features which can possibly be incorporated at the price—such a competitive price as only those who are using up their old material, purchased in 1908 and 1909, can meet.

That is why we wanted you to know the story of the Automobile industry—why we wanted you to become familiar with the foundation upon which we have built—know what our plans are—why Regal cars are best suited to your needs and represent THE BEST VALUE YOU CAN GET FOR YOUR MONEY.

COL. TRUMBO IN NEED

Former Counsel for Mormons Evicted From Home.

Possesses Many Fine Paintings, but Fails to Pay Gas and Water Bills.

San Francisco, March 13. — Col. Isaac Trumbo, who made a fortune as counsel for the Mormon church and who lived in Amela palace after Brigham Young's death, was evicted from his old home here to satisfy a loan of $11,000 made twelve years ago on which no interest has been paid. The German Savings Bank, which loaned the money, gave Trumbo ample chance to pay, but when the amount reached $18,000 the bank foreclosed. Trumbo came here about fifteen years ago several times a millionaire. He built a fine house on Sutter street and lavished money on wall and ceiling decorations painted on canvas and then stretched on the wall. He also bought many fine paintings by European and American artists. Here he entertained largely and loved to show his art treasures, which were estimated to be worth $250,000.

Gradually Trumbo's fortune melted away in bad mining investments and for the last nine months he has lived in his art palace without any modern convenience. Gas and water were shut off because of failure to pay bills. Good meals were served to Trumbo by his old Irish cook and his negro body servant who did work for neighbors to get money to buy food. The bank officers tried to induce Trumbo to sell some of his tapestries and paintings, but he persistently refused. In the last few months the neighbors say they saw the old man with candle in hand going the rounds of his art gallery admiring his pictures.

The wages due the old servants amount to $7,000, but they have remained loyal without pay. Trumbo's brother, Howard, his only near relative, is in Florida.

100 TRUNKS ARE HELD

Big Seizure Made in New York by Collector Loeb.

Forty Tradeswomen Are Owners of Property Seized for a More Thorough Search.

New York, March 13.—Collector of the Port William Loeb Jr. has determined to have a close watch kept on the dressmakers and milliners returning with spring styles from Paris.

In accordance with this order, 100 trunks, the property of forty tradeswomen who have just arrived from abroad, are under guard at the appraiser's stores, where a more thorough overhauling will be made than was possible when the inspectors went through the trunks on the piers.

Customs officials say that the valuation, totaling about $100,000, which the owners placed on the trunks, will be shown to be far short of the real values. Two fashionable dressmakers already have been penalized for undervaluation.

BRYAN AND WILSON DINE

Both Deny Meeting Has Political Significance,

COMMONER SPEAKS ON FAITH

Although He Has Made Politics Business of Life, Kansas Declares He Will Talk Religion Long After Quitting Political Arena.

Princeton, N. J., March 13.—William Jennings Bryan dined with Gov. Woodrow Wilson at the Princeton Inn. When it was learned that Gov. Wilson had cut short his stay in Atlanta and hurried north in order to arrange the meeting with the former leader of the Democratic party it was supposed that there might be some political significance in this dinner, but both men denied that anything of a political nature had been discussed.

In the afternoon Bryan made a speech to a crowd of 1,500 people who completely filled Alexander Hall on the Princeton university campus.

The subject of Mr. Bryan's speech was "Faith." He said that he always enjoyed speaking on religion more than politics because he could accomplish something if he only convinced a few people, whereas on a political subject he had to secure the concurrence of the majority of the people, a thing which he had never been able to do.

Mr. Bryan said that although he had made politics the business of his life and expected to give his attenton to it for many years to come, he knew he would be talking religion long after he was out of politics.

Mr. Bryan gave the impression that he by no means considered himself yet out of politics.

MANY HEAR DR. AKED

Hundreds Anxious to Ascertain Reason for Resigning.

Pastor to Leave Because He Failed to Reconcile Himself to Conditions.

New York, March 13.—Several hundred persons, mostly women, jammed their way into the Fifth Avenue Baptist church and filled every available inch of floor space to hear what sort of a come-back Dr. Charles F. Aked would make when he announced his resignation as pastor. Dr. Aked's statement was not long. He said he was resigning because he had failed to reconcile himself to conditions which limited his work there and the congregation had failed to find a way of changing the conditions.

He denied having any intention of returning to England and stated during the past week he had refused three offers from that country. The congregation was asked to act on the resignation as soon as possible as the pastor did not feel free to accept a call to another church until the resignation was accepted. A church meeting will be held Wednesday night. With a large number of younger church attendants who are in sympathy with Dr. Aked the vote on accepting his resignation will be close.

Last Sunday he told the congregation that he could see no reason why he should not accept the call given him by the First Congregational church of San Francisco and last Tuesday he resigned at a meeting of the trustees.

SOCIETY BOXER TO RETAIN SIGHT

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Reposes in Dark Room.

TWO BOUTS IN ONE AFTERNOON

"White Man's Hope" Quits After Two Rounds, When Amateur Fighter Takes on Jack O'Brien, Whose Blows Affect Biddle's Eye.

Philadelphia, March 13.—For more than three days Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, the amateur society boxer, has been reposing in a dark room, and Dr. Charles S. Turnbull has just assured him that he would not lose the sight of his right eye. Biddle's injury was sustained Thursday afternoon in a furious bout with Jack O'Brien. Incidentally the energetic amateur had three teeth broken in the same fight, while O'Brien sustained severe damage in the way of cut lips and nose.

Last Thursday afternoon Biddle at the American Athletic club boxed Charles Burkhard, who has been dubbed the "white man's hope," in that he had expressed a determination to wrest the championship from Johnson. Burkhard is six feet four and one-half inches tall and weighs 190 pounds. Nevertheless after two rounds with Biddle he quit. Without any rest the jubilant Biddle took on O'Brien.

In the first round O'Brien landed a peculiar blow on Biddle's right eye and while the eye did not close the sight suddenly left it and the optic caused him intense pain.

In the second round the teeth suffered.

Biddle went home after the bout and sent for Dr. Turnbull, who at once realized the gravity of the injury. A piece an eighth of an inch long had been chopped from the center of the pupil. Dr. Turnbull worked with him nearly all night and it was not until nearly morning that the pupil began to respond to belladonna and expand. Biddle has steadily improved since and expects to be out of bed today.

"And you can say," he said, "that I will get back at my friend Jack in a few days."

That is a dangerous religion which would not be known but for its label.

Some men keep all their enthusiasm bottled up in their hip pockets.

MINE CAVEIN BURIES EIGHTEEN

Austrians and Finns Killed in Minnesota Avalanche.

MINERS LEAVE LARGE FAMILIES

Owing to Immense Quantity of Ore Covering the Dead, Removal of Bodies Is Necessarily Slow.

Duluth, Minn., March 13.—Eighteen are dead at the Norman mine at Virginia, Minn., on account of the ore [illegible] from the bank into the mine Saturday night. Most of these men are Austrians and Finns

Only six bodies were removed during the day, and owing to the immense quantity of ore covering the dead, it may be several days before all are found.

President W. J. Olcott, of the mining company, says that the earth gave way from the bottom of the bank and that the disaster could not have been foreseen.

Many of the dead miners left large families. The wailing of the wives, children and relatives of the men under the thousands of tons of ore in the open pit is heart rending.

Two of those entombed in the Elba underground mine at Gilbert, Minn., were dead when the rescuers reached them. Capt. Joseph Dinny was rescued. He was pinioned under falling timbers and had his shoulder blade broken.

KIDNAP AND SELL SIX GIRLS

Tragedy of Chinese Slave Traffic Revealed by Immigration Inspectors.

San Francisco, March 13.—One of the tragedies of the Chinese slave traffice in women was revealed late at night in Ross Alley, in local Chinatown, where six girls, from 15 to 18 years old, were found close prisoners in an evil smelling brothel. Immigration inspectors were inspecting the quarter to discover where these girls, who had been smuggled into the country on a regular ocean liner, were hidden. Their suspecions were aroused by seeing two Chinese watching them through a skylight. The officers broke down the barred doors of the house and made their way to a small room, where they found the six slave girls hiding in a corner in great terror.

From the girls an interpreter learned they had been kidnaped in Hongkong, kept close prisoners there for a week in a small room and given only a little rice which barely kept them alive. Here they were sold for large sums, as they are all young and pretty. They were taken to Angel Island for deportation.

ONLY 24, IS MADE PRIEST

Thomas Carroll Youngest Deacon Ever Ordained in Michigan.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 13.—Thomas John Carroll, the 24-year-old son of a Kalamazoo blacksmith, was ordained a priest in the Catholic church by Bishop Edward D. Kelly in St. Augustine's church. Not only was this the first ordination ever conducted in Kalamazoo, but Carroll is the youngest deacon ever ordained to the priesthood in Michigan.

The young priest was born in this city and has spent the greater part of his life here. He graduated from La-Fevre institute in this city, later going to the St. Jerome college at Berlin, Ont. He graduated from St. Mary's seminary at Cincinnati last June and came to Kalamazoo to wait until he was old enough to be made a priest.

In Attempt to Break Up Affair Farmer Is Deprived of Life.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., March 13.—John Rourk, age 28, a prominent farmer, living at New Haven, Ill., was killed by Joe Fuhrer, of that place, at a dance.

Rourk tried to break up the dance and when Fuhrer attempted to act as peacemaker, the former assaulted him with a knife.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Just the right medicine for backache, rheumatism, Bright's disease and all urinary irregularities. William F. Schramm, Adrian, Mich., says: "I had a severe case of kidney and bladder trouble for several years. My back ached so severe that when I stooped over I could hardly straighten up and there were always sharp pains in my sides and often felt dizzy and weak. The kidney action was irregular and painful. I used Foley Kidney Pills only a few weeks and now I am a well man once more. They cured me entirely of a long-standing case of kidney trouble and I shall always recommend them highly.

A Fierce Night Alarm

is the hoarse, startling cough of a child, suddenly attacked by croup. Often it aroused Lewis Chamblin of Manchester, O. (R. R. No. 2) for their four children were greatly subject to croup. "Sometimes in severe attacks," he wrote "we were afraid they would die, but since we proved what a certain remedy Dr. King's New Discovery is, we have no fear. We rely on it for croup and for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble." So do thousands of others. So may you. Asthma, Hay Fever, LaGrippe, Whooping Cough, Hemorrhages fly before it. 50c. and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Attacks School Principal

A severe attack on school principal, Chas. B. Allen, of Sylvania, Ga., is thus told by him. "For more than three years," he writes, "I suffered indescribable torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys. All remedies failed till I used Electric Bitters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Such results are common. Thousands bless them for curing stomach trouble, female complaints, kidney disorders, biliousness, and for new health and vigor. Try them. Only 50c at C. A. Wright & Son.

Domestic troubles should be bottled for home use only.

A SPECIAL MEDICINE FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

Many elderly people have found in Foley's Kidney Remedy a quick relief and permanent benefit from kidney and bladder ailments and from annoying urinary irregularities due to advancing years. Issac Regan, Farmer, Mo., says: "Foley's Kidney Remedy effected a complete cure in my case and I want others to know it.

"ISLE OF SPICE"

After record runs of 221 nights in Chicago, four months in Boston and fourteen weeks in New York at the Majestic Theatre, the 'Isle of Spice' described as a piquant musical mixture, has been meeting with great success on the road, and will be seen at the BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE, SATURDAY MARCH 18. The entire company, principals and chorus, numbering over thirty-five people, that were responsible for the phenominal success it attained in the cities mentioned, together with the scenery, costumes and sensational electrical effects, will be seen here. A perfectly drilled army of musical supernumeraries, youthful, pretty of face, graceful of movement and exquisitely costumed, fill the scenes continually, it is said. Lights and all the other accessories of brilliant stage surroundings dazzle the eye, while the music tickles the palate and the comedy pleasurably excites the risibilities.

Although there are nearly twenty musical numbers in the piece, it has been said that there are more popular song hits in the "Isle of Spice", than in in any other musical comedy or or comic opera ever written. Among them may be mentioned "The Goo Goo Man", "Peggy Brandy", "Silly Sailors", "You and I", "Ching Ling Fong", "Take Me Home" "How Can You Tell Till You Try", the latter rendered by a quartette of clever singers. The music is by Paul Schindler and Ben M. Jerome, while the books and lyrics were written by Allen Lowe and Geo. E. Stoddard.

The production is under the direction of B. C. Whitney, and has everywhere been received with an appreciation that at times has approached extraordinary enthusiasm.

GREENWALD-BEEBE

A very pretty informal wedding was that of Miss Helen Beebe and Fred Greenwald which was consumated on Saturday last.

The bride was dressed in white crepe de chene with Irish crochet lace and satin trimmings. She assisted in recieving the guests and at 6:30 met the bride groom.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Blair of Jackson, the ring service being used.

Directly after the ceremony they led the way to the dining room where a bountiful three course supper was served. Congratulations then followed. The color scheme being yellow and white was most artisticaly carried out, tulips and jonquils being used with festoons of smilax.

After the guests had departed the happy couple left for their new home on the farm, where they are at home to their many friends. The beautiful array of presents in cut glass, silver and linen attested to the high esteem in which they are held.

Among the first recruits to arrive in Adrian is Jack Ryan, formerly of the Chicago City league. He has a fine record in the Chicago league, where he has pitched for the last five years. His record for 1910 was fine, pitching 22 games and winning 19 of them.

With the statement that he "has grown old in the Cricket service" the Battle Creek Enquirer in a lengthy discussion of Curly Henderson's play last year, intimates the player did not give the club his best services and that he will probably not be back. If the Battle Creek management does not intend to use blond shortfielder—who, by the way, is still many years ahead of Father time—they should have no trouble disposing of him to some other club in the league, as there are several which do not share the same views of his future usefulness.

Saginaw has lost its case before the National association in the fight for Outfielder Rickert, that body deciding that New Albany had an earlier claim to him.

Eaton Rapids, Mich. is to be the training camp of the Lansing club this spring. The town boasts some mineral baths which Morrissey believes will prove beneficial to his players; it is close to Lansing, the hotel rates are good and there is a fair ball park, all that could be desired for training purposes. His players will report April 15.

William Newashe, the Indian "fence breaker" secured by Jackson from Bay City in the Evans deal, has made a reputation for himself in other lines of sport than baseball. Last fall he played tackle and fullback on the Carlisle football team, taking the latter position when Capt. Houser shifted to quarterback. He is a big fellow, 5 ft. 10 inches tall and weighs 198 pounds in good condition, though he is only 22 years old. He did some great hitting while with the Nebraska Indians last year, making a reputation for long distance clouts. In one game at the S & S. park in Detroit he slammed out three doubles and a home run in four times at bat, and the was against Stuart Gurney, the well known Pacific Coast league pitcher, who pitched a few grmes for the Roesink team last year.

Flint has signed Moore, a lefthand pitcher, 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighing 170 pounds. Last year he won 12 out of 17 games in a league composed of college players

"Skinny" Blackmoore, a player who claims that Kalamazoo wanted him, has secured a job in Niles through the efforts of the manager of the Niles ball team and will play twice a week with that team. He claims that he will earn as much this way as Kalamazoo offered him.

The Saginaw squad, which contained some sixty hopefuls and veterans, has been to 26 with reporting time still about a month away.

Dr. Wildanger, president of the Flint club, is out with a boost for Bo Slear in his umpiring aspirations. His comment is they "they would all keep moving with Bo on the job and he wouldn't stand for any monkeying.

According to reports from Kalamazoo the management figures on making a big affair of the opening, and will combine the flag raising with the opening, whidh falls on May 3. It is hoped with the double attraction to draw 3000 people and special tickets are being sold at a dollar each.

According to the Flint Journal, Manager Collins has so many good men signed up that he cares not a rap whether the holdout squad decides to sign up or not. One, however, Catcher Meek, has already sent in his contract.

Battle Creek is patting itself on the back, figuratively and collectively speaking, over its luck in securing Catcher Gibson who it is believed, from roports received, will be the star receiver of the league this year.

This Southern Michigan league is getting to be a dressy affair. Last year the Jackson club introduced an expensive road uniform that would cause envy from a bunch of big leaguers. This year Kalamazoo is going after a dressy combination and will buy a suit with the V neck and longitudinal lettering similar to that of the Chicago Cubs. The home suit will be white and the road Yale gray.

The Bay City club is also getting road suits with the same sort of lettering, but will break away from the gray of the other clubs and wear blue suits on the road, with white trimmings and stockings.

Kalamazoo believes it has an excellent chance to schedule a game with Detroit at Kalamazoo, April 9, the Sunday preceding the Detroit opening.

MARRIAGE BILL

Rep. Glasner presented a bill at the last session at Lansing providing that parties to a marriage contract must have a physicians certificate of health before they can secure a marriage license. The bill met with great favor and the discussion occupied nearly a whole afternoon it was made a special order and was set aside for the third reading.

Should this bill take effect it will go a long way toward stamping out the white plague that is being so persistently fought in every way possible.

That it is no wonder Elastic Cotton Felt has taken the place of all other forms of filling for mattresses and this is the concensus of opinion of all those who have spent a night on one of our elastic felt mattresses. They are more reasonably priced than you imagine and if you sleep on one for a single night, you will not be without it for twice the price we ask. When you consider how much of the time you sleep and how much sleep means to you, you will readily agree that our invitation to inspect these mattresses is well worth your consideration.

CARE OF THE TEETH

The first process of digestion is performed in the admixture of the food substance with a fluid secreted by the salivary glands during mastication.

If food is not well masticated the stomach cannot perform its work properly and the disasterous effects of malassimilation will soon appear.

Good teeth are essential to proper mastication, without them the general health cannot be maintained.

Especial care should be taken to remove every particle of food from around and between the teeth after eating by thoroughly rinsing the mouth with a suitable antiseptic solution and the free use of a tooth pick.

In all probability a tooth kept perfectly clean would never decay, and while it may be almost impossible to keep the teeth perfectly clean frequent washing and brushing with Dr. Janes' Mouth Wash and Tooth Paste will practically accomplish the desired result. The bleeding and spongy gums will disappear and the oral cavity will maintain a condition of health which is very essential to the resistance of disease. For Sale By C. A. Wright & Son.

CATARRH GOES

So Does Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Croup and Asthma.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below, whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing low spirited at times, raising of mucus, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

C. A. Wright & Son have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) which is a vaporized air, so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life, gives relief in two minutes, and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber pocket inhaler, is only $1.00. The inhaldr will last a lifetime, so that should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI, you can get it for 50 cents, Ask C. A. Wright & Son.
